Factories, roads shut by Arctic blast

By Associated Press

Frigid weather and a wind-whipped blizzard brought much of the East and Midwest to a near standstill Saturday, closing roads, factories, businesses and places of entertainment.

The freezing or subzero weather that hit much of the eastern half of the nation during the early morning hours followed a blizzard that dumped as much as 14 inches of snow on the Northeast.

At least 36 weather-related deaths have been recorded in eight states during the recent harsh weather.

State officials trying to conserve what natural gas is available in areas hit by the shortage have generally given essential services and homes priority access to natural gas. Some have said this could lead to even larger layoffs in coming days.

New gas shutoffs in New York state were expected to more than double the 100,000 layoffs recorded there.

The gas crisis prompted New York Gov. Hugh Carey Saturday to order that all schools in the state heated by natural gas close down for the coming week. He also suspended all laws requiring that apartment buildings be kept at temperatures above 65 degrees.

At least 20,000 workers were laid off in New Jersey on Friday, and residents were ordered to turn down the heat in their homes. Officials said that further restrictions on the use of natural gas could bring as many as 400,000 layoffs in coming days.

Bradford, Pa., was the coldest spot in the 48 contiguous states, with a temperature of 25 below zero in the early morning.

Sub-zero temperatures were common from the northern Plains to the Great Lakes, Ohio Valley and Appalachians, and single digit readings were recorded regularly along the Atlantic Coast as far south as Delaware.

The winter freeze held sway as far south as northern Florida and across the Gulf Coast to central Texas.

The National Weather Service said the "unmerciful" temperatures would be below normal for another month. The wind chill factor sent temperatures early Saturday to 80 below zero in Northern Illinois and 100 below in Minnesota.

The National Guard was out in Pennsylvania, Minnesota, Michigan and New York, trying to keep stalled traffic moving and rescuing motorists from stranded vehicles.

Carter, Cabinet study cold crisis

May ask 4-day factory week

of 17 states to give him assessments of their current energy problems.

Carter said 11 states are in "some degree of crisis" and six are having problems because of blizzard conditions.

The 11 states he listed as in the "crisis" category were Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and West Virginia.

Carter and White House aides did not list the six others affected by blizzard conditions.

Noting that 8,000 to 8,500 factories are closed and 500,000 persons out of work because of the energy shortage, Carter said he might go along with "a few amendments" offered by members of Congress to the emergency natural gas bill he sent to Congress earlier this week.

He initially said these amendments might include a requirement that industries go on a four-day work week, perhaps operating 10 hours a day to combat the energy shortages.

But Carter and his press secretary, Jody Powell, cautioned that this requirement would face serious legal problems because legislation limiting the number of hours in a work day would have to be changed, and there was a reluctance to do that.

Powell told reporters that Carter would like to see industries and other private employers implement the four-day plan voluntarily on the local level. No specific industries were mentioned.

Carter also said he might urge the businesses to shift from natural gas to using oil or coal during the gas shortage.

Powell said Carter's chief energy adviser, James Schlesinger, had reported that a "significant amount of fuel," particularly natural gas, has been located and could "have a significant impact" on alleviating the energy shortages.

The spokesman said there is an excess of natural gas in storage in the West, but it cannot legally be moved into interstate pipelines to needy areas elsewhere without the emergency legislation that Carter is seeking from Congress.

Powell said Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland reported that despite the weather problems in Florida, the impact on fruit and vegetable supplies will not mean a drastic shortage at supermarkets. The only threat of that would occur if consumers over-bought the available supplies, he said.

Carter presided at the start of the Cabinet meeting and called for coordination of all of government agencies that have some dealings with energy-related problems.

He said requests for federal disaster declarations for states other than New York, Pennsylvania and Florida were being processed. He called on the Cabinet to "be innovative in how you can help."

After making his brief remarks, Carter placed Schlesinger in charge of the meeting and then left.

Clever thieves use tax refunds in royal scam

By RICHARD D. LYONS
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — In Detroit, the Internal Revenue Service lost at least $250,000 to a band of 30 con artists.

In Pasadena, a high-living former IRS officer cheated his old agency for $656,340.

In Leavenworth, Kans., IRS returns were fraudulently manipulated for only $70,000, but then the con man committing the swindle was behind bars at the Federal Penitentiary there.

In these cases and thousands more, sophisticated thieves have found ways to manipulate the computerized method by which tax refunds are made, and thus they outwit the tax collector and swindle large amounts of money from the government.

The cases have been compiled in a report being drafted by the Senate Committee on Government Operations, headed by Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn.

Ribicoff said such cases demonstrate that crooks are "conning the Treasury out of millions of dollars of taxes legitimately paid by American taxpayers."

Other federal officials familiar with the refund scheme said it is widespread and expanding, and that different versions of the play extend to federal payments for welfare, disability, unemployment and educational benefits.

"The cause is sloppy computer work by the agencies dispensing the funds," said Philip Van Dam, the federal attorney for eastern Michigan, who prosecuted the Detroit case.

IRS officials said the exact extent of the refund schemes is not fully known.

Rudy Arena, head of an IRS group monitoring such frauds, said the service successfully detected 1,700 false refund returns amounting to over $3 million in illegitimate claims last year. He added that most of these schemes were being thwarted by increased vigilance and new auditing methods.

Other IRS officials are less sure. As one put it, "It's an imperfect system."

Included in the report of Ribicoff's subcommittee are statements from others knowledgeable about the IRS problem, who say that the false-return swindle is increasing rather than being solved.

Robert McMillan, an IRS intelligence division supervisor in Kansas City, composed an extensive memo last year detailing the swindle at Leavenworth.

After citing other cases elsewhere, which IRS officials said are still under investigation, so information about them could not be divulged, McMillan added, "The scheme appears to be spreading

Carter, Cabinet study cold crisis

May ask 4-day factory week

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter hurriedly called his Cabinet into an hour-long session Saturday to discuss the energy shortage and said he may ask industries to go on a four-day work week to conserve fuel.

He said he was ordering federal disaster relief for New York and Pennsylvania because of the extreme cold, snow and ice in portions of those states and said he will sign an emergency aid declaration for Florida on Monday because of crop losses there.

"I don't want anybody to be unduly alarmed," Carter told the Cabinet in opening its discussion of government efforts to deal with the energy problems caused by the unusually severe weather in much of the nation.

"I'd like the whole process to be done carefully, methodically and coordinated with Jack Watson," the presidential aide in charge of the White House team monitoring the energy situation, Carter said.

He added: "I'll be maintaining personal contact with the governors."

Carter also urged the governors of 17 states to give him assessments of their current energy problems.

Leader's mantle passing in culture older than memory

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

SANTA FE, N.M. — The old man lay motionless in bed No. 3 in the 10-bed men's ward at the government's Indian Hospital.

His round face was the color of cedar against the white pillowcase and deeply seamed. His eyes were closed. His expression seemed to reflect both his pain and his worry.

He said he was pleased, and surprised, by a visit from a friend and asked the friend to stay, to be near. But he preferred to keep silent and preserve his strength.

The man is Juan de Jesus Romero. He is the cacique, the religious leader, of the Taos Indians. In the cacique resides the ultimate responsibility for the tribe's spiritual life, which is to say its Indian-ness.

Only to the cacique is it given to possess the precious knowledge of ritual and myth, all of it, that has preserved the continuity of his people since their beginning.

To him falls the duty of telling his people of when to plant and when to reap, of charting the daily journey of the sun across the mountains, of predicting by its course the times of solstices, eclipses, solemn times.

And now this man of great learning and wisdom lay in a hospital bed and reasoned — there was no escaping the possibility — that the time might be near when those burdens would pass to another.

Two weeks ago he underwent, at age 97, abdominal surgery. On Jan. 19, he had recovered sufficiently to be released from intensive care, and last Thursday he felt strong enough to receive visitors.

At mid-afternoon, two arrived. Their faces, too, reflected the melancholy of the moment and the gravity.

One was Tony Reyna, a high tribal official. The other was Pete Concha, the cacique's 67-year-old first cousin.

Reyna gazed at the man in the bed. "He is the father of our family," he said. "This is a very sad time for us. We want him to live many years, many years."

The office of cacique is hereditary. Juan de Jesus Romero had become cacique on the death of his grandfather. That wrenching moment occurred while Juan was undergoing his puberty rites, 13 months of training in his kiva, the solemn, secret ceremonial room dug deep in the earth into which no person not of his tribe has descended. But Juan had been preparing for that moment from birth.

On Juan's death, by tribal custom, the awesome office

JUAN DE JESUS ROMERO. . . Taos Indian cacique

would pass to his cousin, Pete Concha.

For the past seven years, his cousin has been at Juan's side, studying, learning all the mysteries of the Taos people whose terraced pueblo north of here has been a tribal home for at least six centuries.

Pete Concha drew a chair to Juan's bedside. The venerable old man propped his head on the pillow. His voice was thin. Only a short time ago it had been strong, lusty, given to bursts of song. The two men conversed in Tiwa, the tongue of their people. Their talk seemed to one ignorant of the language, less a conversation than a gentle interrogation.

The old Indian asked a question, leaned back and shut his eyes to listen to the long response, asked another question. This continued for 45 minutes. Then the cacique accepted a fond hand grasp from each of the two and they left.

The irony was compelling: one recent, elaborate transition in Washington involving the mere temporal authority of a young nation; another, or at least the possibility of one, in utmost simplicity beside a hospital bed with a culture older than memory at stake.

To Juan's culture, the temporal is never apart from the spiritual.

Thus it was Juan, the cacique, who journeyed to Washington some years ago to plead, successfully, for the return to tribal control of Blue Lake, the place of the tribe's emergence high in the living mountain behind the pueblo — even as his grandfather had journeyed to Washington to plead the tribe's causes before President Lincoln.

Just last November, it was the cacique, Juan, who testified in court again with successful results, against those who would have defiled with electric power lines the ancient running ground near the pueblo where each autumn ceremonial races are held yielding tribal breath and strength to Father Sun so that he might draw new vigor from young bodies for his own endless journey.

In such ways has Juan de Jesus Romero, for four generations, served his people, holding them to the ways that have endured.

Even in the humble blue and white hospital gown, the dignity of this wise man, beloved of his tribe, showed. All day, he made neither complaint nor request.

"Don't worry, Juan," his friends said, departing, trying awkwardly to be cheerful. "You will be going home soon."

The old Indian opened his eyes and smiled.

Political death toll reaches 7

ANKARA, Turkey — Two teenagers were killed and scores wounded in political violence around the country Friday night, police said Saturday. The latest killings raised the death toll in the past week of student violence to seven. More than 30 persons have been killed in student warfare in Turkey since the school year began last fall.

Priest resigns from top panel

TORONTO — A noted Toronto Roman Catholic priest has resigned from Pope Paul VI's top panel of Bible experts with an angry protest against the Pope's new edict barring women from the priesthood. The Rev. David Stanley, a Jesuit and the only Canadian on the 20-member Pontifical Bible Commission, resigned in a letter to the Roman Curia. Father Stanley said Saturday that the Bible commission voted unanimously last April that there was nothing in the Bible to prevent ordaining women priests, and then voted 12-5 in favor of doing so. He said the Vatican ignored its own experts and the commission's work.

Leftists claim police killings

MADRID, Spain — A left-wing terrorist group named GRAPO asserted responsibility Saturday for the slaying of three Madrid policemen. It threatened more attacks on the government that has been shaken by a week of political violence. Police sources said 110 persons have been seized for questioning so far in the hunt for the killers. Premier Adolfo Suarez went on nationwide radio and television to appeal for support in the most serious crisis Spain has suffered since the right-wing dictator, Francisco Franco, died 14 months ago. Suarez, under fire from both the left and right, said Spain's first parliamentary election in 40 years will be held as scheduled before June.

One was Tony Reyna, a high tribal official. The other was Pete Concha, the cacique's 67-year-old first cousin.

Reyna gazed at the man in the bed. "He is the father of our family," he said. "This is a very sad time for us. We want him to live many years, many years."

The office of cacique is hereditary. Juan de Jesus Romero had become cacique on the death of his grandfather. That wrenching moment occurred while Juan was undergoing his puberty rites, 18 months of training in his kiva, the solemn, secret ceremonial room dug deep in the earth into which no person not of his tribe has descended. But Juan had been preparing for that moment from birth.

On Juan's death, by tribal custom, the awesome office

would pass to his cousin, Pete Concha.

For the past seven years, his cousin has been at Juan's side, studying, learning all the mysteries of the Taos people whose terraced pueblo north of here has been a tribal home for at least six centuries.

Pete Concha drew a chair to Juan's bedside. The venerable old man propped his head on the pillow. His voice was thin. Only a short time ago it had been strong, lusty, given to bursts of song. The two men conversed in Tiwa, the tongue of their people. Their talk seemed to one ignorant of the language, less a conversation than a gentle interrogation.

The old Indian asked a question, leaned back and shut his eyes to listen to the long response, asked another question. This continued for 45 minutes. Then the cacique accepted a fond hand grasp from each of the two and they left.

The irony was compelling: one recent, elaborate transition in Washington involving the mere temporal authority of a young nation; another, or at least the possibility of one, in utmost simplicity beside a hospital bed with a culture older than memory at stake.

To Juan's culture, the temporal is never apart from the spiritual.

Thus it was Juan, the cacique, who journeyed to Washington some years ago to plead, successfully, for the return to tribal control of Blue Lake, the place of the tribe's emergence high in the living mountain behind the pueblo — even as his grandfather had journeyed to Washington to plead the tribe's causes before President Lincoln.

Just last November, it was the cacique, Juan, who testified in court again with successful results, against those who would have defiled with electric power lines the ancient running ground near the pueblo where each autumn ceremonial races are held yielding tribal breath and strength to Father Sun so that he might draw new vigor from young bodies for his own endless journey.

In such ways has Juan de Jesus Romero, for four generations, served his people, holding them to the ways that have endured.

Even in the humble blue and white hospital gown, the dignity of this wise man, beloved of his tribe, showed. All day, he made neither complaint nor request.

"Don't worry, Juan," his friends said, departing, trying awkwardly to be cheerful. "You will be going home soon."

The old Indian opened his eyes and smiled.

More bombings rock U.K.

Combined News Services

LONDON — Twelve bomb explosions rocked central London early Saturday and 17 bombs went off in cities across Northern Ireland, one injuring two children in Belfast.

Political death toll reaches 7

ANKARA, Turkey — Two teenagers were killed and scores wounded in political violence around the country Friday night, police said Saturday. The latest killings raised the death toll in the past week of student violence to seven. More than 30 persons have been killed in student warfare in Turkey since the school year began last fall.

Priest resigns from top panel

TORONTO — A noted Toronto Roman Catholic priest has resigned from Pope Paul VI's top panel of Bible experts with an angry protest against the Pope's new edict barring women from the priesthood. The Rev. David Stanley, a Jesuit and the only Canadian on the 20-member Pontifical Bible Commission, resigned in a letter to the Roman Curia. Father Stanley said Saturday that the Bible commission voted unanimously last April that there was nothing in the Bible to prevent ordaining women priests, and then voted 12-5 in favor of doing so. He said the Vatican ignored its own experts and the commission's work.

Leftists claim police killings

MADRID, Spain — A left-wing terrorist group named GRAPO asserted responsibility Saturday for the slaying of three Madrid policemen. It threatened more attacks on the government that has been shaken by a week of political violence. Police sources said 110 persons have been seized for questioning so far in the hunt for the killers. Premier Adolfo Suarez went on nationwide radio and television to appeal for support in the most serious crisis Spain has suffered since the right-wing dictator, Francisco Franco, died 14 months ago. Suarez, under fire from both the left and right, said Spain's first parliamentary election in 40 years will be held as scheduled before June.

Troops seize liberal paper

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Troops and police on Saturday surrounded the plant of La Opinion, a liberal Buenos Aires newspaper, and seized the day's 30,000 copies, employees said. They reported there were no arrests or violence. The government gave no reason for the predawn action.

the IRA said the guerrilla organization was responsible for the London blasts.

No casualties were reported in the London explosions. The only casualties in Northern Ireland were two 3-year-old boys cut with glass that was shattered by a bomb placed in a Belfast shop. One boy was hospitalized with face and leg cuts and the other received only slight wounds.

Police said 30 bombs were placed in stores in at least five towns in Northern Ireland but they found and defused 13.

Israel blocks French visit

JERUSALEM — Israel has postponed a visit here by a French cabinet minister because of France's release of suspected Palestinian terrorist Abu Daoud. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said Saturday that Israel had asked the French government to postpone the visit of Commerce Minister Michel d'Ornano "because of the diplomatic situation."

Poles charge police brutality

WARSAW, Poland — Letters protesting alleged police brutality in putting down food price demonstrations last June have been sent to the Polish parliament, dissident sources reported Saturday. The letters request creation of a special commission to investigate brutality and the sweeping accusation of bystanders allegedly used in dealing with the rioting, sources said.

L.B. actress Mrs. America

A Long Beach actress and grandmother topped 50 contestants Saturday to win the Mrs. America Pageant in Las Vegas.

Ruth Johnson, 47, will be the first Mrs. America since the pageant was discontinued in 1960. She was named Mrs. California Jan. 7 and took top honors at a week-long pageant at the Las Vegas Hilton.

A Long Beach resident since 1963, she is married to a psychologist, Dr. James Bond Johnson. She has three children, ages 25 to 28, and one 4-month-old granddaughter.

She told the pageant judges that contemporary America gives women the freedom to express their own creativity outside of domestic chores, but that marriage gives women "a strong shoulder to lean on when we're tired, a sure head to lead us when we've lost our way and a loving hand to share our joy."

Mrs. Johnson, of 3830 Chestnut Ave., has appeared in Long Beach Civic Light Opera productions and performs frequently as a nurse on the daytime serial "Days of Our Lives."

The contestants, whose average age was 32, appeared before judges in evening gowns, swimsuits and sportswear. They were judged on neatness, organization, poise, personality and self-expression skills.

A veteran model, Mrs. Johnson said she applied for the Mrs. California title at the urging of her fashion show producer.

Democrats debate LNG, Sohio terminals today

By BOB SCHMIDT
From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — The California Democratic Party today will be asked to endorse construction of the Sohio Alaskan Oil terminal in Long Beach, a request which is expected to trigger a vigorous debate among the 1,500 delegates to the party's State Central Committee convention.

The request, in the form of a resolution sponsored by Southern California labor official William R. Robertson, also urges the party to support construction of liquefied natural gas (LNG) terminals on the California coast.

The resolution, among 17 introduced Saturday at the convention's opening day, will be voted on today. It was originally on the convention's consent calendar, meaning it would have received a routine vote of approval along with noncontroversial proposals.

But the resolution was taken off the consent calendar Saturday and is expected to be the subject of a debate today.

Environmentalists at the convention were studying the resolution, which also speaks of the need for public safety and environmental protection.

"We don't know anything about it," said David Shulman and Jonathan Hoff, two spokesmen for People Access, Coastal Environment (PACE), a conservation group.

"The statewide organization has taken no position either on the Sohio project or on the siting of an LNG terminal," Shulman said. "But I do know that our constituent group in Long Beach is opposed to the Sohio proposal and our group in San Pedro is opposed to the location of an LNG terminal in Los Angeles Harbor."

Robertson said he was aware that introduction of the resolution risked a divisive floor fight, but said: "We in labor are already in a confrontation with the environmental purists and the no-growth advocates. We're not trying to pick a spot; this issue has got to be argued publicly."

"Labor," he said, "has always been in the forefront of efforts to promote public safety and keep the environment clean. We believe it is technically feasible to have these projects without undue danger either to the safety or the environment."

The resolution warns of an impending natural gas shortage and says it will, "if not corrected by 1981, result in the loss of 1.6 million jobs directly dependent upon an adequate and uninterrupted supply of natural gas."

The shortage will force industry to switch to other fuels, "engendering even further serious air quality problems," it states.

It then recommends that "the California Democratic Party (express) its support for the importation of LNG into California from Alaska and Indonesia, including the construction of a 2,600-mile pipeline from Alaska through Canada to the United States," and that "the California Democratic Party encourages the development of LNG terminals on the California coastline."

Development of Alaskan oil fields aims to end U.S. dependence on foreign oil supplies, the resolution continues, and asks that the convention "vigorously support the development and transporting of needed oil supplies from the North Slope of Alaska" and that "the California Democratic Party endorse the Sohio Transportation system in Long Beach, which would result in 400 new construction jobs and in excess of 430 permanent openings, as well as income realized for the city of Long Beach."

Robertson's resolution has additional sections relating to safety requirements, including a suggestion that foreign ships be required to conform to U.S. safety standards.

Gov. Brown spoke to the delegates at luncheon and renewed his plea for citizens to involve themselves directly with people "on the other side of progress — the poor, the mentally ill, the aged."

He indicated that he would approve pending legislation increasing the staffing at state mental hospitals, proposals both he and his predecessor, Ronald Reagan, had vetoed in the past.

"Sometimes the Legislature is right," he said with a grin.

Guests at a convention dinner

Saturday night heard Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., warn that Americans "are being propagandized by our own Pentagon and by those with a vested interest in the arms industry on the need for ever-increasing expenditures for weapons systems of ever-increasing cost" and said that as a result of the arms race with Russia "we are not more secure but less secure."

President Carter, he said, "is determined" to turn around the "momentum for war and inertia for peace."

Earlier Saturday, John Tunney, ousted from his U.S. Senate seat at last November's election, opened the door for another run at new Republican Sen. S.I. Hayakawa by telling a story about his father, former heavyweight champion Gene Tunney, who asked his manager for a rematch with the only boxer ever to defeat him, Harry Greb.

"He fought Harry Greb again, and this time he won decisively," Tunney said. "So I'm here to ask you: Bring on the son of Harry Greb."

Afterwards, he explained to reporters that "I just wanted to let folks know I'd be around."

"At the right time, for the right office, yes, I'd run again," he said.

Delegates will elect statewide officers at the convention's concluding session today.

On Saturday, Renee Simon, Long Beach City councilwoman, and Ed Fontes, of Carson, were elected co-chairpersons of the 31st Senatorial District delegation at a caucus of Long Beach participants.

O'Neil loses in Demo vote

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Richard O'Neill of Santa Ana, longtime heavy contributor to Democratic candidates, was defeated Saturday by Bruce Corwin of West Los Angeles in his bid for re-election as southern chairperson of the California Democratic Party.

Corwin, a former appointee of Mayor Tom Bradley to the Los Angeles city fire commission, won the hotly contested election by 41 votes at the Democratic State Central Committee convention here.

Elections for statewide party officers are scheduled to be held today.

Bodies may stay frozen till spring

BRECKENRIDGE, Minn. (AP) — Some bodies of the 16 persons believed killed in a hotel fire may stay frozen and unrecovered until spring, a deputy state fire marshal said Saturday.

Rusty Tallman said searchers had not uncovered any bodies from the debris of the Stratford Hotel.

Four fire departments pumped more than a million gallons of water onto the three-story brick and wood building after it burst into flames shortly before 5 a.m. Friday.

"We're hampered by strong winds and subzero temperatures," Tallman said. "There is still fire in the basement and a lot of smoke. It's very hard to breathe down there."

He said rubble of the 67-year-old hotel would be taken out "shovel by shovel" as searchers cleared an area to begin looking for bodies.

"We don't anticipate we'll turn up too much today and it could be two or three days" or even spring, before all bodies are found, he said. Frozen debris is slowing search efforts.

Tallman said cause of the fire wasn't known: "We're too busy trying to recover bodies."

Authorities initially estimated that as many as 22 persons were killed in the fire, but the number was lowered to 16 on Saturday.

Mayor Hugh Mikkelson on Saturday issued a list of 17 persons thought to have been staying at the hotel, but relatives later said one of the men on the list was not at the hotel Friday night and was safe.

Statewide cut on water use is proposed

MARIN (AP)—Water officials here, seeking aid for their parched district, have urged statewide water rationing to decrease the flow of the precious liquid from Northern California to the southern part of the state.

"We would like to push a minimal water-rationing project throughout the state—except in agricultural areas—like the rationing program easily accomplished last year in our district," said Dr. William Filante, president of the Marin Municipal Water District, said Friday.

Water use in the Marin Water District was decreased by 26 per cent last year, when customers cut down on toilet flushing, took fewer and shorter showers and stopped using garden hoses and sprinklers.

Marin customers face a stiff new rationing law beginning Tuesday aimed at reducing the normal water usage of residents and non-residents by 57 per cent.

Filante said statewide rationing would allow Marin to get some of the Northern California water now being diverted to Southern California through the Central Valley Project canal. The water could be barged here from the Oakland Army Base, then piped to city reservoirs, he said.

Anaheim man, daughter slain, wife wounded

Anaheim police Saturday were investigating the early-morning slayings of an Anaheim billiard parlor owner and his daughter, and the attempted murder of his wife.

Dead are Audrey Lee Duncan, 48, who lived at 925 S. Velare St., and his 18-year-old daughter, Denise Marie.

Also shot but in fair condition at a local hospital was Nadine Duncan, 41.

Police said Duncan owned the Cue and Cushion Family Billiard Center, 10576 Magnolia Ave., Stanton.

They said Duncan left his business and drove to his home — located about three-quarters of a mile away — soon after 4 a.m. He walked to his porch and was shot several times.

Neighbors, alerted by the sound of gunfire, called police, who found Duncan's wife and daughter in the living room near the front door, both shot more than once.

Duncan was pronounced dead at the scene and the two women were taken to separate hospitals. Miss Duncan died a few hours later.

Anaheim Sgt. Gerald Stee said there were no suspects or known motives.

"No one is exactly sure of the sequence of events," he said.

Area 'shivers' in the upper 60s

Fair weather marked by scattered high clouds and haze in coastal valleys prevailed over Southern California Saturday as an expected warming trend failed to materialize.

High temperatures for most areas remained in the upper 60s, but forecasters said the mercury should creep into the low 70s on Sunday except for higher elevations, where highs will be in the 50s.

Local gusty winds also were predicted.

BORDENTOWN, N.J. (AP)—It was 3-year-old Kimberly Hall's first time in the driver's seat—and she did a real bang-up job.

The auto was warning up in a department store parking lot while the toddler's mother and aunt loaded the trunk with packages. That's when the child demolition expert went to work.

She shifted gears into reverse and her mother had to jump into the trunk to avoid getting hit. The car rammed one auto.

How can I join the International Banana Club? R.T., Long Beach.

You can become a lifetime member by mailing your $2 dues to the club at 2524 N. El Molino Ave., Altadena, Calif. 91001. You'll receive a membership card, a title and a yellow and black bumper sticker identifying the club and saying "just one of the bunch." Your card and sticker will bear the club's registered logo, a smiling unisex little banana with arms on hips and a peel partly unzipped. Ken Bannister, founder and top banana of the four-year-old organization, told Action Line "the principal objective of the club is to make people smile" since too many people concentrate on the negative. He said his club has "no rules, no regulations, no catch, no gimmicks and no obligations." Its directors' meetings "don't mean a thing" because the directors "just sit around and smile." Each of the 4,000-plus members throughout the world get their own title, such as right hand (hand in banana lingo means bunch), legal banana (held by an attorney) and godfather banana. Members can buy a variety of products, such as T-shirts, charms and lapel pins, bearing the club logo or pillows and golf putters shaped like bananas. Club members who send in pictures or anything to do with bananas can accumulate BMs (banana merits) to earn M.B. and Ph.D. degrees (banana merits and doctorates of bananistry). It takes 25 BMs to earn an M.B. degree. Bannister, who is vice president of Larson Enterprises Inc., a photography lighting equipment manufacturer in Fountain Valley, said the club is self-supporting from dues and he doesn't "care if he makes money from it or not."

I'm 79 years old and I'm considering selling my house for $45,000 and moving into a retirement home. I paid $4,000 for my house in 1938 and have put several thousand dollars into it. I understand there would be no taxes due on $35,000 of the profit. Is it necessary for me to itemize the improvements? Should I keep all the records of these expenditures? L.E., Long Beach.

An individual over the age of 65 who has lived in his house for at least five years out of the eight years preceding the date he sells his home does not have to pay any capital gain income tax if the adjusted selling price is less than $35,000, and he does not have to reinvest the money in another house. If the house sells for more than $35,000, part of the profit would be taxable, but it is not simply the portion over $35,000. To determine the taxable amount, the Internal Revenue Service uses a highly complicated formula we find impossible to explain in simple, general terms. If you take your figures to the IRS office at 16941 Keegan Ave., Carson, the staff there should be able to estimate how much tax you'll have to pay if you sell your house. You should take these figures: the price you paid for the house, the cost of your improvements, the estimated selling price and your expected costs of the sale. In computing the taxable portion, the IRS looks at the base price, which usually is the amount the person originally paid for the house plus improvements. If a person is a widow or widower or acquired the property through inheritance, however, the base price may be computed differently. From the selling price, you can deduct the realtor's commission, escrow fees and other approved costs of the sale. You need not itemize the improvements on your tax return, but you must be able to document them if audited and you should save all the receipts and canceled checks relating to these expenses.

Door jam

We bought a townhouse from Long Beach Construction Co., 10945 E. South St., Cerritos, in November 1975. With it came a one-year guarantee. We've had problems with our front door since we moved in, and in September, a strip broke off the bottom. We've been trying without success since then to get a replacement door. Lynn Avery, an official with the Long Beach Construction Co., told me in early December that he'd just talked to the door manufacturer and the door would be replaced within a few days. They could have hand-carved a door by now. Can Action Line help? J.K.W., Cerritos.

You should have your new door soon. We phoned Avery for you and he told us he would replace your door without charge within the week. He said he didn't know what caused the bottom inch and a half to break off, and that it "looks like it was cut off with a saw." He said he didn't know who was at fault. "It sure isn't our fault," he said. However, since the door manufacturer refuses to take the responsibility for the door, he said his firm would do so.

REACTION

I was disturbed at the implications of your reply to the inquiry about reading training for an adult. The suggestion of enrolling in a mentally educable program strongly implies that a person who has not learned to read in public school has a mental deficiency. My experience as a reading specialist and counselor has been that most poor-reading adults have a perceptual problem and a poor self image. Until the poor reader learns to recognize both problems and learns how to cope with them, little improvement is realized. The usual learning-to-read techniques and methods often frustrates the student further. The Inner-city Ministries Reading Center, 325 E. Seventh St., offers specialized training for students of all ages who have been unable to learn by the regular school program. Fees are based on ability to pay. M.V., Long Beach.

They said Duncan left his business and drove to his home — located about three-quarters of a mile away — soon after 4 a.m. He walked to his porch and was shot several times.

Neighbors, alerted by the sound of gunfire, called police, who found Duncan's wife and daughter in the living room near the front door, both shot more than once.

Duncan was pronounced dead at the scene and the two women were taken to separate hospitals. Miss Duncan died a few hours later.

Anaheim Sgt. Gerald Stee said there were no suspects or known motives.

"No one is exactly sure of the sequence of events," he said.

Area 'shivers' in the upper 60s

Fair weather marked by scattered high clouds and haze in coastal valleys prevailed over Southern California Saturday as an expected warming trend failed to materialize.

High temperatures for most areas remained in the upper 60s, but forecasters said the mercury should creep into the low 70s on Sunday except for higher elevations, where highs will be in the 50s.

Local gusty winds also were predicted.

Bodies may stay frozen till spring

BRECKENRIDGE, Minn. (AP) — Some bodies of the 16 persons believed killed in a hotel fire may stay frozen and unrecovered until spring, a deputy state fire marshal said Saturday.

Rusty Tallman said searchers had not uncovered any bodies from the debris of the Stratford Hotel.

Four fire departments pumped more than a million gallons of water onto the three-story brick and wood building after it burst into flames shortly before 5 a.m. Friday.

"We're hampered by strong winds and subzero temperatures," Tallman said. "There is still fire in the basement and a lot of smoke. It's very hard to breathe down there."

He said rubble of the 67-year-old hotel would be taken out "shovel by shovel" as searchers cleared an area to begin looking for bodies.

"We don't anticipate we'll turn up too much today and it could be two or three days" or even spring before all bodies are found, he said. Frozen debris is slowing search efforts.

Tallman said cause of the fire wasn't known: "We're too busy trying to recover bodies."

Authorities initially estimated that as many as 22 persons were killed in the fire, but the number was lowered to 16 on Saturday.

Mayor Hugh Mikkelsen on Saturday issued a list of 17 persons thought to have been staying at the hotel, but relatives later said one of the men on the list was not at the hotel Friday night and was safe.

Burro band destroyed

SANTA BARBARA (AP) — The small band of burros on lonely San Miguel Island is gone — shot to death under government orders.

The National Park Service, in charge of the tiny Navy-owned island 45 miles offshore in the California Channel, ordered the 30 escaped domestic burros shot in December without public announcement.

An abalone diver, trespassing on the island early this week, observed that a number of animals had been shot. Government officials confirmed the shooting Friday.

William Ehorn, superintendent of the National Monument Group in the Channel Islands, said officials decided to eliminate the animals because they were partly diseased and were destroying rare native plants on the island.

He said the shooting was done scientifically with a veterinarian on hand.

Ehorn said some of the animals had developed extremely long hooves and showed signs of a virus. Long hooves, which sometimes curl up in front of the foot, often result from foundering — an ailment caused by a severe imbalance in an animal's diet.

"The burros were introduced in the early 1950s by a movie company, to the best of my knowledge," Ehorn said, "and they have been allowed to roam free on the island, destroying the native vegetation and the unique archeological resources and the irreplaceable sand castings of an ancient forest."

Ehorn said the island soon will be opened to the public on a limited basis, and that it is the policy of the National Park Service to preserve the native flora and fauna and archeological resources, and to remove foreign plants or animals.

Ehorn said an environmental assessment showed that trapping the burros would be very costly and possibly damage the island, so officials decided trapping and removing the burros was not feasible.

"The easiest and least costly method to eliminate the burros was through a shooting program," Ehorn said.

The Santa Barbara Humane Society expressed displeasure over the killing, and stated it would have been willing to aid in capture and placement of the animals.

How can I join the International Banana Club? K.T., Long Beach.

You can become a lifetime member by mailing your $2 dues to the club at 2524 N. El Molino Ave., Altadena, Calif. 91001. You'll receive a membership card, a title and a yellow and black bumper sticker identifying the club and saying "just one of the bunch." Your card and sticker will bear the club's registered logo, a smiling unisex little banana with arms on hips and peel partly unzipped. Ken Bannister, founder and top banana of the four-year-old organization, told Action Line "the principal objective of the club is to make people smile" since too many people concentrate on the negative. He said his club has "no rules, no regulations, no catch, no gimmicks and no obligations." Its directors' meetings "don't mean a thing" because the directors "just sit around and smile." Each of the 4,000-plus members throughout the world get their own title, such as right hand (hand in banana lingo means bunch), legal banana (held by an attorney) and godfather banana. Members can buy a variety of products, such as T-shirts, charms and lapel pins, bearing the club logo or pillows and golf putters shaped like bananas. Club members who send in pictures or anything to do with bananas can accumulate BMs (banana merits) to earn M.B. and Ph.B. degrees (masters and doctorates of bananistry). It takes 25 BMs to earn an M.B. degree. Bannister, who is vice president of Larson Enterprises Inc., a photography lighting equipment manufacturer in Fountain Valley, said the club is self-supporting from dues and he doesn't "care if he makes money from it or not."

I'm 79 years old and I'm considering selling my house for $45,000 and moving into a retirement home. I paid $4,000 for my house in 1938 and have put several thousand dollars into it. I understand there would be no taxes due on $35,000 of the profit. Is it necessary for me to itemize the improvements? Should I keep all the records of these expenditures? L.E., Long Beach.

An individual over the age of 65 who has lived in his house for at least five years out of the eight years preceding the date he sells his home does not have to pay any capital gain income tax if the adjusted selling price is less than $35,000, and he does not have to reinvest the money in another house. If the house sells for more than $35,000, part of the profit would be taxable, but it is not simply the portion over $35,000. To determine the taxable amount, the Internal Revenue Service uses a highly complicated formula we find impossible to explain in simple, general terms. If you take your figures to the IRS office at 16941 Keegan Ave., Carson, the staff there should be able to estimate how much tax you'll have to pay if you sell your house. You should take these figures: the price you paid for the house, the cost of your improvements, the estimated selling price and your expected costs of the sale. In computing the taxable portion, the IRS looks at the base price, which usually is the amount the person originally paid for the house plus improvements. If a person is a widow or widower or acquired the property through inheritance, however, the base price may be computed differently. From the selling price, you can deduct the realtor's commission, escrow fees and other approved costs of the sale. You need not itemize the improvements on your tax return, but you must be able to document them if audited and you should save all the receipts and canceled checks relating to these expenses.

Door jam

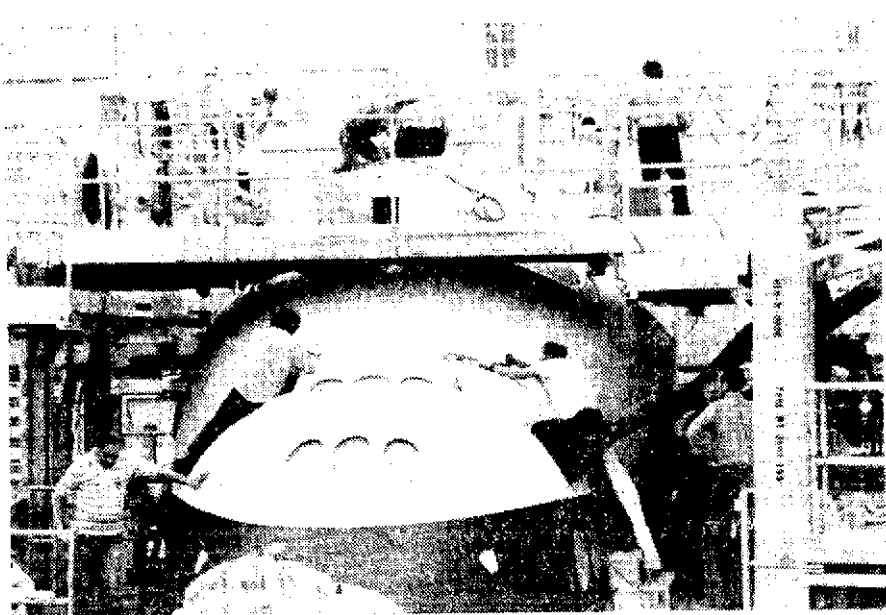

We bought a townhouse from Long Beach Construction Co., 10945 E. South St., Cerritos, in November 1975. With it came a one-year guarantee. We've had problems with our front door since we moved in, and in September, a strip broke off the bottom. We've been trying without success since then to get a replacement door. Lynn Avery, an official with the Long Beach Construction Co., told me in early December that he'd just talked to the door manufacturer and the door would be replaced within a few days. They could have hand-carved a door by now. Can Action Line help? J.K.W., Cerritos.

You should have your new door soon. We phoned Avery for you and he told us he would replace your door without charge within the week. He said he didn't know what caused the bottom inch and a half to break off, and that it "looks like it was cut off with a saw." He said he didn't know who was at fault. "It sure isn't our fault," he said. However, since the door manufacturer refuses to take the responsibility for the door, he said his firm would do so.

REACTION

I was disturbed at the implications of your reply to the inquiry about reading training for an adult. The suggestion of enrollment in a mentally educable program strongly implies that a person who has not learned to read in public school has a mental deficiency. My experience as a reading specialist and counselor has been that most poor-reading adults have a perceptual problem and a poor self image. Until the poor reader learns to recognize both problems and learns how to cope with them, little improvement is realized. The usual learning-to-read techniques and methods often frustrate the student further. The Inner-city Ministries Reading Center, 525 E. Seventh St., offers specialized training for students of all ages who have been unable to learn by the regular school program. Fees are based on ability to pay. M.V., Long Beach.

Space shuttle craft will move to desert test site on Monday

By RICHARD SALTUS
AP Science Writer

PALMDALE — It's half rocket and half airplane, but at this point, it's 110 tons of dead weight. It's the first space shuttle orbiter, ready to be towed from its hangar Monday through two desert cities to a dry lake runway for flight testing.

The delta-winged cargo carrier that will zoom back and forth from earth to orbit in a few years was hooked to a tractor which will pull it—at 5 to 10 miles an hour—to Edwards Air Force Base, 36 miles away.

Escorted by a convoy of security and patrol cars, the orbiter, with its 53-foot-high vertical tail fin, probably will attract hundreds of residents of Palmdale and Lancaster as it creeps along paved roads. Set to start rolling at sunrise, the convoy should reach its temporary home at Edwards' Dryden Flight Research Center by late afternoon, said officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

THE REUSABLE orbiter craft is designed to be fired into space by disposable rockets, carry out scientific work in orbit, then soar through the atmosphere without power and land like a glider.

Testing will begin Feb. 18. At first, the 122-foot-long craft will be attached, piloted, atop a Boeing 747 jumbo jet. In this piggyback setup, the two mated aircraft will roll along the airstrip in taxi tests, then go aloft for "captive" flight trials.

The first manned flight, in which the orbiter will be released from the carrier plane to swoop down for a landing, is set for July 22.

Monday's big moving job was contracted to a Los Angeles firm that in the past has hauled such loads as antipollution units for a copper mine in Arizona and massive fuel tanks for the Saturn rocket used in many U.S. launches. Both of those loads outweighed the shuttle.

Lee Bisson of Contractors Cargo said he believed the orbiter move would be the "most expensive load ever carried in the history of trucking." Value of the craft alone is hard to determine, but one figure NASA has given is $500 million.

THE TRACTOR and several dollies on which the craft rides have a total of 90 wheels to carry the weight. The transportation equipment has previously gone over the route twice — once to make sure the orbiter's 78-foot wingspan would clear all obstacles, and once with a simulated 110-ton load to check for weak spots in the road.

Security is to be supplied by Rockwell International, main contractor on the shuttle, and by various law enforcement agencies.

The first tests with the unmanned orbiter atop the jumbo jet are "just to see how the 747 handles — with that big glob on top," said Donald K. Slayton, veteran NASA astronaut who is in charge of the approach and landing tests.

Most of the tests will be run with a cone placed over the giant rocket nozzles that extend from the tail of the fuselage. The shield was designed, said Slayton, because of predictions that without it, the craft would buffet in the wind and make the jumbo jet unstable.

Crews for the tests have been training on jet airplanes modified to behave the way the gliding orbiter will act. Only one of the pilots — Fred Haise, 42 — has flown in space.

100,000-gallon oil spill Storm hinders barge clean-up operation

BUZZARDS BAY, Mass. (AP)— Nearly 100,000 gallons of oil leaked from a barge that ran aground in Buzzards Bay, the Coast Guard said Saturday night. Part of the oil washed up on the beach at Wings Neck in Pocasset.

The Coast Guard feared earlier that up to one-half million gallons of oil had spilled from the barge, but it revised the estimate after taking soundings of the vessel's hull.

The oil was found on the beach as commercial crews pumped what remained of the 31 million gallons of home heating oil from the barge to an empty barge secured alongside. A spokesman said pumping was expected to be completed today.

Both barges were moved to the Massachusetts Maritime Academy and tied up Saturday, and an oil boom was placed around them to contain any further leaking oil. Coast Guard spokesman Richard Griggs said.

The temperature was in the teens, and the wind blew at more than 50 mph during the clean-up operation Saturday.

Two Coast Guard cutters were used to smash through one-foot-thick ice to try to keep the ocean open. The Army Corps of Engineers ordered the Cape Cod Canal closed to shipping Saturday for the first time since 1972 because the tide was carrying ice from the area of the barge into the shipping passage.

Griggs said the crew of the tug towing the barge from Providence, R.I., to Portland, Maine, reported that the barge was leaking oil when it went aground.

The 3,865-ton Bouchard No. 65, ran aground about 6 p.m. Friday near Cleveland Ledge Light, about 10 miles off shore.

The owner of the barge, Bouchard Transportation of Hicksville, N.Y., hired two private contractors to aid clean-up efforts.

Environmentalists say spills of the lightweight No. 2 heating oil potentially are more dangerous to the sea environment than the heavy industrial fuel oil spilled when the tanker Argo Merchant split in two off Nantucket Island last month.

Lighter oil mixes more easily with water and is churned to the bottom. It can have a devastating effect on shellfish and sea life.

A state oceanographer said a similar spill of No. 2 in the same area nearly seven years ago permanently damaged shellfish beds.

The spill from the Argo Merchant eventually drifted out to sea, but the Bouchard barge was an area no wider than four miles from shore to shore, and oil leaking from it will go ashore or to the bottom.

The barge is the fourth oil vessel to run into trouble in New England waters this winter. The first, the Argo Merchant, contained 7.6 million gallons of oil.

The Panamanian-registered tanker Grand Zenith disappeared off the New England coast with a crew of 38 and a cargo of 8 million gallons of oil.

The U.S.-registered coastal tanker broke apart in heavy seas of Cape Ann. One man was killed.

Some swam through blizzard

Associated Press
It was cold out Saturday—and most people in the Midwest and East decided against leaving their homes. But Americans are a hearty breed.

Despite subzero readings at the Lake Placid, N.Y., ski resort, a couple of dozen sports enthusiasts turned out to play golf, softball and tennis—and, yes, even go swimming—during the Chamber of Commerce's July in January festivities.

A nine-hole golf course was set up on the ice of Mirror Lake, as was a tennis court.

Apparently the Friday night snow did scare off the less devoted. Normally the event gets a fairly large turnout.

And, of course, some had to leave their homes to attend to business.

In blizzard-stricken Charleston, W.Va., Chuck London, a reporter for the Charleston Daily Mail, told of a knock at his door during the height of a storm Friday night.

There stood a shivering little girl who asked his wife, "Ma'am, would you like to buy some Girl Scout cookies?"

The cold presented a major problem for a group of businessmen in Baltimore. Area florists are having a tough time keeping their greenhouses warm enough to protect their flowers and plants.

"This weekend's frigid weather could wipe out nearly every florist in the Baltimore area. Many of them are sleeping in their greenhouses so they can be close to the problem," said Thomas Shaner, executive director of the Allied Florists Association of Greater Baltimore.

He said strong winds blow the heat out of the greenhouses, killing the delicate flowers and plants.

Amateur radio operators in Indiana called off their participation in an annual emergency preparedness test and turned their attention to the real thing instead.

The blizzard that hit the Northeast left freezing and subzero temperatures in its wake, and 100 ham operators set up an emergency communications center in Fort Wayne, Ind. They also manned a dozen four-wheel-drive Scouts provided by the International Harvester Co. as they struck out to reach stranded rural residents in need of help.

Most of the calls were from persons who had run out of fuel oil.

In New York City the weather brought a group of teen-agers out to play baseball.

The New York Daily News had a capacity crowd of 3,000 college and high school ballplayers at its 12th annual baseball clinic at a high school in the Bronx.

Representatives of the New York Yankees and Mets gave the dedicated baseball players pointers on hitting, throwing, base running and fielding.

Ford to do TV documentaries

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Ford, out of office for less than two weeks, has signed an agreement with the National Broadcasting Co. to appear in a number of NBC News television programs relating to the presidency, the network said Saturday.

Herbert S. Schlosser, NBC president, said the programs would include major NBC News documentaries, as well as other shows which would involve commentary by Ford.

The network declined to discuss Ford's fee for the appearances.

"The opportunity for television to present living history through the eyes of a man who has been president of the United States during some of the most challenging days our nation has experienced is indeed a rare one," Schlosser said.

"We are honored that President Ford has given us this unique opportunity. We look forward to working closely with him in developing a group of programs that we believe will be valuable to the American public."

The first major special is tentatively scheduled for 1978, the network said, with details on future programs involving Ford to be announced later.

Norman Brokaw, a vice president of the William Morris Agency in Beverly Hills who said he represents the Ford family, said he had concluded the deal with NBC Saturday morning. He declined to say how much Ford will be paid and how long the contract runs.

Brokaw also alluded to a "deal" in the "near future" for the memoirs of Ford and his wife.

Ford also was named Saturday as chairman of the board of the Academy for Educational Development. Academy President Alvin C. Eurich said the New York-based organization would open an office in Los Angeles, where Ford will work.

Eurich declined to disclose the salary, saying, "That is a private matter."

The academy, which has an annual income of about $16 million, is a non-profit corporation which assists colleges, universities and state, local and foreign governments in solving problems in education, communications and international affairs.

Ford will take over March 1 from Robert O. Anderson, head of Atlantic Richfield Co. of Los Angeles, who recently bought the London Observer.

Nixon legal fund gets new trustee

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP)—A nursing home owner has assumed trusteeship of the President Nixon Justice Fund, replacing Rabbi Baruch Korff, who is stepping down largely because of ill health.

Lloyd Johnson, 54, said this weekend he would be a custodian rather than a fund-raiser in accordance with Nixon's wishes.

Johnson met for 70 minutes in November with the former president and said Nixon told him he was confident he "would be able to take up and do for himself what others had been doing for him."

"He (Nixon) said he never believed that things should be done for a person that a person can do for himself," said Johnson.

Johnson, a longtime Republican who worked for unsuccessful Michigan GOP gubernatorial candidate Paul Bagwell in 1958 and 1960, said he first met Nixon nine years ago.

During Watergate, Johnson said he became angry at the American people.

"I could never quite convince myself that President Nixon had done so many bad things," said Johnson. "I felt the great things he did far exceeded those things he was accused of doing."

Korff started the fund in 1973. The money now pays lawyers to help Nixon regain from the government some of the 42 million personal papers he accumulated while president.

Johnson operates nursing homes in Novi and his hometown of Ann Arbor.

"The opportunity for television to present living history through the eyes of a man who has been president of the United States during some of the most challenging days our nation has experienced is indeed a rare one," Schlosser said.

"We are honored that President Ford has given us this unique opportunity. We look forward to working closely with him in developing a group of programs that we believe will be valuable to the American public."

The first major special is tentatively scheduled for 1978, the network said, with details on future programs involving Ford to be announced later.

Norman Brokaw, a vice president of the William Morris Agency in Beverly Hills who said he represents the Ford family, said he had concluded the deal with NBC Saturday morning. He declined to say how much Ford will be paid and how long the contract runs.

Brokaw also alluded to a "deal" in the "near future" for the memoirs of Ford and his wife.

Ford also was named Saturday as chairman of the board of the Academy for Educational Development. Academy President Alvin C. Eurich said the New York-based organization would open an office in Los Angeles, where Ford will work.

Eurich declined to disclose the salary, saying, "That is a private matter."

The academy, which has an annual income of about $16 million, is a non-profit corporation which assists colleges, universities and state, local and foreign governments in solving problems in education, communications and international affairs.

Ford will take over March 1 from Robert O. Anderson, head of Atlantic Richfield Co. of Los Angeles, who recently bought the London Observer.

Nixon legal fund gets new trustee

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A nursing home owner has assumed trusteeship of the President Nixon Justice Fund, replacing Rabbi Baruch Korff, who is stepping down largely because of ill health.

Lloyd Johnson, 54, said this weekend he would be a custodian rather than a fund-raiser in accordance with Nixon's wishes.

Johnson met for 70 minutes in November with the former president and said Nixon told him he was confident he "would be able to take up and do for himself what others had been doing for him."

"He (Nixon) said he never believed that things should be done for a person that a person can do for himself," said Johnson.

Johnson, a longtime Republican who worked for unsuccessful Michigan GOP gubernatorial candidate Paul Bagwell in 1958 and 1960, said he first met Nixon nine years ago.

During Watergate, Johnson said he became angry at the American people.

France for arms-trade cut Appeal 'warmly received,' Mondale reports

By JAMES GERSTENZANG
PARIS (AP) — Vice President Walter F. Mondale, winding up the European leg of his international tour, said French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing gave "a warm response" Saturday to a call for talks on reducing the world armaments trade.

The vice president, in what was, from a diplomatic standpoint, probably the toughest stop on his 10-day trip, spent three hours at the Elysee Palace with Giscard d'Estaing. As with other European leaders, he reviewed international economics, the upcoming summit talks, and the Carter administration's goal of reducing nuclear proliferation.

Mondale left Paris for Japan with a stopover in Reykjavic, Iceland, where he had a 45-minute conversation with Icelandic Premier Geir Halgrimsson.

It was primarily a courtesy call following the important conference with Giscard d'Estaing.

A spokesman for the French president said the atmosphere of the talks was not only cordial but one of confidence. He said Mondale had a wide knowledge of issues, and the feeling at the Elysee Palace was that the visit advanced the dialogue between France and the United States.

Mondale told a news conference before leaving Paris that his discussion of arms sales with Giscard d'Estaing did not get into details of limiting the sales.

Carter and Mondale have frequently criticized the level of U.S. arms sales around the world. Since the United States is the largest international arms merchant, Mondale said, he told the French president that the Carter administration recognized it must take the lead in cutting back.

"Then we would hope to commence discussions with other arms producers" about taking similar steps, he said, noting that "we received a warm response" to this proposal from the French leader.

He said "strong representations" in this field would also be made to the Soviet Union, another leading arms merchant. "There is a general consensus that progress is needed in this area and now the talks can begin," he said.

There have been strains recently in U.S.-French relations, most notably stemming from the independent course France has taken in the field of nuclear technology sales and its release of suspected Arab terrorist Abu Daoud, detained briefly in Paris earlier this month.

But Mondale said France was now making "a helpful contribution to the serious problem of controlling nuclear fuel of weapons-grade quality," although it is in the midst of a sale of a nuclear reprocessing plant to Pakistan.

Mondale refused to reveal what he said specifically to Giscard d'Estaing about the Daoud affair. Carter, one day after Daoud was released, said he was "deeply disturbed" by the French action. Daoud is suspected of masterminding the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the Munich Olympics in 1972.

Howe cleared in travel case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department officials said Saturday that an investigation of travel records of former Rep. Allan T. Howe, D-Utah, has turned up nothing improper.

Howe was defeated for re-election in November after being convicted in Salt Lake City of trying to buy sex.

Earlier this month a federal grand jury subpoenaed some of Howe's travel records.

African trip set for Young

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter announced Saturday that he is sending Andrew Young, his new ambassador to the United Nations, on a 10-day trip to Africa beginning Tuesday.

Young, who is being sworn in today, will go to Tanzania and Nigeria.

His travels make him the third high official to visit abroad as part of the new administration's move to introduce itself to American allies around the world.

Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance is leaving for a six-nation trip to the Middle East on Feb. 14. Vice President Walter F. Mondale is on a visit to five European nations and Japan.

After a hectic first week in office, Carter's pace slowed down this weekend as the President and most of his staff got a chance to sleep late and relax a bit on Saturday and today.

Carter's only business appointment was a meeting on foreign policy with Young. Vance and national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski.

ASIDE from churchgoing, Carter's only scheduled activity today was the afternoon swearing-in ceremony for Young in the White House state dining room.

Young, a Democratic congressman from Georgia and a leader of the civil rights movement of the 1960s, is the last administration official of Cabinet rank to be sworn in. He was confirmed by the Senate Wednesday.

In the week ahead, Carter has scheduled the first of a series of "fire-side chats" to the nation. It is scheduled for 7 p.m. PST Wednesday and will deal with foreign and domestic issues. The talk is scheduled for about 20 minutes.

Five days later, on Feb. 7, Carter will hold his first White House presidential news conference. He has promised to hold at least two news conferences a month while he is in office. His last press conference was Jan. 8.

Meanwhile, the White House announced the following:

—Carter declared Colorado eligible for emergency federal aid because of drought.

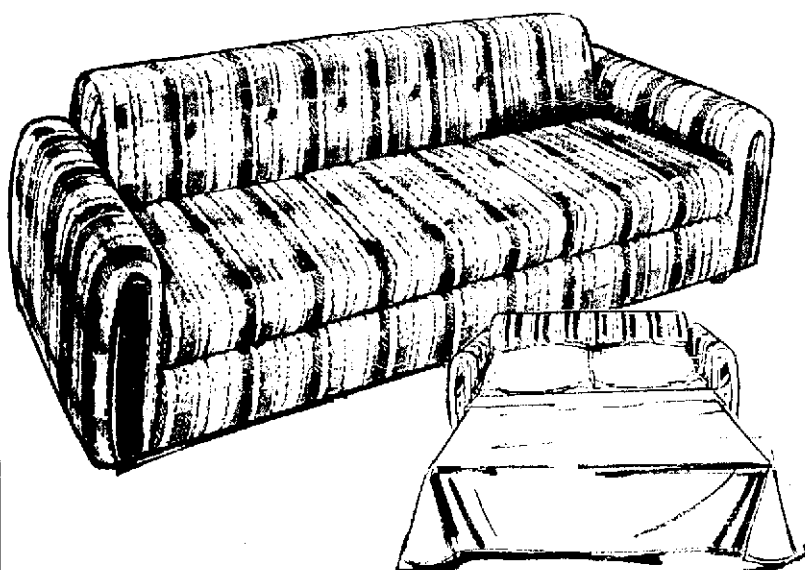

—Joe Aragon, 35-year-old former Los Angeles attorney and presidential assistant to the President, is being appointed acting director of the Community Services Administration with orders from Carter to make a detailed report in 10 days on its operations.

Carter said that while the purpose of the CSA, which has a fiscal 1977 appropriation of $511 million and employs 1,059 people, was "to provide help and technical assistance to worthwhile community projects, the agency has become sluggish and politicized in recent years."

Truckers plan 'slowdown' over 55 mph limit

By BEN A. FRANKLIN
New York Times Service

ROANOKE, Va. — Despite three years of federal and state efforts to slow highway traffic to the 55-mile-an-hour limit imposed by Congress in 1974, the campaign has not only failed but has also inspired a type of Prohibition-era conspiracy to flout the law.

Starting at midnight Sunday, the first concerted campaign to repeal the 55-mile-an-hour limit and raise it to at least 65 is to begin with a trucker's slowdown to 40 miles an hour. Monday there may be scattered traffic jams on the interstate highway system.

On one stretch of the four-lane interstate highway, red and blue route markers proclaiming "I-64" seem to be read by almost all drivers as "I go 64."

At 64 miles an hour, it is widely believed that many state troopers tend to overlook the 9-mile-an-hour excess in speed.

According to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, prosecutors and judges in some states and counties — the association will not say which ones — have been declining to bring to trial cases in which the offender does not exceed the old speed limit. In most states, that was 65 miles an hour.

At the association's headquarters, where a three-year, federally funded study of the enforcement of the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit is about half finished, an official confirmed that a confidential state-by-state survey found a general policy of discretionary arrests by highway patrol officers of drivers who exceeded the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit by 5 miles an hour, and the issuance of summonses only "at speeds in excess of 10 miles an hour over the posted limit." There are some stricter exceptions, but they are generally not significant.

"IN SOME STATES, our survey shows that fines are as low as $5 for conviction of any speed less than the old posted limit, or the law says that no traffic violator points shall be issued at any speed less than the old speed, or it may say that auto insurance rates shall not be affected by such convictions," the association official said. "Some of the negative influences on enforcement are legislative or political. In California, the largest state police department in the country is forbidden to use radar and must use marked cars."

In any event, the penalty for driving 64 miles an hour, should a motorist choose to mail in the required collateral and court costs rather than face trial, is often no more than $25 to $30. But the cost begins to rise sharply if the driver is guilty of going more than 65 miles an hour.

The risk-taking mood of the majority of motorists was evident in observations by the New York Times in recent months, in which a borrowed police radar was used on three interstate highways in Virginia and Maryland: I-64, I-81 and I-95. The average speed of 70 vehicles clocked, about half of them trucks, was 64 miles an hour.

With citizens' band radio and radar detectors, some drivers, including truckers, were willing to go 70 miles an hour and over if the highway "was clean and green," meaning free of Smokey Bear, a CB term for state troopers.

THE PARALLEL to the Prohibition era, with its good-humored contempt for the law even among otherwise law-abiding citizens, is also evident in a gathering public campaign to repeal the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit.

Thousands of truckers, mostly independent owner-drivers, have been asked by the Independent Truckers Association to cruise on interstate highways on Monday at no more than 40 miles an hour.

The truckers' association grew out of the group that led such widespread demonstrations in 1974, against the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit and rising federal fuel prices that some states mobilized the National Guard.

The 40-mile-an-hour slowdown is meant to be a legal but nonetheless attention-getting demonstration. The protesting truckers, marking the anniversary of spontaneous driver demonstrations that snarled traffic in 1974, contend that the 55-mile-an-hour limit costs each independent driver — who profits by rapid deliveries and turnarounds — hundreds of dollars a month in lost revenue and hundreds of dollars a year in traffic fines. The truckers' association wants Congress to decree a 65-mile-an-hour limit on interstate highways.

The association said that trucks from coast to coast will carry posters opposing the 55-mile-an-hour limit and that truck operators will "evangelize" automobile drivers over CB radio. But the truckers have been urged to stay within the law — not to cruise abreast at 40 miles an hour on a two-lane highway, for example. There are laws against obstructing traffic.

THEY ARE TO proselytize nontrucking motorists by showing highway courtesy and by urging "four wheelers," or family cars, to join them in a series of "town meetings" opposing the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit at truck stops along the interstate highways.

The demonstration here, on the stretch of I-81 that runs down Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, is to be led by Mike Parkhurst of Los Angeles, president of the truckers' association and editor of Overdrive magazine, and Bill Scheffer, a trucker from Brezwood, Pa., who is the association's eastern vice president.

The leadership's decision to focus the protest on Virginia was originally planned to spur a parallel demonstration protesting this state's law against the "fuzzbuster," a police radar alarm widely used in trucks to avoid radar arrests. Highway patrol officers here have been confiscating the devices by the thousands as electronically armed trucks roll through Virginia from other states where the devices are legal.

THAT PART OF the weekend demonstration has been muted, according to the truckers' association, because the Virginia House of Delegates passed a bill two weeks ago repealing the state's strict antiradar detector law. The state senate may consider the bill this weekend.

On the broader national issue of the 55-mile-an-hour limit, however, Scheffer said that the association expected "some traffic jams from the 40-mile-an-hour slowdown," and added: "I've been getting a lot of phone calls from truckers saying, 'We shouldn't have just a slowdown; we need a shutdown.'"

At unspecified toll booth plazas across the country, he said, some truckers would "probably" offer their tolls — they run up to $15 in some places — in pennies. "It may take some time to count them," Scheffer added.

Will rebate plan work? Some doubt it will achieve goals

By R. GREGORY NOKES

WASHINGTON (AP) — A tax rebate of at least $50 is a virtual certainty for most Americans this year, but what isn't certain in the minds of some is whether the rebate plan will achieve President Carter's goal of stimulating sustained economic growth.

Rep. Barber Conable, R-N.Y., and other lawmakers last week wondered aloud why the Carter administration thought its stimulus plan would work any better to promote solid economic growth than past programs, such as the 1975 tax rebate plan.

The purpose of the 1975 rebate and of Carter's plan is to put more spending money in the hands of consumers.

Hopefully, this will initiate a self-sustaining cycle of greater production, more employment, more consumption and, eventually, new investment by business and industry to expand production capacity.

Economists blame poor investment activity last year as a reason for the slowdown in economic growth.

TWO YEARS AGO, Congress and then-President Gerald R. Ford worked out a similar tax rebate, whose purpose also was to get the economy moving.

That rebate provided for a 10 per cent refund on a taxpayer's tax bill, up to a maximum rebate of $200. A total of $8.2 billion was paid out, with an average rebate per taxpayer of $125.

Carter's proposal is for rebate payments of $50 per dependent for each taxpayer, with additional $50 payments for Social Security recipients and low-income persons who already obtain the earned income credit.

Under the Carter plan, a family of six, for example, would receive a rebate of $300, since each dependent is entitled to $50. The total amount of the Carter rebate would be $11.4 billion.

If Congress goes along with Carter's plan, as expected, rebate checks will be in the mail to most Americans beginning in April, with everybody being paid by June at the latest.

Carter officials claim rebates will reach 86 per cent of Americans, while the 1975 rebate reached 89 per cent of the population. Some four million poor Americans, who don't have children or who don't file a tax return or who don't receive Social Security payments, will be excluded.

Carter administration economists are optimistic the Carter rebate will work to stimulate the economy.

AS EVIDENCE, they cite the 1975 rebate.

Charles L. Schultze, chairman of Carter's Council of Economic Advisers, said the 1975 rebate "did work" in helping to halt the recession and to start economic recovery.

He said the U.S. Gross National Product increased 7.3 per cent in the 12 months after the rebate while personal consumption of Americans jumped 6 per cent in that period.

"People did spend, not immediately, but over a period of the first, second and third quarters," he said.

"The problem was, it didn't last long enough," Schultze said.

As Schultze sees it, the 1975 rebate wasn't followed up by anything else, so after Americans spent their rebate, everything went flat again.

Carter aims to solve that problem by having other measures ready to take over when the impact of the rebate wears off, Schultze said. These include a permanent tax cut later this year, tax incentives for business, and jobs and public works programs that will extend through 1978.

Schultze said the overall program should help reduce unemployment to between 6.7 and 6.9 per cent by the end of 1977, and down toward 6 per cent by the end of 1978. The latest unemployment rate is 7.8 per cent.

Jobs and public works programs are nothing new, of course. And Ford recommended, and Congress enacted, some semipermanent tax reductions and tax incentives for business in 1975. It's also important to note that the budget deficit set a record last year and is headed for another in 1977.

So it was not surprising that there were doubters among the lawmakers who listened to administration witnesses last week. Rep. Robert N. Giannino, D-Conn., chairman of the House Budget Committee was one.

"What concerns me is you're overly optimistic," he told Schultze. Giannino argued for more emphasis on jobs spending.

Other Democrats in Congress want to add to the jobs portion of the Carter program, but that most likely wouldn't affect the rebate. It would, however, add to the cost of the overall Carter economic package, which now totals $31 billion over two years.

Some Carter administration officials already have indicated that if the winter endangers the national economy, they might approve of additional government help for consumers.

SMALL CARS SAID A MUST FOR U.S.

NEW ORLEANS (AP)—American car manufacturers have yet to come up with a good small car that will sell, the president of the National Automobile Dealers Association said Saturday.

"And there's no reason for it, that's for sure," said John J. Pohanka, who is winding up a year as head of the National Automobile Dealers Association.

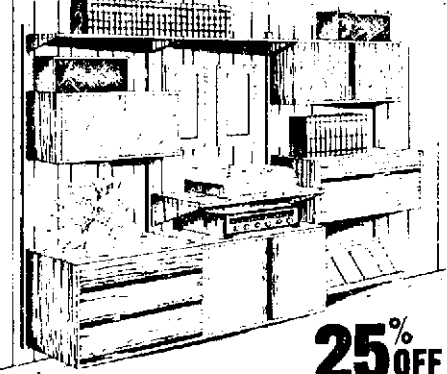

"Any country that can put a man on the moon can certainly build a small car," he said.

Until that happens, dealers need a stock of big, standard-size cars to keep some cash coming in, Pohanka told reporters.

"Perhaps the key is the restyling of the intermediates. But we can't have all subcompacts, people won't buy them," said Pohanka, who operates an Oldsmobile-Fiat-Honda dealership.

Truckers plan 'slowdown' over 55 mph limit

By BEN A. FRANKLIN
New York Times Service

ROANOKE, Va. — Despite three years of federal and state efforts to slow highway traffic to the 55-mile-an-hour limit imposed by Congress in 1974, the campaign has not only failed but has also inspired a type of Prohibition-era conspiracy to flout the law.

Starting at midnight Sunday, the first concerted campaign to repeal the 55-mile-an-hour limit and raise it to at least 65 is to begin with a trucker's slowdown to 40 miles an hour. Monday there may be scattered traffic jams on the interstate highway system.

On one stretch of the four-lane interstate highway, red and blue route markers proclaiming "1-64" seem to be read by almost all drivers as "I go 64."

At 64 miles an hour, it is widely believed that many state troopers tend to overlook the 9-mile-an-hour excess in speed.

According to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, prosecutors and judges in some states and counties — the association will not say which ones — have been declining to bring to trial cases in which the offender does not exceed the old speed limit. In most states, that was 65 miles an hour.

At the association's headquarters, where a three-year, federally funded study of the enforcement of the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit is about half finished, an official confirmed that a confidential state-by-state survey found a general policy of discretionary arrests by highway patrol officers of drivers who exceeded the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit by 5 miles an hour, and the issuance of summonses only "at speeds in excess of 10 miles an hour over the posted limit." There are some stricter exceptions, but they are generally not significant.

"IN SOME STATES, our survey shows that fines are as low as $5 for conviction of any speed less than the old posted limit, or the law says that no traffic violator points shall be issued at any speed less than the old speed, or it may say that auto insurance rates shall not be affected by such convictions," the association official said. "Some of the negative influences on enforcement are legislative or political. In California, the largest state police department in the country is forbidden to use radar and must use marked cars."

In any event, the penalty for driving 64 miles an hour, should a motorist choose to mail in the required collateral and court costs rather than face trial, is often no more than $25 to $30. But the cost begins to rise sharply if the driver is guilty of going more than 65 miles an hour.

The risk-taking mood of the majority of motorists was evident in observations by the New York Times in recent months, in which a borrowed police radar was used on three interstate highways in Virginia and Maryland: I-64, I-81 and I-95. The average speed of 70 vehicles clocked, about half of them trucks, was 64 miles an hour.

With citizens' band radio and radar detectors, some drivers, including truckers, were willing to go 70 miles an hour and over if the highway "was clean and green," meaning free of Smokey Bear, a CB term for state troopers.

THE PARALLEL to the Prohibition era, with its good-humored contempt for the law even among otherwise law-abiding citizens, is also evident in a gathering public campaign to repeal the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit.

Thousands of truckers, mostly independent owner-drivers, have been asked by the Independent Truckers Association to cruise on interstate highways on Monday at no more than 40 miles an hour.

The truckers association grew out of the group that led such widespread demonstrations in 1974, against the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit and rising federal fuel prices, that some states mobilized the National Guard.

The 40-mile-an-hour slowdown is meant to be a legal but nonetheless attention-getting demonstration. The protesting truckers, marking the anniversary of spontaneous driver demonstrations that snarled traffic in 1974, contend that the 55-mile-an-hour limit costs each independent driver — who profits by rapid deliveries and turnarounds — hundreds of dollars a month in lost revenue and hundreds of dollars a year in traffic fines. The truckers association wants Congress to decree a 65-mile-an-hour limit on interstate highways.

The association said that trucks from coast to coast will carry posters opposing the 55-mile-an-hour limit and that truck operators will "evangelize" automobile drivers over CB radio. But the truckers have been urged to stay within the law — not to cruise abreast at 40 miles an hour on a two-lane highway, for example. There are laws against obstructing traffic.

THEY ARE TO proselytize nontrucking motorists by showing highway courtesy and by urging "four wheelers," or family cars, to join them in a series of "town meetings" opposing the 55-mile-an-hour speed limit at truck stops along the interstate highways.

The demonstration here, on the stretch of I-81 that runs down Virginia's Shenandoah Valley, is to be led by Mike Parkhurst of Los Angeles, president of the truckers association and editor of Overdrive magazine, and Bill Scheffer, a trucker from Breezewood, Pa., who is the association's eastern vice president.

The leadership's decision to focus the protest on Virginia was originally planned to spur a parallel demonstration protesting this state's law against the "fuzzbuster," a police radar alarm widely used in trucks to avoid radar arrests. Highway patrol officers here have been confiscating the devices by the thousands as electronically armed trucks roll through Virginia from other states where the devices are legal.

THAT PART OF the weekend demonstration has been muted, according to the truckers association, because the Virginia House of Delegates passed a bill two weeks ago repealing the state's strict antiradar detector law. The state senate may consider the bill this weekend.

On the broader national issue of the 55-mile-an-hour limit, however, Scheffer said that the association expected "some traffic jams from the 40-mile-an-hour slowdown," and added: "I've been getting a lot of phone calls from truckers saying, 'We shouldn't have just a slowdown; we need a shutdown.'"

At a discounted toll booth plazas across the country, he said, some truckers would "probably" offer their tolls — they run up to $15 in some places — in pennies. "It may take some time to count them," Scheffer added.

Many people inadequately covered
3 health plans proposed

Knight News Service
WASHINGTON — About 40 million Americans whose yearly incomes are under $10,000 would have little or nothing to fall back on should they become seriously ill, a new study has found.

Prepared by the Congressional Budget Office, the study shows that these people either have no health insurance and are ineligible for Medicaid or have health insurance that is inadequate.

At a news conference, Doctor Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Budget Office, and Suzanne Stoiber, principal author of the new report, explained that single or married persons under 65 without children do not qualify for Medicaid and that even those with children may earn too much money to be eligible in many states. This is because these states typically offer Medicaid to people under 65 only if they are on welfare, they said.

Another aspect of the problem, they continued, is that people who have individual health insurance policies rather than group policies usually do not have so-called catastrophic benefits. This means that in the event of serious illness their coverage quickly runs out.

The new report considers three possible catastrophic protection plans whose cost to the federal government — if Congress were to enact them — would range from $12 to $20 billion in the fiscal year that will begin in October 1978.

One of these plans — funded primarily at middle-income families — would supplement Medicare and inadequate private health insurance coverage by tax-financed subsidy. The second would have the government assume all medical costs, except those for long-term care, once a family had spent 15 per cent of its income on health bills in any given year.

The third option would be to have the Federal government take over the entire responsibility for Medicaid instead of having the program vary from state to state as it does now.

Expensive coffee
often filthy, too

By DAVID C. MARTIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — While the price of coffee was doubling last year, more than 70 million pounds of green coffee beans entering the United States were found to contain insects, mold, rodent droppings and other contaminants.

Thousands of pounds already in this country also were seized by the Food and Drug Administration after inspectors found them being stored and shipped under unsanitary conditions. One batch contained human feces.

Most of the contaminated coffee, whether it was detained at ports like New York, New Orleans and San Francisco, or seized after it had made its way into interstate commerce, was ultimately released for consumption after it had been cleaned under FDA supervision.

Figures provided by the National Coffee Association show, for example, that it costs about $6 to recondition a 52-pound bag of coffee containing insects, a cost which ultimately is passed on to the consumer. Industry executives say this added cost "is not a significant factor in the price of coffee to the American consumer."

"WE DON'T LIKE to deal with delayed coffee," says an executive for General Foods, maker of Maxwell House. When a shipment is detained by the FDA, substitute coffee must be found, and this often means paying more for lower quality, he says.

Coffee is one of the most frequently detained of all imported foods, an FDA official says, but he is quick to point out that the volume of coffee imports is larger than that of most other foods.

However, the FDA official estimates that only 15 to 20 per cent of coffee shipments entering this country actually are inspected.

Statistics for other food items are not available. The coffee statistics were compiled as part of a special FDA study aimed at finding solutions to the problem.

THE PROBLEM of unsanitary coffee entering this country is a growing one, according to government and industry officials, but they don't know whether it's due to an actual increase in filth or expanded coverage by FDA inspectors. The problem has caused enough concern so that FDA officials met with representatives of coffee-producing countries earlier this month in Dallas and Houston to discuss ways of cleaning up coffee shipments.

Among coffee-producing countries, some of the worst offenders are the Philippines, Madagascar and Nigeria, according to FDA figures. An FDA official, who asked not to be named, stressed that the unsanitary conditions were the fault of the exporting country or the shipper, not the American coffee firms who buy the green coffee beans to roast and put on supermarket shelves.

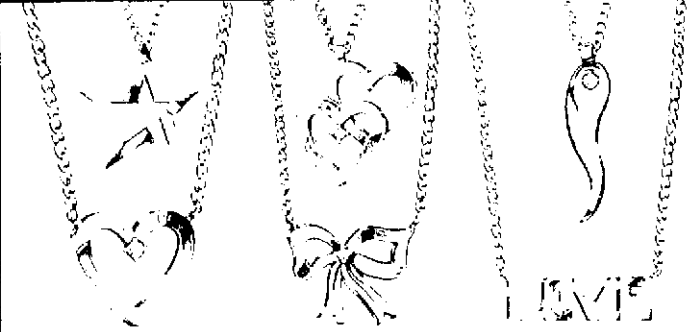

HE PROVIDED the following breakdown of the total 434 shipments that were detained at U.S. ports last year:

- Insects, alive or dead, were found in 228.
- Beans were damaged by insects in 68.
- Coffee was water-stained, moldy or decomposed in 60.
- Rodent filth was found in 32.
- The remainder were seized for a variety of reasons, including oil-stained bags and the presence of insecticides.

Court documents and interviews with FDA officials turned up the following instances of contaminated coffee:

- A shipment of 500 bags of Mexican coffee aboard the Texas and Pacific Railroad was found to contain human waste, probably left by a hobo.
- A shipment of 333 bags of Ethiopian coffee owned by the Folger Coffee Co. and stored at the Pacific Oriental Terminal Co., in San Francisco was found to contain "bird excreta."
- A shipment of 417 bags of Indonesian coffee owned by the New York importing firm of Saks International, Inc., and stored at the Strachen Shipping Co., in Houston was found to contain "bird excreta."
- Nine hundred bags of Brazilian coffee owned by the coffee division of The Great A.P. Tea Co., Inc., and stored at Belt's Wharf Warehouses, Inc., in Baltimore, Md., was found to be contaminated with "a poisonous and deleterious substance," sodium aluminum fluoride.
- Ten thousand bags of Brazilian coffee owned by International Produce, Inc., and stored at Belt's warehouses "may have been rendered injurious to health by reason of being exposed to contamination with sodium bichromate."

Portrait of a campus craze

Student Kathy Trapp, 20, illustrates the latest campus craze at Michigan State University in East Lansing. Above, she prepares to print her face on a photocopy machine in the school library. She says she'll use the copies as valentines. The result is shown at far right, where Kathy emerges in a scrunched-up, flat-nosed portrait. The other machine's-eye view is of her boyfriend, Michael Langley.

Many people inadequately covered
3 health plans proposed

Knight News Service

WASHINGTON — About 40 million Americans whose yearly incomes are under $10,000 would have little or nothing to fall back on should they become seriously ill, a new study has found.

Prepared by the Congressional Budget Office, the study shows that these people either have no health insurance and are ineligible for Medicaid or have health insurance that is inadequate.

At a news conference, Doctor Alice M. Rivlin, director of the Budget Office, and Suzanne Stoiber, principal author of the new report, explained that single or married persons under 65 without children do not qualify for Medicaid and that even those with children may earn too much money to be eligible in many states. This is because these states typically offer Medicaid to people under 65 only if they are on welfare, they said.

ANOTHER aspect of the problem, they continued, is that people who have individual health insurance policies rather than group policies usually do not have so-called catastrophic benefits. This means that in the event of serious illness their coverage quickly runs out.

The new report considers three possible catastrophic protection plans whose cost to the federal government — if Congress were to enact them — would range from $12 to $20 billion in the fiscal year that will begin in October 1978.

One of these plans — directed primarily at middle-income families — would supplement Medicare and inadequate private health insurance coverage by tax-financed subsidy. The second would have the government assume all medical costs, except those for long-term care, once a family had spent 15 per cent of its income on health bills in any given year.

The third option would be to have the Federal government take over the entire responsibility for Medicaid instead of having the program vary from state to state as it does now.

Expensive coffee
often filthy, too

By DAVID C. MARTIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the price of coffee was doubling last year, more than 70 million pounds of green coffee beans entering the United States were found to contain insects, mold, rodent droppings and other contaminants.

Thousands of pounds already in this country also were seized by the Food and Drug Administration after inspectors found them being stored and shipped under unsanitary conditions. One batch contained human feces.

Most of the contaminated coffee, whether it was detained at ports like New York, New Orleans and San Francisco, or seized after it had made its way into interstate commerce, was ultimately released for consumption after it had been cleaned under FDA supervision.

Figures provided by the National Coffee Association show, for example, that it costs about $8 to recondition a 132-pound bag of coffee containing insects, a cost which ultimately is passed on to the consumer. Industry executives say this added cost "is not a significant factor in the price of coffee to the American consumer."

"WE DON'T LIKE to deal with delayed coffee," says an executive for General Foods, maker of Maxwell House. When a shipment is detained by the FDA, substitute coffee must be found, and this often means paying more for lower quality, he says.

Coffee is one of the most frequently detained of all imported foods, an FDA official says, but he is quick to point out that the volume of coffee imports is larger than that of most other foods.

However, the FDA official estimates that only 15 to 20 per cent of coffee shipments entering this country actually are inspected.

Statistics for other food items are not available. The coffee statistics were compiled as part of a special FDA study aimed at finding solutions to the problem.

THE PROBLEM of unsanitary coffee entering this country is a growing one, according to government and industry officials, but they don't know whether it's due to an actual increase in filth or expanded coverage by FDA inspectors. The problem has caused enough concern so that FDA officials met with representatives of coffee-producing countries earlier this month in Dallas and Houston to discuss ways of cleaning up coffee shipments.

Among coffee-producing countries, some of the worst offenders are the Philippines, Madagascar and Nigeria, according to FDA figures. An FDA official, who asked not to be named, stressed that the unsanitary conditions were the fault of the exporting country or the shipper, not the American coffee firms who buy the green coffee beans to roast and put on supermarket shelves.

HE PROVIDED the following breakdown of the total 44 shipments that were detained at U.S. ports last year:

- Insects, alive or dead, were found in 226.
- Beans were damaged by insects in 68.
- Coffee was water-stained, moldy or decomposed in 60.
- Rodent filth was found in 32.
- The remainder were seized for a variety of reasons, including oil-stained bags and the presence of insecticides.

Court documents and interviews with FDA officials turned up the following instances of contaminated coffee:

—A shipment of 500 bags of Mexican coffee aboard the Texas and Pacific Railroad was found to contain human waste, probably left by a hobo.

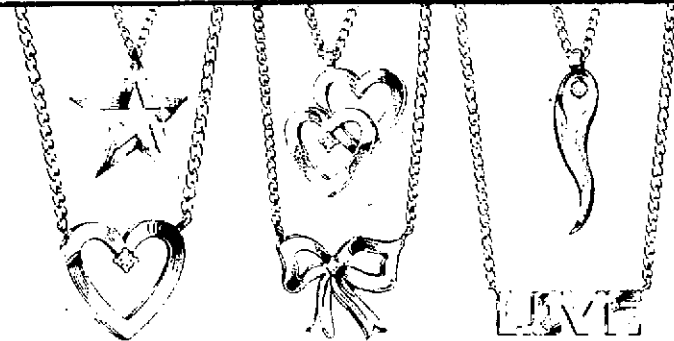

—A shipment of 333 bags of Ethiopian coffee owned by the Folger Coffee Co. and stored at the Pacific Oriental Terminal Co., in San Francisco was found to contain "bird excreta."

—A shipment of 417 bags of Indonesian coffee owned by the New York importing firm of Saks International, Inc., and stored at the Strachen Shipping Co., in Houston was found to contain "bird excreta."

—Nine hundred bags of Brazilian coffee owned by the coffee division of The Great A&P Tea Co., Inc., and stored at Belt's Wharf Warehouses, Inc., in Baltimore, Md., was found to be contaminated with "a poisonous and deleterious substance," sodium aluminum fluoride.

—Ten thousand bags of Brazilian coffee owned by International Produce, Inc., and stored at Belt's warehouses "may have been rendered injurious to health by reason of being exposed to contamination with sodium bichromate."

Tanker wreck cripples traffic

Long Beach firefighters deluge ruptured fuel truck with water after its tandem trailer exploded in a sheet of flame at Redondo Avenue and Airport Way just after 9 p.m. Saturday. No injuries were reported after 3,700 gallons of flaming gasoline swamped Redondo Avenue, forcing the Highway Patrol to close southbound San Diego Freeway and nearby Long Beach streets for almost an hour.

wife, Katherine, relatives and friends.

"A doctor brought the wife and mother into a room and broke the news," said Paul Wasserman, Prinze's agent and friend. "They fell on the bed and each other, crying."

Prinze never regained consciousness. Doctors, who operated on Friday, said the bullet passed through his head, causing extensive brain damage.

Katherine Prinze, 26, who rushed to her husband's side after the shooting, had filed for divorce last month. He fired the fatal shot just after speaking to her on the telephone.

Electronic signals marking his vital signs came to an abrupt halt, ending a promising career for a young star whose popularity had skyrocketed with his role as a Mexican-American mechanic in the "Chico" series.

James Komack, creator of the television series, called Prinze the "most gifted entertainer of his time," a man who could be warm, funny and charming onstage but was uncomfortable in the real world.

PRINZE played backgammon at Komack's house Thursday night, just hours before the shooting.

"The last time he spoke to me everything was happy, happy," Komack said. "He talked about his future. He laid out everything that was good."

A New York native of Puerto Rican and Hungarian heritage, Prinze had acted since he was 4, when he did imitations of the late TV star Ed Sullivan. He studied drama in high school and launched into comedy, working in New York coffee houses and night clubs.

His break into television came when a talent scout for the NBC "Tonight" show saw his act at the Improvisation cafe in New York. Komack watched him on the late night television program three years ago, when Prinze was only 19, and signed him to play Chico in a new series.

Johnny Carson, the "Tonight" show host, said Prinze "had tremendous talent. The sadness is always magnified when someone so young finds the pressures intolerable."

SEVERAL hours after his death, a fellow entertainer and Prinze's close friend, Tony Orlando, said:

"We have nothing to say except that we had hoped for the best for him. God took him, and that's it."

After two hours of bedside grieving, the family, accompanied by Orlando, left the hospital. A hospital spokesman said Prinze's body would remain at least 24 hours at the morgue room in the medical center, where the coroner would conduct an autopsy.

A small funeral service for family members and close friends was scheduled for Monday at 12:30 p.m. at the Old North Church of Forest Lawn, Wasserman said.

Herbert S. Schlosser, president of NBC, which broadcasts the popular series, said Prinze was "one of the brightest stars in the world of entertainment, and yet, at 22, he had only begun."

"We shall never know how far he could have gone, how much laughter and pleasure he could have given us all in the years ahead."

Jack Albertson, his costar, said Prinze's action "seems such a tremendous waste. The kid had everything in the world to live for, regardless of his problems."

FRIENDS said Prinze was deeply depressed over the break-up of his marriage and also was trying to void a contract he had signed at age 19 with a former manager.

outside of prison walls."

The basic outline of the scheme is the same. The swindler first obtains blank, but readily available, IRS forms, commonly known as W-2s, which are intended to be filled out by employers. The forms, which are wage and tax statements for specific years, detail the total amounts paid to an employee and the amount and type of income taxes that have been withheld by the employer.

The swindler then enters a name—sometimes his own—a Social Security number that may be real, an employer—real or fictitious—and spurious amounts for both the wages paid during the year and the taxes withheld.

He then constructs a totally fictitious tax return, entering all the usual information, plus deductions for standard items such as dependents, charities, medical expenses, and mortgage interest.

The net result is that the "taxpayer" calculates that the IRS owes him a refund. Some swindlers rely on volume, filing scores of returns for relatively minor sums of a few hundred dollars each. Other con artists will file only a few fraudulent returns, but will ask for tens of thousands of dollars for each refund claimed.

IN THE LEAVENWORTH case involving an inmate named Frank Edward Ready, the refund requests were about $9,000 each.

McMillan said Ready had "filed eight fraudulent income tax returns which generated in excess of $70,000 in fraudulent tax refunds during the years 1973 through March 1976."

The IRS intelligence officer traced similar tax refund frauds perpetrated by Leavenworth convicts to the early 1960s, adding that over the years, "the fraudulent tax return claims for refunds have risen from $600 per refund to $10,000 per refund."

McMillan added that "through the years, the preparers of these fraudulent returns have improved their scheme. An analysis of the known fraudulent claims that were generated by inmates shows the alarming fact that each one of these cases originated from leads uncovered by accident, an informant, or by prison guard who noticed inmates receiving more than one income tax refund check.

"IT IS ALSO an alarming fact that inmates who have been exposed to the fraudulent income tax scheme have taken their knowledge to the outside of the prison when they have been paroled or otherwise released," he said.

As an aside to the Ready case, Senate investigators noted that the Federal Bureau of Prisons had started a course in Leavenworth that trains selected inmates to be computer programmers and operators.

These investigators suspect—a suspicion denied by IRS officials—that some of these inmate programmers may have used the computer facilities within the prison to construct means by which fraudulent returns would avoid detection by the computers used by the IRS to monitor tax returns.

The nub of this idea is that many IRS audits of returns are made only if the deductions claimed exceed certain norms determined by the service. With the norms known, phony returns are constructed that have a greater chance of going undetected.

READY'S CASE was detected when two of his fraudulent returns popped up side by side in an IRS auditing section in Dallas and a clerk became suspicious of their similarity.

Ready, at the time serving a 5-year sentence for interstate transportation of forged securities, was convicted of tax fraud last September and sentenced to an additional 15 years.

The Pasadena case involved David G. Robinson, a former IRS revenue officer, who worked the refund scheme so successfully, using a fictitious name and Social Security number, that he was given three refunds totaling $365,340. Before IRS agents caught up with him, he had purchased seven sports cars and a plane. Last year, he was sentenced to five years for tax fraud.

been placed in charge of a White House team effort to cope with the energy problem. The director of the federal disaster assistance program, Thomas Dunne, was included on the team, along with other senior administration advisers.

Powell told reporters at a White House briefing that Carter has been receiving reports "on the worsening weather situation Friday evening and Saturday morning."

"The situation requires a coordinated and concentrated effort on the part of the federal government to deal with both immediate and long-term effects" of energy shortages, Powell said.

Powell repeated Carter's request that thermostats in homes and offices be lowered to 65 degrees to conserve energy.

They said he also was concerned about his arrest last November on a misdemeanor charge of driving under the influence of drugs. He had been scheduled to go on trial Feb. 28.

"Chico and the Man" drew mixed critical reviews after it started in September 1974, but it was an overnight success with the public. During its first season, an average of 40 million people watched the comedy each week.

Prinze finished taping the final show of the first season in April 1975, just a month after he had met his wife-to-be while he was resting in Wyoming. They were married in Las Vegas that October. It was her third marriage and his first.

They had one son, 10-month-old Freddie Jr. Friends said Prinze loved his son dearly.

HIS ATTORNEY in the drug case said Prinze had joked about his arrest and had planned to try out a new routine about the incident on Carson's show Feb. 14.

But Donald Wager said his client was very "despondent over domestic difficulties. I think he loved his wife very much and was despondent because the marriage was breaking up."

Komack said the young star, having attained so much so early, was still uncomfortable with his world.

"All that charm, all that love, all that marvelous talent and all that niceness. He couldn't do that offstage," said Komack.

Had Prinze been older when fame descended on him, "he would have been sure enough and seasoned enough to look at the world properly," Komack added.

at least seven persons died in the Buffalo area in a paralyzing blizzard that was accompanied by icy winds, blinding snow and below-zero cold.

Hundreds of stranded vehicles clogged the streets, and officials feared that additional victims might be found.

The fierce storm struck the Buffalo area about noon Friday and left thousands marooned at work or stranded in lines of traffic. Many motorists and bus riders had to walk through the brutal storm in search of shelter in office buildings, restaurants, taverns, churches, stores and hospitals. Children were held overnight in some schools.

One resident reported that at its peak, the storm reached such intensity that it was two hours before he could cross a street.

WHILE THE natural gas shortage has affected businesses primarily, New Jersey Gov. Brendan T. Byrne ordered on Saturday that the temperature settings in all homes in the state be cut to 65 degrees during the day and 60 at night.

Byrne also asked that seven counties be declared federal disaster areas, estimating that severe weather has caused a total of $20 million in damage and economic losses in those areas.

He also ordered all businesses except drug stores in the state to go on a 40-hour week beginning Monday.

Byrne said, "... the situation is critical, and it is going to require the cooperation of every citizen of New Jersey." He said natural gas might have to be cut off to some residences if the order was not complied with.

Virginia Gov. Mills Godwin joined the list of eastern governors declaring a state of emergency and ordering nonessential businesses to cut back their operations.

CONGRESS IS rapidly moving to enact emergency natural gas legislation proposed by President Carter this past week.

Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd predicted on Saturday that the legislation would be approved this week.

The measure would allow Carter to reallocate natural gas, and would grant temporary authority to interstate pipelines to buy gas not subject to price controls from intrastate state pipelines.

The weather in the United States was colder than in most other nations of the temperate zones. It was colder in Washington, D.C., than in Moscow at midday, and New York City was colder than Stockholm, Sweden.

But the arctic weather that brought snow-clogged, icy roadways also made the skiing in New England and other areas excellent.

The storm forced the cancellation of several basketball games, including the Notre Dame-Fordham game at South Bend, Ind., Saturday night. Race tracks around the Northeast were also closed.

ABOUT A DOZEN churches called off Sunday services in western Pennsylvania. Colleges in Pittsburgh announced Monday closings, and stores and shopping centers have reduced their operating hours.

The Nashville (Tenn.) Gas Co. asked all commercial and industrial customers to close over the weekend, and said prospects for reopening schools and businesses Monday were not good. The gas company request said that only drug and grocery stores should stay open.

In Saunemin, Ill., the manager of the town's only grocery store was stranded at home Friday, so he told police to break in and open the shop for the town's 500 residents.

Ohio officials turned to prayer in seeking an end to the bitter cold that made the state one of several to declare an "energy crisis."

Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergymen led about 60 persons in prayer at the Statehouse on Saturday after introductions by Gov. James A. Rhodes.

"WE KNOW thou art able to turn up the thermostat of the world and give us heat," said Rev. Phile Hale, a state legislator from Columbus. "We pray that thou wilt raise the temperature of the state and the nation."

The cold weather prompted the University of Kentucky Agricultural Extension Service to warn beef cattle farmers that low temperatures and high winds could kill thousands of unprotected animals.

Airports were closed or flights canceled in storm-struck areas. Amtrak had to cut back on weekend service west of Syracuse, N.Y.

The Ohio River remained jammed with ice, stranding hundreds of barges loaded with fuel oil and other commodities.

The river traffic jam could eventually cause a gasoline shortage in Kentucky and other states.

MEANWHILE, Herb Hugo, editor of Platt's Oilgram Price Service, said the winter cold could bring summer problems. He said gasoline prices could rise by as much as 10 cents a gallon this summer because refineries are producing maximum amounts of fuel oil, which could cut into the supply of gasoline and drive up the price.

Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania warned of another problem ahead in his state. He told congressional hearings into the natural gas shortage, "We are losing so many jobs right now that I'm afraid our marginal industries will never reopen. The natural gas crisis is devastating the State of Pennsylvania."

The measure would allow Carter to reallocate natural gas, and would grant temporary authority to interstate pipelines to buy gas not subject to price controls from intrastate state pipelines.

The weather in the United States was colder than in most other nations of the temperate zones. It was colder in Washington, D.C., than in Moscow at midday, and New York City was colder than Stockholm, Sweden.

But the arctic weather that brought snow-clogged, icy roadways also made the skiing in New England and other areas excellent.

The storm forced the cancellation of several basketball games, including the Notre Dame-Fordham game at South Bend, Ind., Saturday night. Race tracks around the Northeast were also closed.

ABOUT A DOZEN churches called off Sunday services in western Pennsylvania. Colleges in Pittsburgh announced Monday closings, and stores and shopping centers have reduced their operating hours.

The Nashville (Tenn.) Gas Co. asked all commercial and industrial customers to close over the weekend, and said prospects for reopening schools and businesses Monday were not good. The gas company request said that only drug and grocery stores should stay open.

In Saunemin, Ill., the manager of the town's only grocery store was stranded at home Friday, so he told police to break in and open the shop for the town's 500 residents.

Ohio officials turned to prayer in seeking an end to the bitter cold that made the state one of several to declare an "energy crisis."

Catholic, Protestant and Jewish clergymen led about 60 persons in prayer at the Statehouse on Saturday after introductions by Gov. James A. Rhodes.

"WE KNOW thou art able to turn up the thermostat of the world and give us heat," said Rev. Phile Hiale, a state legislator from Columbus. "We pray that thou will raise the temperature of the state and the nation."

The cold weather prompted the University of Kentucky Agricultural Extension Service to warn beef cattle farmers that low temperatures and high winds could kill thousands of unprotected animals.

Airports were closed or flights canceled in storm-struck areas. Amtrak had to cut back on weekend service west of Syracuse, N.Y.

The Ohio River remained jammed with ice, stranding hundreds of barges loaded with fuel oil and other commodities.

The river traffic jam could eventually cause a gasoline shortage in Kentucky and other states.

MEANWHILE, Herb Hugo, editor of Platt's Oilgram Price Service, said the winter cold could bring summer problems. He said gasoline prices could rise by as much as 10 cents a gallon this summer because refineries are producing maximum amounts of fuel oil, which could cut into the supply of gasoline and drive up the price.

Gov. Milton Shapp of Pennsylvania warned of another problem ahead in his state. He told congressional hearings into the natural gas shortage, "We are losing so many jobs right now that I'm afraid our marginal industries will never reopen. The natural gas crisis is devastating the State of Pennsylvania."

Congress to weigh 'free speech' rights—and curbs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The rights of free expression of citizens, newspapers, lobbyists and broadcasters could be affected by legislation expected to come before Congress this year.

Some bills are designed to expand freedom of speech, while others would curtail that freedom. It is too early to predict which proposals have the best chance of enactment.

The Reporters Committee for Freedom of the Press, which monitors First Amendment-related legislation, says there were 64 bills affecting the news media in the last Congress.

All but half a dozen of those legislative proposals died in committee. Among those which became law were measures opening federal regulatory agency meetings to the public, allowing attorneys' fees to be awarded to plaintiffs in some lawsuits brought by the media and permitting newspapers to publish lottery information.

A bill requiring lobbyists to meet certain registration and auditing requirements was unsuccessful last year but is expected to come up again in the new Congress. Common Cause, a lobbying group, fought for the bill, but the American Civil Liberties Union and consumer advocate Ralph Nader's Congress Watch, often allied with Common Cause on other issues, opposed it.

"General Motors could meet these requirements with the flick of an eyelash," said Joan Claybrook of Congress Watch, "but we're afraid many citizens' lobbyist groups might decide to disband" rather than comply with the requirements.

The bill passed the House last year but not the Senate. A House Judiciary Committee aide indicated that a House panel is likely to take it up again soon.

Its opponents will argue that it infringes upon the constitutional right of the people to petition the government.

Among the bills already introduced in this session is a renewal by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., of his proposal to repeal the Fairness Doctrine and equal time requirements for broadcasters.

The Fairness Doctrine requires broadcasters to give opportunities for the presentation of contrasting viewpoints on public issues. The equal time rule says that when a political candidate is given or sold broadcast time, his opponents must be provided an equal opportunity.

Although the Supreme Court has declined to strike the provisions down, Proxmire maintains they exclude broadcasters from the full scope of the First Amendment's freedom of the press guarantee.

Lockheed furor hits Italians

ROME (AP) — A parliamentary commission indicted two former defense ministers on corruption charges in Italy's Lockheed scandal Saturday, but former Premier Mariano Rumor narrowly escaped indictment, thanks to the tie-breaking vote of a fellow Christian Democrat.

The investigatory commission also indicted a former air force chief of staff and eight other persons, mostly businessmen, in Italy's worst political scandal in decades.

The case against the two former defense ministers, Christian Democrat Luigi Gui and Democratic Socialist Mario Tanassi, now goes to the full parliament, which can clear them or order them to stand trial before the Constitutional Court, Italy's top tribunal.

Maximum punishment for corruption is five years in jail.

Gui and Tanassi were accused of using their official position to push for the purchase of 14 C-130 Hercules cargo planes from Lockheed Aircraft Corp. in 1970 in return for bribes allegedly paid by the American firm in Italy.

The commission dropped charges of fraud against Tanassi, Gui and the former air force chief, Gen. Duilio Fanali. Those charges involved allegations that payments for the planes were artificially increased to cover the bribes.

The commission voted 11-10 against indicting Rumor, who has served as premier five times and was in power at the time of the alleged payoffs. The Christian Democratic president of the commission, who has the power of a double vote to break a tie, voted against the indictment.

Rumor, like the others, had proclaimed his innocence, saying his only contacts with Lockheed were official and were required by negotiations to select planes for the air force.

ACCORDING to testimony before a U.S. Senate subcommittee, Lockheed made a total of $24.4 million in questionable payments to plane purchasers abroad.

Government officials and businessmen in several countries have been caught up in the worldwide scandal. Prince Bernhard of the Netherlands was forced to quit his official posts after a special commission found he had engaged in improper dealings with Lockheed, and former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka of Japan has been charged with accepting Lockheed bribes. Tanaka's trial began Thursday.

In Italy, the scandal became a major campaign issue in last June's parliamentary elections. The Communists scored major gains in those elections, and as a result the Communist-Socialist bloc outnumbered the moderate Christian Democrats 9-8 on the 20-member legislative commission. Three seats were held by minor parties.

IN THEIR defense, Gui, 61, and Tanassi, 60, said their names probably had been used by other people to extract payoffs from Lockheed executives.

The commission voted 18-2 to indict Tanassi, whose Social Democrats are a small center-left party.

Supreme Court demands more race-bias proof

By LESLEY OELSNER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON -- The Supreme Court is on a new tack on civil rights.

It is too soon to know the ultimate destination, but the Court seems to be veering away from the course of earlier years when it led the nation in fighting racial discrimination. The early wake includes some sharp defeats for civil rights proponents in various cases. The decisions are causing worry and confusion in civil rights circles.

The court basically is setting stiffer standards as to what kind of proof is needed to establish a case of unconstitutional racial discrimination.

The court is now stressing the need for proof that there was an actual discriminatory "intent" or "purpose," as opposed to just proof of discriminatory "impact." And it is doing this at a time when discriminatory intent has become harder to prove.

A few decades ago rules and statutes were often blatantly discriminatory on their face, specifying different treatment for blacks and whites. There was no question as to the intent to discriminate. Now, though, those who would discriminate are rarely so open.

The heart of the current trend, and the starting point, is a decision that the Supreme Court announced last June in a case involving an examination for applicants to the District of Columbia police force, an examination that blacks failed in higher proportion than whites.

The court ruled 7-2 that a statute or other official act, such as employment testing, was not unconstitutional just because it placed a "substantially disproportionate" burden on one race. To prove a violation of the constitutional ban against racial discrimination, the guarantee of "equal protection" of the laws, there also had to be proof of "racially discriminatory purpose."

The court noted in its opinion that various lower courts had taken a different view, in several contexts ranging from housing of urban renewal. Then, in a footnote, it cited many examples of such lower court rulings.

The opinion in general, and that footnote in particular, made civil rights lawyers guess at the time that the case would have broad impact. Their suspicions have been confirmed.

Earlier this month, the court applied the "intent" requirement to challenges to allegedly exclusionary suburban zoning. It said it is not inherently unconstitutional for a white suburb to refuse to change zoning rules whose practical effect was to block construction of low-cost housing which would probably turn out to be racially integrated. For this to be unconstitutional, the court said, there would have to be proof of discriminatory intent.

In two other actions the court has vacated a lower court ruling and sent the cases back to the lower courts to be given "further consideration" in light of the District of Columbia ruling. One of those rulings was a federal appeals court decision finding illegal segregation in the public schools, of Austin, Tex., and ordering a broad desegregation plan; the other was another appellate court desegregation order for Indianapolis area schools.

In its decision last June the court noted that its holding contrasted not only with the various lower court rulings it mentioned but also with some "indications" in some of its own earlier rulings. It sought however, to depict the rule as being generally consistent with its prior civil rights decisions.

In fact, "intent" to discriminate has long been a factor in civil rights law, and the Supreme Court could point to some earlier cases that had required proof of intent, including its Denver school desegregation case in 1973.

The Supreme Court's importance in the 1971 case regarding the importance of proof of the "effects" of a statute, and the hazards of trying to assess "motivations," helped the trend along.

Klan case worries Corps

Fears scandal may hurt black recruitment

By MICHAEL COAKLEY
Knight News Service

CAMP PENDLETON--Senior Marine Corps officers are concerned that recruitment of blacks—who make up 20 per cent of Marine enlistees—will be hurt by the disclosure of a Ku Klux Klan chapter on this base.

The episode continues to cause considerable consternation here, even though it appears that the number of Marines who were open, active Klan members was small, perhaps fewer than 20.

One reason is that some Klan members boasted privately that their "secret" numbers ran into the hundreds. Said one young lieutenant: "We can order a man to climb that hill over there, but we can't order him to change his belief. If he's a bigot, there's no way to turn him around."

Nearly all of those whose Klan membership was discovered were summarily transferred to other bases around the country shortly after the existence of the Klan "cell" became known in mid-November.

South leading U.S. in growth

ATLANTA (AP)—The southern part of the "Sun Belt" had to be loosened a couple of notches in the last five years as the region's population swelled by record numbers.

According to figures published Saturday in the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta's Monthly Review, the South led the nation with a net increase in population of nearly 1.5 million between 1970 and 1975.

Although the West continued to experience the greatest increase in population growth rate during those years, statistics indicate "the South has made inroads into the West's traditional position as the nation's fastest growing region," the Review said.

From 1970 to 1975, for example, 64,000 southerners moved to the West, but, during that same period, 75,000 westerners moved to the South, according to the figures.

The Review singled out the "growth of job opportunities" as the major reason for the South's population increase.

The Marine Corps command, reflecting Pentagon concern, issued a stern directive to all senior base commanders last month to correct conditions that cause racial friction. First, though, the commanders will have to find out what's going on—and that may not be so easy.

For example, three white recruits who acknowledged membership in the Klan said that they informed their battalion commanders of the existence of the KKK cell on the base in September. Two months before racial violence erupted.

THE COMMANDERS failed to tell the commanders. Maj. Gen. Carl Hoffman, who insisted later that the Klan chapter was "only a minuscule, faltering operation."

In a recent interview, Gen. Hoffman expressed the hope that the Corps could learn something from the Klan incident. "We want to make a case study of this thing. Just what went wrong at Camp Pendleton?" he said. "We can't just shrug it off and say that we've got a great human relations program here."

Generally, base officers claim to be making progress in easing racial tensions at the 32,000-member camp, although they admit there are limitations to what they can do, as the incident that triggered the disclosure illustrates.

On the night of Nov. 13, a group of 14 black recruits at Pendleton attacked seven whites with clubs, knives and screwdrivers in a bloody barracks-room assault, sending all but one of the whites to the base hospital.

The blacks had apparently initiated the attack in the belief that the whites were members of the Klan. In fact, none of them were. However, three marines, who had publicly flaunted their KKK affiliation were meeting in an adjoining room at the time of the assault, leading investigators to believe that the blacks mistakenly stormed the wrong room.

THE FULL extent of the Klan's activities at Pendleton has begun to emerge in the last three weeks as witnesses continue to testify in pretrial hearings for eleven of the blacks named in the attack. Charges against one have been dropped, and two others have pleaded guilty.

Public testimony and outside investigations have disclosed that klansmen harassed black enlisted men, pasted "White Power" stickers on barracks doors, openly displayed their KKK insignia and concealed illegal weapons in their quarters.

Supporters of the accused blacks have argued that they acted only in retaliation and self-defense against the activities of the Klan. Yet it is the blacks—charged with assault—who face the possibility of court martial, a fact which has compounded the "image" problem faced by the Corps in the aftermath of the incident.

Not have the Klan and its sympathizers wasted any time in making advantage of a potentially serious disruption in race relations at Pendleton.

During the middle of the pretrial hearings—and in spite of assurances by base officials that the Klan cell has been defused—a six-foot wooden cross was set affix in a regimental area of the camp.

Two weeks ago a white recruit who admits to being a klansman was caught using a base copying machine to reproduce a piece of racist literature entitled: "A Nigger's Employment Application."

THE KLAN problem by itself probably would not have generated so much concern at Marine headquarters had it not followed on the heels of another incident a year ago in which a mentally handicapped youth was fatally beaten during a controversial training exercise at the corps' San Diego Recruit Depot.

The recruit, Pvt. Lynn McClure, 20, was forced by his drill instructors to fight fellow members of his platoon with a wooden "pencil stick" as punishment for lacking sufficient "motivation."

In what was apparently a serious deviation from training rules, the bouts continued until McClure was struck violently on the head and fell to the ground. He died three months later, never regaining consciousness.

"People are going to be talking about the McClure death for 10 years, and now they're going to be talking about the Klan at Pendleton for another 10," said an exasperated officer.

Carter asks report on agency

WASHINGTON (AP)—Joe Aragon, a former Los Angeles attorney who has been a senior staff member of the Democratic National Committee, was named Saturday by President Carter to be acting director of the Community Services Administration.

Carter directed Aragon, 35, to make a report to him in 30 days on the CSA, a government organization that has a $11-million appropriation for fiscal 1977 and employs 1,059 persons.

Carter said that while the purpose of the CSA was to "provide help and technical assistance to worthwhile community projects, the agency has become sluggish and politicized in recent years."

It was set up to operate community action and other programs that combine federal, state and local funds. Aragon succeeds Samuel Martinez.

$808-million aid for Navajo tribe probed

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—An estimated $808 million in public money went to the Navajo reservation in the past three fiscal years, a federal agency says in the first government report in recent years on assistance to the Indian tribe.

The report, made public Saturday, came as the government continued an investigation into alleged financial irregularities within the tribal government. Several low-ranking tribal officials have been indicted so far.

The General Accounting Office said in its report that the bulk of the $808 million came from the Health, Education and Welfare and Interior departments. The federal funds were provided for the tribe—America's largest Indian group—and nontribal organizations such as public and private schools, the report said.

The GAO report was made public by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who asked a year ago for a review of federal aid to the Navajos. Audit findings reported

Supreme Court demands more race-bias proof

By LESLEY OELSNER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court is on a new tack on civil rights.

It is too soon to know the ultimate destination, but the Court seems to be veering away from the course of earlier years when it led the nation in fighting racial discrimination. The early wake includes some sharp defeats for civil rights proponents in various cases. The decisions are causing worry and confusion in civil rights circles.

The court basically is setting stiffer standards as to what kind of proof is needed to establish a case of unconstitutional racial discrimination.

The court is now stressing the need for proof that there was an actual discriminatory "intent" or "purpose," as opposed to just proof of discriminatory "impact." And it is doing this at a time when discriminatory intent has become harder to prove.

A few decades ago rules and statutes were often blatantly discriminatory on their face, specifying different treatment for blacks and whites. There was no question as to the intent to discriminate. Now, though, those who would discriminate are rarely so open.

The heart of the current trend, and the starting point, is a decision that the Supreme Court announced last June in a case involving an examination for applicants to the District of Columbia police force, an examination that blacks failed in higher proportion than whites.

The court ruled 7-2 that a statute or other official act, such as employment testing, was not unconstitutional just because it placed a "substantially disproportionate" burden on one race. To prove a violation of the constitutional ban against racial discrimination, the guarantee of "equal protection" of the laws, there also had to be proof of "racially discriminatory purpose."

The court noted in its opinion that various lower courts had taken a different view, in several contexts ranging from housing of urban renewal. Then, in a footnote, it cited many examples of such lower court rulings.

The opinion in general, and that footnote in particular, made civil rights lawyers guess at the time that the case would have broad impact. Their suspicions have been confirmed.

Earlier this month, the court applied the "intent" requirement to challenges to allegedly exclusionary suburban zoning. It said it is not inherently unconstitutional for a white suburb to refuse to change zoning rules whose practical effect was to block construction of low-cost housing which would probably turn out to be racially integrated. For this to be unconstitutional, the court said, there would have to be proof of discriminatory intent.

In two other actions the court has vacated a lower court ruling and sent the cases back to the lower courts to be given "further consideration" in light of the District of Columbia ruling. One of those rulings was a federal appeals court decision finding illegal segregation in the public schools of Austin, Tex., and ordering a broad desegregation plan; the other was another appellate court desegregation order for Indianapolis area schools.

In its decision last June the court noted that its holding contrasted not only with the various lower court rulings it mentioned but also with some "indications" in some of its own earlier rulings. It sought, however, to depict the rule as being generally consistent with its prior civil rights decisions.

In fact, "intent" to discriminate has long been a factor in civil rights law, and the Supreme Court could point to some earlier cases that had required proof of intent, including its Denver school desegregation case in 1973.

The Supreme Court's words in the 1971 case regarding the importance of proof of the "effects" of a statute, and the hazards of trying to assess "motivations," helped the trend along.

Klan case worries Corps Fears scandal may hurt black recruitment

By MICHAEL COAKLEY
Knight News Service

CAMP PENDLETON—Senior Marine Corps officers are concerned that recruitment of blacks—who make up 20 per cent of Marine enlistees—will be hurt by the disclosure of a Ku Klux Klan chapter on this base.

The episode continues to cause considerable consternation here, even though it appears that the number of Marines who were open, active, Klan members was small, perhaps fewer than 20.

One reason is that some klansmen boasted privately that their "secret" numbers ran into the hundreds. Said one young lieutenant: "We can order a man to climb that hill over there, but we can't order him to change his belief. If he's a bigot, there's no way to turn him around."

Nearly all of those whose Klan membership was discovered were summarily transferred to other bases around the country shortly after the existence of the Klan "cell" became known in mid-November.

South leading U.S. in growth

ATLANTA (AP)—The southern part of the "Sun Belt" had to be loosened a couple of notches in the last five years as the region's population swelled by record numbers.

According to figures published Saturday in the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta's Monthly Review, the South led the nation with a net increase in population of nearly 1.83 million between 1970 and 1975.

Although the West continued to experience the greatest increase in population growth rate during those years, statistics indicate "the South has made broadens into the West's traditional position as the nation's fastest growing region," the Review said.

From 1970 to 1975, for example, 64,000 southerners moved to the West, but, during that same period, 75,000 westerners moved to the South, according to the figures.

The Review singled out the "growth of job opportunities" as the major reason for the South's population increase.

The Marine Corps commandant, reflecting Pentagon concern, issued a stern directive to all senior base commanders last month to correct conditions that cause racial friction. First, though, the commanders will have to find out what's going on—and that may not be so easy.

For example, three white recruits who acknowledged membership in the Klan said that they informed their battalion commanders of the existence of the KKK cell on the base in September, two months before racial violence erupted.

THE COMMANDERS failed to notify Pendleton's commanding officer, Maj. Gen. Carl Hoffman, who insisted later that the Klan chapter was "only a minuscule, faltering operation."

In a recent interview, Gen. Hoffman expressed the hope that the Corps could learn something from the Klan incident. "We want to make a case study of this thing. Just what went wrong at Camp Pendleton?" he said. "We can't just shrug it off and say that we've got a great human relations program here."

Generally, base officers claim to be making progress in cooling racial tensions at the 32,000-member camp, although they admit there are limitations to what they can do, as the incident that triggered the disclosure illustrates.

On the night of Nov. 13, a group of 14 black recruits at Pendleton attacked seven whites with clubs, knives and screwdrivers in a bloody barracks-room assault, sending all but one of the whites to the base hospital.

The blacks had apparently initiated the attack in the belief that the whites were members of the Klan. In fact, none of them were. However, three marines who had publicly flaunted their KKK affiliation were meeting in an adjoining room at the time of the assault, leading investigators to believe that the blacks mistakenly stormed the wrong room.

THE FULL extent of the Klan's activities at Pendleton has begun to emerge in the last three weeks as witnesses continue to testify in pretrial hearings for eleven of the blacks named in the attack. (Charges against one have been

Public testimony and outside investigations have disclosed that klansmen harassed black enlisted men, posted "White Power" stickers on barracks doors, openly displayed their KKK insignia and concealed illegal weapons in their quarters.

Supporters of the accused blacks have argued that they acted only in retaliation and self-defense against the activities of the Klan. Yet it is the blacks—charged with assault—who face the possibility of court martial, a fact which has compounded the "image" problem faced by the Corps in the aftermath of the incident.

Nor have the Klan and its sympathizers wasted any time in taking advantage of a potentially serious disruption in race relations at Pendleton.

During the middle of the pretrial hearings—and in spite of assurances by base officials that the Klan cell has been defused—a six-foot wooden cross was set afire in a regimental area of the camp.

Two weeks ago a white recruit who admits to being a klansman was caught using a base copying machine to reproduce a piece of racist literature entitled: "A Nigger's Employment Application."

THE KLAN problem by itself probably would not have generated so much concern at Marine headquarters had it not followed on the heels of another incident a year ago in which a mentally handicapped youth was fatally beaten during a controversial training exercise at the corps' San Diego Recruit Depot.

The recruit, Pvt. Lynn McClure, 20, was forced by his drill instructors to fight fellow members of his platoon with a wooden "pugil stick" as punishment for lacking sufficient "motivation."

In what was apparently a serious deviation from training rules, the bouts continued until McClure was struck violently on the head and fell to the ground. He died three months later, never regaining consciousness.

"People are going to be talking about the McClure death for 10 years, and now they're going to be talking about the Klan at Pendleton for another 10," said an exasperated officer.

Carter asks report on agency

WASHINGTON (AP)—Joe Aragon, a former Los Angeles attorney who has been a senior staff member of the Democratic National Committee, was named Saturday by President Carter to be acting director of the Community Services Administration.

Carter directed Aragon, 35, to make a detailed report to him in 10 days on the CSA, a government organization that has a $511-million appropriation for fiscal 1977 and employs 1,059 persons.

Carter said that while the purpose of the CSA was to "provide help and technical assistance to worthwhile community projects, the agency has become sluggish and politicized in recent years."

It was set up to operate community action and other programs that combine federal, state and local funds.

Aragon succeeds Samuel Martinez.

$808-million aid for Navajo tribe probed

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP)—An estimated $808 million in public money went to the Navajo reservation in the past three fiscal years, a federal agency says in the first government report in recent years on assistance to the Indian tribe.

The report, made public Saturday, came as the government continued an investigation into alleged financial irregularities within the tribal government. Several low-ranking tribal officials have been indicted so far.

The GAO report was made public by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who asked a year ago for a review of federal aid to the Navajos.

"Audit findings reported ranged from certain minor weaknesses such as lack of internal controls, to more serious problems, which included the theft of federal funds . . . which have been reported to the FBI for review," the report said.

Irrational fear cripples lives of some people

By KAY BARTLETT
AP Newsfeatures

EDITOR'S NOTE — Fear, that bugbear of childhood, still has teeth for adults. For many, it is a paralyzing numbness that defies reason and cripples lives, an inescapable nightmare as real as the adrenaline-rush that knots the stomach and glazes the eyes.

Thoreau wrote, "Nothing is so much to be feared as fear."

Years later, FDR told a frightened nation: "We have nothing to fear but fear itself."

Philosopher and president were reassuring those of us who know only ordinary fear. Their words were not all that helpful to the millions of Americans who know special fears — those who are phobics.

They suffer from anxieties that are not understood, fear that can be totally debilitating, fear that overtakes their rational minds, fear that paralyzes the limbs, makes the heart race and the stomach twitch with nausea.

Their best friends think they're just a little crazy. Imagine, they sniff, a grown woman who has been afraid to leave her home for 28 years. Another lady so terrified of toy balloons she won't take her children to the park because somewhere a balloon may be spotted. Or think of the electrician who walked up 17 floors a day because he was afraid of the elevator. (Even worse, adds the 34-year-old electrician, "I actually had to run so no one would catch on.")

It all sounds slightly ridiculous. But ridiculous it's not. These phobias cause jobs to be lost, marriages to dissolve, friends to be alienated, productive lives of very bright people to be destroyed.

And all because help is not readily available.

Phobias, which researchers believe have existed since primitive times, are usually curable. It's a question of finding the right treatment for the right person.

And even in Manhattan, where there are more psychiatrists than delis per square block, it's tough.

Take Clare, an articulate woman who was extremely phobic and had been since she was a child.

"In school, instead of concentrating on what the teacher was saying, I would concentrate on whether the door was open, on whether I could get out," she recalls.

Things became worse, and Clare went to see a psychiatrist. For three years, she told him about her dreams, her relationship with her father, her sex life, her true feelings about her mother.

He said he did not want to hear about the symptoms — symptoms that were growing worse. He did not want to hear that her world was closing in, that she could travel less and less far from her home in the Bronx.

She then went to another psychiatrist. He treated her for four more years. Still no relief. She was becoming suicidal and worrying that her marriage would break up. And the little world she had created for herself was ever shrinking.

Clare was a case where traditional psychoanalysis didn't work, although there are other cases where the deep-rooted and long-term analysis is the only answer.

She then found Dr. Manuel Zane, a psychiatrist who makes housecalls when the situation demands it. He simply asked her to try to go a little further than the four blocks.

"It took him six months to get me to go from 165th Street to 161st Street," she says. "He provided the atmosphere where I could do these things."

Clare is now fully functional, able to fight through a crowd of people in a noisy cafeteria and laugh: "This is no place for a self-respecting phobic."

Dr. Zane, who works with a phobia clinic in White Plains, N.Y., and practices privately both in Manhattan and White Plains, has taken other patients on elevators, out into open fields, on top of high buildings, and once even accompanied a phobic on a cruise to the Caribbean.

Says Clare: "He is completely non-judgmental. If I had said let's put bags on our heads and go into the supermarket, he would have said okay, let's do that."

Creating life in test tube

Most promising—but dangerous—research

By JOEL N. SHURKIN
Knight News Service
PRINCETON, N.J. — Some time this spring, Princeton University will begin construction of a new laboratory where scientists can perform the most controversial experiments in all of science: The creation of new life.

The experiments could produce almost unimaginable good — cures for diabetes and cancer, solutions to environmental pollution. But they also could produce terrifying results — Frankenstein-like bugs that could destroy life on Earth.

Knowing how controversial the research is, some universities have been reluctant to acknowledge publicly that they are doing it. Michigan, Caltech and Stanford, for instance, did not tell the communities where they are located about the experiments until after they began.

Others, notably Harvard University, announced their plans, only to become embroiled in bitter public debates that have strained "town-gown" relations.

BUT PRINCETON, learning from the sad experience of the others, has handled the problem differently — so far with remarkable success.

Princeton has laid out all of its plans in advance and told town residents exactly what it thinks the risks are. It has held meetings where laymen can question scientists about the subject. It has solicited public opinion.

Instead of fighting, the town and gown forces are calmly talking the problem out.

"I think that we're rather fortunate in this community in that it's a rather educated and articulate community," said Dr. Jacques Fresco, chairman of the Biochemical Sciences department that wants to conduct the experiment.

"There's a large number of people with an understanding of the intellectual issues."

FRESCO SAID that Princeton prides itself on "healthy and positive town-gown relations." The university and the town are used to discussing issues, he said, and this one is no different.

"I think there was sensed within the university community, within the administration, and among scientists involved as well that there are moral as well as scientific issues involved," he said, "and that we all could benefit from having an informed public."

The process at issue is sometimes described as genetic engineering, but its official name is artificially recombinant DNA.

It involves the alteration of the code by which living things reproduce and pass their characteristics on to their progeny.

The instructions for heredity in a cell are contained in a twisted chain of a substance called deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA).

NATURE IS always combining and recombining the DNA links to produce new members of a species, or even new species.

But in 1972, scientists learned how to do this artificially. They found certain proteins that can snip out genes one by one or in blocks of up to 10. They learned how to replace those genes with entirely new ones and trick the creature into reproducing according to its new instructions. That created creatures nature may never have intended to produce.

The potential is enormous.

Hereditary diseases could be eliminated by replacing the specific gene that orders that disease with one that does not. Bacteria could be altered so that valuable traits would be emphasized, perhaps the ability to eat oil in an oil spill.

The dangers are equally obvious. If a scientist took the bacterium that causes a venereal disease and added a gene enabling the bacterium to survive attacks by antibiotics, the result would be a new, totally incurable disease.

THE DANGER is aggravated by the fact that the easiest organism to work with in the lab is a bacterium called E. coli, which is found by the millions in the intestinal tract of all humans. E. coli is fond of human hosts, so a hybrid E. coli could easily start an epidemic.

Scientists have come close to producing dangerous organisms in at least three experiments so far.

In each case, the organism has been destroyed or the experiment blocked so that no harm was done.

Two years ago, a scientist at General Electric produced a bacterium that might digest sewage sludge to turn it to usable methane gas. But the bacterium was E. coli and the scientist realized the harm that would be caused if this strain got loose and infested human digestive organs, so he killed all his creatures.

Another involved a hybrid virus in a government lab, while the third involved yet another virus developed by a Stanford scientist.

NO SOONER did the process become widely known that scientists began debating among themselves the morality of proceeding with the experiments. Some, like Nobel laureate George Wald, consider recombinant research to be the most dangerous in the history of science.

Others, like James Watson, another Nobel laureate and one of the men who first unraveled the DNA chain, think they could be the most valuable experiments in history.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) was formulated guidelines to protect against accidents. The guidelines, applicable to all federally funded research, were issued last year.

Labs were given designations and rules, beginning with P-1, the typical college instructional laboratory, all the way up to P-4, the kind of lab used for the most dangerous disease bearers, like Lassa fever, smallpox and the deadly Marburg virus.

HARVARD AND Princeton want to build P-3 labs. There is no evidence that anyone outside of the federal government except possibly a pharmaceutical company, plans a P-4 lab. (Private companies are not bound by the guidelines if they use their own money.)

An accident brought Princeton into the issue sooner than it expected. Biologist Arnold Levine found what he thought was a naturally recombinant virus in one of his experiments.

AN AD HOC committee was immediately formed to discuss the matter, but its work was abandoned when Levine found he was mistaken and there had been no recombination.

Out of that organization, however, came a subcommittee on biohazardous research formed by the University Research Board, the faculty-administration group that oversees all research involving outside grants.

PSYCHIC SIX HAVE MONSTER IN MIND

CORNWALL, England (AP) — Six psychics living as far apart as India and Kentucky will project their telepathic powers Monday to determine whether the legendary Loch Ness monster exists.

Tony Shiels of Cornwall, who is one of the six, said they would not go to the murky Scottish lake to entice the monster to emerge, but would concentrate their powers while going about their daily work at home.

"The psychic energy that will be poured out will be enough to bend every spoon and lamp post in Cornwall and Scotland," Shiels said, "but we will direct it exclusively to monster-raising."

A British bookmaker, Ladbrokes, has posted standing odds of 50 to 1 against the monster being sighted. To qualify, a sighted "monster" must be at least 30 feet long and of an unknown species.

Only one of the psychics will be in the Loch Ness area, and he is Pat Scot-Innes who lives near the lake.

SHIELS SAID the experiment is the idea of David Hoy, a Paducah, Ky., broadcaster and psychic. The others named by Shiels are Maj. Leslie May of Edinburgh, Scotland; Des Corlough of Dublin, Ireland, and Jadoo Chandra Rao of Calcutta, India.

Shiels said Hoy contacted him after reading about Shiels' claim that he made contact last year with another reputed monster lurking off the Cornish coast.

"I am confident we will be successful, but this is only a test run," Shiels said. He added that Hoy intends to visit Scotland in a few months for an attempt at closer quarters.

"If next week proves us right and shows that we do have special powers, a lot of people will be in for a surprise," Shiels said.

Legislature learns to live with little lobbying

By STEVE LAWRENCE

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Some legislators and lobbyists will readily admit they dislike it. Others in Capitol political circles say it's the best thing to hit Sacramento in years.

It is Proposition 9, a 1974 ballot measure that persons on both sides of the fence agree has cut back on the meals, drinks and entertainment that lobbyists provide legislators.

Now, two years after it took effect, there are those who say the "two hamburgers and a Coke" limit the act places on how much lobbyists can spend on legislators, their aides and other top state officials should be cut to zero.

The Fair Political Practices Commission will take up a proposed legislative program this week that includes a provision that would make it illegal for a lobbyist to spend any amount on a legislator.

Currently the law limits such expenditures to $10 a month, an amount Gov. Brown said repeatedly during his election campaign was enough for two hamburgers and a Coke.

Richard Carpenter, a commission member and former lobbyist, says some lobbyists have indicated they would welcome the change, which he says should be accompanied by a cutback in lobbyist reporting requirements.

Carpenter believes lobbyists should be able to report a monthly spending total without itemizing it if they had no business dealings with a legislator or other state official and no entertainment expenses.

"There are more and more lobbyists that don't have entertainment expenses and more and more legislators that don't accept any of it," he said.

Lobbyists would still be audited by the state, but on a spot basis, under Carpenter's proposal.

The $10 spending limit was one of the major provisions of Prop. 9, which also broadened campaign contribution reporting requirements and forced lawmakers to report their assets and gifts.

There is no sure way to judge

Prop. 9's effect on wining and dining of lawmakers and their staffs because pre-Prop. 9 reports usually only listed locations where the money was spent.

But legislators, officials at the FPPC, which was created to police the 1974 state law, and lobbyists say the impact has been substantial.

Senate President pro tem James Mills, D-San Diego: "There was a lot more than there is now. It was never what the public understood it to be, but there has been a substantial cutback."

Sen. Arlen Gregorio, D-San Mateo: "When I first came up here a great many of the members spent a lot of time with lobbyists who bought their meals, their drinks, other kinds of entertainment and accommodations for them."

Because of that, some lobbyists "had this very easy access, this very easy relationship with some legislators that I think was destructive of the objectivity that is absolutely essential in a healthy representative process."

"Even before Prop. 9 that was changing, but I think Prop. 9 accelerated it quite tangibly. I think there is very little of that left now."

But other lawmakers say the law has had little substantial effect and complain that it has cut down contact that legislators had at regular luncheons sponsored by lobbyists.

"I don't think it has had any benefit," said Assemblyman John Knox, D-Richmond. "If anybody's stealing or paying too much attention to lobbyists they are still being influenced."

"The liberals are still liberal and the conservatives are still conservative."

Prop. 9 hasn't cut out all wining and dining. Legislators can — and some do — enjoy a substantial number of free meals and drinks.

Irrational fear can cripple a life, but problem usually can be cured

The technique Dr. Zane uses is called "in vivo" or, on the West Coast, "exposure therapy." It is one of the newer methods of treating phobias. Besides talking about the fears, the psychiatrist or psychologist actually takes the person to confront the fear and understand the relationship between the physical twitchings of the body and the reactions of the mind. Little by little, the patient is brought to an understanding of the two.

The psychiatrists who treated Clare represent diversity of opinion. There are traditional analysts who believe the problem is deeply rooted, with the phobic behavior just a symptom of the problem. And then there are those who say, let's cure the symptoms and return the patient to society.

The disagreement also is evident in theories about the causes of phobias.

Dr. Gordon Derner, a psychologist at Adelphi University in Long Island, explains it this way:

"The traditionalist would say the fear of leaving the house is rooted in the basic expulsion from the womb. The behaviorist would say it may or may not have been caused by some real life experience."

DR. LEON SALZMAN, a traditional psychoanalyst who practices in New York and teaches at Georgetown University Medical School in Washington, says that behavioral therapy does not cure the problem. He also says there is a point of reference from which a phobia develops.

"While behaviorists alter the phobia, they do not alter the underlying personality configuration that produces the phobia," he said. "All of these tactics are very effective and useful devices, but they do not cure the phobia. There are 20 to 30 gimmicks of this type."

Dr. Salzman is not averse to these techniques. He thinks they are useful but adds, "The treatment has to be more than a behavioral deconditioning."

Dr. Zane believes that the phobics who seek professional help are just the tip of the iceberg, particularly with agoraphobics, the silent sufferers who may remain hidden. This phobia, "the fear of the marketplace," also has been called the "housewives syndrome," since the great majority of the sufferers are women.

DR. ZANE and others, however, believe that this may be misleading since men are less likely to seek professional help than women.

"Women also have more time to spend with their thoughts," says Dr. Zane.

An Australian physician, Dr. Claire Weekes, has specialized in treating agoraphobics by long distance. Through letters and taped cassettes, she claims success with many patients.

"She is most concerned over the lack of understanding that the public — and even some doctors — have about the affliction."

"One doctor just recently wrote that agoraphobics simply lack courage. This couldn't be more wrong. They are extremely brave. They are constantly afraid they will make fools of themselves. When that panic hits, it's like an electric blast," says Dr. Weekes.

Another technique in treating phobias is called systematic desensitization. Dr. Allan Leventhal, a psychologist at American University in Washington, says this method was introduced in the 1960s and has been gaining wider acceptance.

First, he says, the patient must learn deep muscle relaxation.

"IT'S LIKE LEARNING to ride a bike. It takes a while to do it, but anyone can learn," says Dr. Leventhal.

Then the patient must establish an imaginary hierarchy of scenes related to the phobia. For instance, if a patient is afraid of elevators, he must imagine scenes relating to elevators. One possibly would be a bank of elevators viewed from a distance, maybe another of those glass-enclosed elevators, another a picture of himself in an elevator.

This done, he visualizes the least threatening of these and works upward until one produces the panic. Then he puts the deep muscle relaxation into effect until he can think of this scene without sheer panic.

"It's a very graduated confrontation," says Dr. Leventhal. "For those to whom it is appropriate, it has a 90 per cent success rate."

He explains that this technique, a short cut as it were, doesn't work for patients whose problems go far deeper than that particular phobia.

Another in-office treatment is a direct confrontation called "implosion therapy."

In it, the therapist attempts to make the fear collapse under its own weight.

FOR INSTANCE, if the phobic is afraid of snakes the therapist might say: "Imagine snakes all over the place. There are snakes crawling all over your body, there are loud hisses, tongues are darting in and out, the snakes, thousands of them, are searching for an opening to crawl into your body..."

The therapist goes on and on.

The theory is that the terror and panic can only last so long and eventually the patient realizes nothing has happened to him. He is still there. He is safe.

Needless to say, this does not work on every patient and some therapists are opposed to it.

Dr. Leventhal says he would not use it. "The therapist is there to comfort his patient."

Others have found this verbal shock treatment a fast and effective cure.

THERE ARE A FEW phobia clinics in the country, including one at Manhattan's Roosevelt Hospital, which operate on a group encounter basis.

Phobics of various sorts meet and discuss their problems; experts are called in for reassuring lectures and "helpers" are assigned to each patient.

Example: One of the members found a Manhattan building with a bank of elevators, a full-time elevator maintenance crew and a sympathetic starter. Those who fear elevators may go over to the building with their helper, a person not afraid of elevators, and "practice."

"Someone who is afraid of dirt cannot understand why someone else is afraid of crossing the street or going into elevators," says psychologist Morton Seif, who along with Natalie Schor runs the Roosevelt project. "Then all of a sudden, they say 'My goodness, I do the same thing with elevators.'"

Dr. Seif says cured phobics, relatives and friends are the "helpers." It also is important, he says, that the interchange of the group takes place first.

"THESE PEOPLE suddenly are able to say to themselves, there's someone else in the world who is like me."

The Roosevelt clinic is similar to the one at the White Plains Hospital, and at Long Island Jewish Hill-side Medical Center in New Hyde Park there is another research program of therapy and drugs.

In California, there is a center in Menlo Park.

But psychologists and psychiatrists say there isn't nearly enough help available around the country for an affliction that affects millions, that is basically curable and that tends to strike imaginative and creative people.

The size of the problem varies greatly.

"A grown man in New York City who is afraid of snakes should just stay out of the Bronx Zoo," says Dr. Derner. "A man who is afraid of cockroaches should just move out of New York City."

The therapists say a fear becomes a phobia when it starts affecting one's daily life, when it becomes more and more difficult to cope because of the problem.

IN OTHER WORDS, there are irrational fears that easily can be avoided. And there are fears that make good sense.

Says Dr. Derner: "If I told you to imagine there was a snake on this floor and you started to panic thinking of it, that's phobic. If you looked down and saw a rattlesnake and said 'Let's get the hell out of here,' that's common sense."

Marriage, life sentence hit at same time

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Walter Webb, 23, was married and sentenced to life in prison on the same day.

The sentence Friday was for killing a food store clerk he had held up and trying to kill a teen-age witness to the robbery.

"I think you have forfeited your right to live in our society," said Superior Court Judge Irving Per-luss in passing sentence.

Then Webb turned in his chair and winked at Terri-Lea Jordan, 21, to whom he was married moments after the judge left the courtroom.

Rites today for producer

Associated Press

Funeral services were scheduled for 3 p.m. today at Mt. Sinai Memorial Park in the Hollywood Hills for movie producer Laurence Merrick, 50, who was shot to death Wednesday outside his Hollywood studio.

Merrick, who produced the film "Manson," a 1972 documentary about Charles Manson and his followers, was shot in the back with a small-caliber handgun Wednesday as he left his office, authorities said.

He died shortly afterward at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital.

Authorities said they were seeking a man in his mid-20s in connection with the killing.

'Paper-rich' woman held in theft case

Associated Press

Beverly Hills police and Los Angeles County Sheriff's deputies have arrested Margaret Medders on theft charges filed by the Fairmont Hotel in Dallas.

Mrs. Medders and her husband built an empire on loans they arranged in the 1960s by claiming to be heirs to the Spindletop oil fortune. Their bubble burst in 1967 after a lawsuit disclosed their money sources as loans. The couple left debts of $3 million owed to 200 Dallas-area creditors.

Following the arrest, the 35-year-old Mrs. Medders was admitted to the jail ward of the Los Angeles County Medical Center. A spokesman there said Friday she was in satisfactory condition after complaining of chest pains.

Extradition proceedings were scheduled to begin Monday.

Deadend by Philharmonic

By BILL ARTHUR

James Levine and the Los Angeles Philharmonic presented one of the most fascinating deadends in the historical repertoire in playing "Romeo and Juliet" by Hector Berlioz at the Music Center Pavilion Friday.

The French composer, deciding that Beethoven had done all that could be done with sonata form, made several stabs in the dark to find new forms, and what resulted was, among other things, the "Symphonie Fantastique" and the present work.

The former led somewhere, but not the latter.

"Romeo and Juliet" is a symphony upon a drama, which does not mean a tone poem, incidental music or a drama in concert form.

It incorporates three soloists and a chorus, the narrators of Shakespeare's tale, into four vaguely recognizable symphonic movements, which don't add up to a terribly smooth musical product.

But it's beautiful all the same — gorgeous and colorful orchestral stuff.

Levine didn't come up with a very successful solution to this symphonic puzzle.

His conducting tended to extremes: lighter sections such as the Queen Mab Scherzo became too much like incidental music, and more severe ones such as Juliet's funeral seemed just a bit didactic. His treatment of romantic gestures often stuck out, and dynamics (loud passages especially) were not smoothly contoured. The work seemed even more a collection of bits and pieces than need be.

The Los Angeles Master Chorus did not provide much support, for its weak intonation and attack proved a considerable surprise to this admirer of its usual singing.

But some sections, the Finale most of all, offered the fullest pleasure. One appreciated particularly the powerful declamation of baritone Jose van Dam in his difficult part as Friar Lawrence. Delia Wallis sang with a broad, rich voice, but Michel Sells seemed a bit strained in his brief part.

Recital at college

Met stars thrill at El Camino

By BARBARA LAMBL

A veteran of the Metropolitan Opera and one of its current superstars drew a crowd of 2,000 to El Camino College Friday. Soprano Eileen Farrell and Baritone Sherill Milnes filled the ears of opera enthusiasts with melodic arias and duets from Mozart, Weber, Wagner and Verdi.

Milnes eased into the program with the "champagne" song from Don Giovanni. But he had the greatest impact with his rendition of the somber Credo from Othello. In this aria, the villainous Iago declares that the God who made man is cruel, that therefore man must be cruel and that life serves only to feed death.

Milnes restrains the drama in his delivery, casting a gesture here, a vocal inflection there, until the very end, when he gathers his force for a climactic surge of expression that is memorable. Iago's sardonic fading laugh reveals his self-delusion to the audience and evokes rounds of applause for the interpreter.

Milnes is currently appearing in the Met's production of Tosca. He will return to California in the fall of 1978 when he opens the San Diego season with Thomas's Hamlet.

The style of Miss Farrell, a Met singer in the 60s, was more direct than Milnes's. Her Aida, who in the story is torn between her loyalties to her father and to her lover, swung from low notes to high notes at despair, without attempting to cushion the difficult transitions. Her voice transmitted the traumatized state of mind of the character. Miss Farrell explained afterwards, "I sing from the meaning of the words, from the character that Aida is, and not so much from the notes."

Miss Farrell achieved a flowing crescendo on Isolde's "Liebestod," the aria in which she chooses the death that will reunite her with Tristan. In this selection, Miss Farrell's voice, which was once noted for its "inexhaustible volume," spilled out over the crescendo of the orchestra.

Miss Farrell began her career as a singer on television, radio and on the concert circuit. She comes from a vaudeville family. When she changed over to the Met, she shared leads with such greats as Richard Tucker, and was acclaimed for her role in Verdi's La Gioconda. She will return to Indiana for a performance of Wagner with the Indianapolis Symphony. She teaches currently at Indiana University.

The American Youth Symphony, under the inspirational direction of Meiji Mehta, accompanied the singers and completed the recital with selections from Wagner and Weber. The young orchestra did not overpower the singers, and their interpretations were subtle.

Hank aims to end child abuse

By ERIC NEWHOUSE

CLEVELAND, Tenn. (AP)—"I feel like I'm starting a whole new career," says Grand Ole Opry star Hank Snow.

"And I'm excited about it," he adds. "If I can save just one child from a life of torture, my efforts will have been successful."

Snow, 62, has committed himself to a campaign to eliminate child abuse. He recently brought half a dozen other country music headliners here for a concert that raised $1,000 for the Melissa Gibson Memorial Fund, named for a 4-year-old girl beaten to death in October.

"A cause like this is a natural for people in our industry," says Snow. "We're always ready to help someone."

"Most of us are just good country people who have had a hard way to go and who remember what we faced along the way."

Snow was born in Canada and says he still bears the scars of the beatings he received as a child. When he was 12 and his sister was 8, they were turned out of the house into a blizzard and left to fend for themselves.

SNOW WENT to sea and survived two shipwrecks. After a series of jobs, he returned to Canada, formed a small band and began to tour.

"I toured Canada for 12 years, growing steadily in popularity," he says. "But America was always on my mind, so in 1948 I made the biggest mistake of my life."

"I had a beautiful horse, a silver saddle and a Cadillac, but I went to Hollywood, got a string of bad managers and lost everything I had."

Finally Snow fled to Texas to make a comeback and arrived there with assets totalling $11.

In 1950 Snow joined the Grand Ole Opry. He wrote and recorded "I'm Moving On," a song which topped the record charts for 39 consecutive weeks. To date he has released nearly 100 albums for RCA.

"I'm cutting back on my touring now," Snow says. "I was looking for something to devote my efforts to, and this came along at just the right time. All the pieces tell together like a crossword puzzle. I'm devoted to this cause."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: As a inadvertently tempting fate, your attitude toward life fluctuates this year, compelled by influences that disturb the context in which you have developed so far. Go ahead with faith that you'll land on your feet. Hold onto all reserves possible. Relationships also suffer turmoil, add maturity, wisdom. Today's natives are hard-driving, latently planners. Those born this year will delight in what is hazardous, overturning traditions.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Impulse lands you in the wrong business with a contract you can't fulfill. Beware commonplace remarks, touch off misunderstandings, set the neighbors a-buzz.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Patience runs short, tempers explode easily. Don't complain about or take anybody for granted. You've got options but to stick it out. Your turn comes later.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Matters go well, yet one rash comment muttered in haste throws everything out, so you must start over again. Explain fully to people caught in the middle.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): The unexpected is the norm. Avoid travel, or risk winding up at unintended destinations. Find a bystander's spot, a vicarious lift you get easier to enjoy.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Talks between couples build to arguments unless both see a reason for reaching agreement. Work is upset by arbitrary action beyond your control. Defer legal moves.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Say it just once. Nobody listens to advice. Pick up the pieces later, get the show back on road. You're more effective if you omit "I told you so."

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People's detached, uncaring attitude is your subjective view of what they believe is objective. Don't let emotions prevent learning what you need to know.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Forget that feeling of being the odd person out; it's the other way round. Allow for delay in travel, public doings. Bring along spares, back-up items.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Issues unresolved so far won't be now. Let such subjects lie dormant. Handle with care objects that use electricity or have sharp edges or can burn.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): From your standpoint, your schemes have coherent logic. Nobody else sees them in that light or plans anywhere near the same. Surprises are in order.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Steering a steady course with storm warnings up is difficult, try! If too many words aren't exchanged, the air clears late day. The blues hang on a bit.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): The accidental isn't always tragic. Pitch in to console those in distress. Share the joy of those who cheerfully express a sensation of new-found freedom.

"I had a beautiful horse, a silver saddle and a Cadillac, but I went to Hollywood, got a string of bad managers and lost everything I had."

Finally Snow fled to Texas to make a comeback and arrived there with assets totalling $11.

In 1950 Snow joined the Grand Ole Opry. He wrote and recorded "I'm Moving On," a song which topped the record charts for 49 consecutive weeks. To date he has released nearly 100 albums for RCA.

"I'm cutting back on my touring now," Snow says. "I was looking for something to devote my efforts to, and this came along at just the right time. All the pieces fell together like a crossword puzzle. I'm devoted to this cause."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: As a invariably tempting fate, your attitude toward life fluctuates by influences that disturb the context in which you have developed so far. Go ahead with faith that you'll land on your feet. Hold onto all reserves possible. Relationships also suffer turmoil, add maturity, wisdom. Today's natives are hard-driving, talented planners. Those born this year will delight in what is hazardous, overturning traditions.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Impulse lands you in the wrong business with a contract you can't fulfill. Like-wise, commonplace remarks touch off misunderstandings, set the neighbors a-buzz.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Patience runs short, tempers explode easily. Don't complain about or take anybody for granted. You're no option but to stick it out. Your turn comes later.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Matters go well, yet one rash comment muttered in haste throws everything out, so you must start over again. Explain fully to people caught in the middle.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): The unexpected is the norm. Avoid travel, or risk winding up at unintended destinations. Find a bystander's spot; a vicarious lift you get eases tension.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Talks between couples build to arguments unless both see a reason for reaching agreement. Work is upset by arbitrary action beyond your control. Deter legal moves.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Say it just once. Nobody listens to advice. Pick up the pieces later, get the show back on road. You're more effective if you omit "I told you so."

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): People's detached, unearring attitude, is your subjective view of what they believe is objective. Don't let emotions prevent learning what you need to know.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Forget that feeling of being the odd person out; it's the other way round. Allow for delay in travel, public doings. Bring along spares, back-up items.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Issues unsolved so far won't be now. Let such subjects lie dormant. Handle with care objects that use electricity or have sharp edges or can burn.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): From your standpoint, your schemes have coherent logic. Nobody else sees them in that light or plans anywhere near the same. Surprises are in order!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Steering a steady course with storm warnings up is difficult; try if too many words aren't exchanged, the air clears late day. The blues hang on a bit.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): The accidental isn't always tragic. Pitch in to console those in distress. Share the joy of those who cheerfully express a sensation of newfound freedom.

pressed me when the government said, 'You're better than the United States.' It's ignorant. We're the same thing. The flag is another color and a different structure. There's only one sun."

Gurus, philosophers and Eastern religions have always attracted a number of popular musicians.

John Denver praises est as a beacon to be used in looking for space. Maurice White, the driving force behind Earth, Wind & Fire, and jazz keyboard artist Herbie Hancock practice different branches of Buddhism.

Gary Wright's keyboard prowess is cleansed by Kriya Yoga, the meditative discipline established by Pramahansa Yoga-nanda and the Self-Realization Fellowship.

Carlos Santana has been drawing similar cosmic wisdom from his association with Sri Chinmoy, Indian spiritual leader whom he sought out on the recommendation of fellow guitarist Larry Coryell.

CARLOS SANTANA
 'God as Musician'

Santana and his band appear at the Long Beach Arena tonight.

Over the past few years, he's produced semi-religious music like the tunes, an improvement on the previous "Amigos" album and a tightly produced update of the powerful Santana music that came out of San Francisco's Mission District in the late 1960s to puncture the bloated balloon of psychedelic rock.

At least one tune, "The River," may become a standard on FM radio.

On a higher level, though, Santana says, there's no difference between "Festival" and his previous albums. To him, it's all "soul music."

Seated in the San Francisco offices of Bill Graham Presents, the management firm headed by the promoter who launched Santana nationally by booking the unknown group into the Woodstock Festival, Carlos explained his definition.

"When you break down the music, there's only two kinds: sincere and insincere. The difference is between mind music and soul music. Mind music is very fabricated. People sit down and look at 'Billboard' and say, 'This is what's going to hit next, so I'm going to hit that.' With soul music, you're taking a shower and a melody will hit you upside the head. It's not fabricated. It's spontaneous."

one eye. I know they must have complicated problems, like I do, and if they can manifest music with that oneness, then I have to get my stuff together."

Carlos' current one-hand, one-eye roster is a new-old lineup including Tom Coster (keyboards), Jose Chepito Areas (timbales) and Leon Patillo (vocals). Though there were some last-minute personnel changes, Santana said the current incarnation would remain stable "for a long time. Before this album there were incredible musicians, but there was very little playing eye-to-eye. This time people took the music home with them and listened to it and had concern about not clashing with each other."

Miles Davis.

"Mahavishnu is my older brother. As for Miles, it seems that he's touched everything. I would say that Miles is the Muhammad Ali of music."

Actually, there will be several "next albums"—a Santana band effort by fall; a solo album; an instrumental LP called "Transcendence: The Dance of Life," which will trace a romanticized evolution of mankind, and a collection of devotional poems by Sri Chinmoy set to music by Carlos and his wife, Urmila.

"I'M LOOKING to break down walls," Santana said. "I would like to learn whatever I can about receiving peace, light and clarity."

But, he said, he had an even more pressing — and surprising — idea in mind: "My main goal right now is to go to Russia and China and play in Peking Plaza. I would like to feel their dynamism reflected on my guitar."

"When I lived in Mexico, it always de-

Family fighting city hall finds the outlook very dry

By HAL LOWE
Staff Writer

The state of California is in the middle of a drought, and the Eastus Gentry family of Lakewood can sympathize. Their home has been without water for the past month.

On Dec. 28, the city cut off the water supply to the Gentry home for nonpayment of their water bill during a three-year fight which Gentry and his wife Maria say is based on principle.

Under a Lakewood city ordinance, each household in the city pays about $4.80 every two months for trash pick-up service. The resident receives this bill from the city water department. The city owns the water company, and the trash pick-up is handled by private contractors, with the city handling collection of fees.

The water and trash bills were handled separately until three years ago, when the joint billing system began.

Gentry, 60, who has lived for 26 years at 6113 Greenmeadow Road, was employed for 24 years by a Los Angeles trash disposal company. He was recently laid off when the company's owner died and the business declined.

He said he has refused to pay the trash portion of the city's bill because he always took his household's trash to work with him and disposed of it personally, never setting any trash out for pickup by the local contract crews.

A neighbor, who said she has lived near the Gentrys for about 20 years, confirms this.

Gentry noted that he had appeared before the city council several times regarding what he considers an injustice: getting charged for a service which he does not use.

He said he has always paid the water portion of his bill on time, and thought that the matter had been taken care of.

A city official noted that when the money for the trash and water bill is received, the payment is first applied toward the trash portion, and the remainder goes to the water bill.

Thus, Gentry's payment for his water was credited to the trash portion — making his water bill overdue.

This is where Gentry's trouble started. The city, claiming the Gentry family is behind on its water bill, has been pressing for payment for several months.

When it got no response, the city shut off water service last December.

Mrs. Charles Wachter, a neighbor at 6129 Greenmeadow Road, came to the Gentrys' rescue.

A hose was connected from a water outlet at the Wachter house and run to the Gentry home.

Mrs. Wachter said city officials have been telling her family that the hose connection is a violation of the city ordinance.

County health officials told the Wachters and Gentrys that the hose line is a health hazard and a violation of county codes.

Mrs. Wachter said James Grissom, Lakewood city finance officer, has called several times, most recently on Thursday, telling the Wachters their water will also be cut off unless the emergency hose line is disconnected.

At a recent city council meeting, the Gentry plight was again placed before the council, and although Mayor Jo Bennett wrote out a check to pay the listed water arrears of about $9.80, city department officials said there would be an additional charge of $40 to the Gentrys for having their water restored.

Earlier this week, the Gentrys consulted an attorney who petitioned the court to issue an order restoring the water service until the case is resolved by city officials or the courts.

Later, the Gentrys said they were informed that the restoration order would be issued and their water turned back on.

"It's a matter of principle to us," Gentry said. "I have never used trash service. I have never needed it; so, I don't think I should pay for it."

Finance Director Grissom explained: "It's in the city ordinances. The city provides the trash service through contractors and collects the bill from the household."

"The service is there and charged for. If a resident chooses not to make use of it, that is his decision, but the city ordinance says the bill must be paid."

Grissom said the city has a lengthy procedure for attempting to collect a bill before turning off the water, a procedure which he said was followed carefully in the Gentrys' case.

Westside Center

Paint job symbolizes area hope

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Charles Ara surveyed the young men slapping the maroon-colored paint on the outside walls of the Westside Neighborhood Center.

"In the six years I've been here, this building has been free of graffiti," said Ara, the center's 46-year-old executive director.

At least there was no graffiti until last month, he elaborated, when a few spray-painted words appeared on a back wall of the 10,000-square-foot building at 1372 W. Willow St.

SO TO COVER up a bit of graffiti and a lot of neglect — the last paint job was in 1970 — about 15 volunteer painters, ninth graders who belong to the Junior Optimist Club at Stephens Junior High School, showed up Saturday and donated a day's labor.

Ara did not seem too worried by the graffiti — believed to be the work of teenagers.

It's "symbolic of a frustration," he said.

He smiled. "You might say it's an example of management inefficiency — we're too busy getting people jobs or food to worry about it."

The purpose of the nine-year-old Westside Neighborhood Center has always been to "provide services for the low-income people in West Long Beach," said Ara.

About 30 per cent of the 28,000 residents who live west of the Los Angeles River Channel are either below or just above the federal classification of poverty-stricken — considered to be a family of four earning less than $5,500 a year, he said.

THE WEST Side is the most racially integrated area of Long Beach — about 60 per cent minority — but Ara says it's unwise to equate poverty with ethnic groups.

There are lower, middle and upper class groups among minorities, he said.

Ara says painting the center may help improve the quality of life for the entire West Side.

"Is this area going to attract permanent residents? If so, one of the factors will be well-kept homes and buildings."

"The center is interested in providing the stimulus to the rest of the community. If enough homes and stores are spruced up, the whole appearance of the city will change."

CHARLES ARA OUTSIDE WESTSIDE CENTER
'We Don't Pass Judgment On A Person Because He Or She Is Poor'

Under a bright sun, Ara stood outside and talked frankly about his job and his hopes for the center and the West Side.

ARA IS paid $17,000 a year to be executive director, and he has 16 fulltime staff members who are paid from local, state and federal funds.

Since Long Beach took over the anti-poverty program, "we've faced significant cutbacks," Ara said. About 60 per cent of the money for center programs is now allocated by the city. Formerly, the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities distributed federal anti-poverty funds.

IN THE early '60s, the civil rights and fair housing movements were led by individuals who risked their lives for those causes.

"People who are poor have no power because they are not organized. Will the city encourage dissent or be threatened by it? The fundamental issue is, will poor people control the programs or will the city?"

Ara walked over to his group of young volunteers who were taking a lunch break, drinking soft drinks and munching McDonald's hamburgers.

"Looks fantastic, great, gorgeous," he told them. The kids smiled.

The center serves 250 persons a month in a variety of ways, Ara said.

Currently, there is a vocational training program for nursing aides who want to be licensed vocational nurses; a "Disabled Advocacy Service" to help disabled persons receive the "government money to which they're entitled," said Ara.

There are classes taught by instructors from the Long Beach City College and Long Beach School for Adults; an "Asian Family Outreach" to assist in relocating new immigrants, primarily from the Philippines, and an emergency food bank program.

"WE ALWAYS say to our clients, 'What else can we help you with?'" said Ara. "We don't pass judgment on a person because he or she is poor or has personal problems."

Among the youngsters who donated time to paint was 14-year-old Tim Wood.

Why?

He may have answered for them all.

"I'll be able," he said, "to walk by on my way home from school and see that I've done something for the community."

Civic groups back art museum in L.B.

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Representatives of two museum groups have assured city officials that their organizations and others are prepared to support a new art museum in Long Beach with volunteer help and "millions of dollars" in endowment money if the city decides to build the controversial facility.

Dr. Ron Hartman, president of the Foundation of the Long Beach Museum, told the City Council last week that his organization already has budgeted money for hiring a professional fund raiser.

AND MARGARET D. Durnin, a representative of the Art Museum Alliance, said "there are several volunteer groups ready and willing to work in the new museum."

She mentioned such organizations as the Friends of the Art Museum, the Ducent Group and the Film Video Council, and said there was no doubt in her mind that all of them would see their memberships grow with the development of a new museum.

"I can assure you that we on the Art Museum Alliance board will also do our share," she said.

Ms. Durnin's and Hartman's statements were made during a hearing on the city's goals and priorities and suggested a major commitment by the city's arts groups on behalf of the proposed museum.

LAST MONTH, the City Council gave its first serious consideration to the possible use of endowment money to support the museum, although it wasn't clear at the time whether the council was thinking of using the private funds to offset the cost of construction or to subsidize exhibitions and shows once the museum was built.

It became evident at Thursday's public hearing, however, that the arts community was thinking in terms of exhibitions and shows, not construction costs.

Thus, if the City Council decides to go ahead with the museum, the likelihood is that the $15 million needed to build and furnish it will come from general revenue funds, with the cost being spread out over a number of years.

Because tax financing is such a sensitive issue, however, the council has been putting off a decision on actual construction of the facility—although it also decided to wait partly because John Dever, Long Beach's new city manager, hadn't had a chance to acquaint himself with the museum and other issues.

EARLIER THIS MONTH, Dever surprised the council by telling its members the city could have a tax-financed museum if the council was willing to support certain other measures—including a reduction in the cost of city government, a possible realignment of city services, increased user fees and a determined effort to redevelop the West Side and the downtown business district.

It's that set of proposals that the council is expected to vote on when it concludes its public goals hearings with a special session Feb. 24.

In his remarks to the council last week, Hartman said he was confident that his organization could raise millions of dollars for the museum. He said his faith rested in part on the knowledge that Long Beach's non-profit hospitals had successfully raised large sums over the years.

"The hospitals have done it, and we can do it, too," he declared. But he also told the council that the foundation needed the council's go-ahead on the museum before it could really raise significant amounts of money.

Open budget talks promised by port

Long Beach Harbor officials have assured City Manager John Dever that the Board of Harbor Commissioners will start holding open budget hearings from now on.

Dever made the disclosure while responding to a citizen's plea that the City Council give a public airing to the proposed Harbor Department budget during the council's own hearing on city goals and priorities. The council hearing, the second of two on budget priorities, was held Thursday.

The request for a public discussion of the port budget was made by Frank Springer of 216 Roycroft Ave. Springer earlier sent a letter to the council saying that recent

SHE'S gone now from the nursing home where she spent her last years, a memory to the few who cared, her sole legacy a poem the nurses found among her effects. It read:

What do you see, nurses, what do you see?

What do you think when you're looking at me?

A crabby old woman, not very wise, uncertain of habit, with faraway eyes:

Who dribbles her food and makes no reply.

When you say in a loud voice, "I do wish you'd try."

Who seems not to notice the things that you do.

And forever is losing a stocking or shoe.

Who, resisting or not, must do as you will.

Is that what you're thinking, is that what you see?

Then open your eyes, nurse: you're not looking at me.

I'll tell you who I am, as I sit here so still.

As I do your bidding, as I eat at your will.

I'm a small child of 10, with a father and mother, brothers and sisters who love me another:

A young girl of 16, with wings on her feet.

Dreaming that soon now a lover she'll meet.

A bride soon at 20, my heart gives a leap, remembering the vows that I promised to keep.

At 25, now I have young of my own, who need me to secure a happy home.

A woman of 30, my young growing fast, bound to each other with ties that shall last.

At 40, my sons have grown and are gone, but my man is beside me to see I don't mourn.

At 50, once more babies play round my knee, again we know children, my loved one and me.

Dark days are upon me, my husband is dead:

I look to the future, I shudder with dread.

For my young are all rearing young of their own, and I think of the years and the love that I've known.

I'm an old woman and nature is cruel, 'tis her job to make old age look like a fool.

The body it crumbles, grace and vigor depart:

There is now just a stone where I once had a heart.

But inside this old carcass a young girl dwells, and now and again my battered heart swells.

I remember the joys, I remember the pain, and I'm loving and living life over again.

I think of the years, all too few, gone too fast, and accept the stark fact that nothing can last.

So open your eyes, nurses, open and see—not a crabby old woman.

Look closer, see ME.

THAT'S the end of the poem, but not the end of the message. For the words linger on to haunt the thoughts of those who are blind to what their eyes see and their hearts tell them.

Look in the mirror, and what do you see? A face one day older than yesterday, a line that wasn't there before.

Walk in the park, and note the pace a half-step slower, the heartbeat two counts faster.

Sit on the park bench and think of the years flying by. Time will sit beside you, and you'll hold a wake for what used to be and is no more.

You're in the sun, but the chill finds your bones as age finds and evicts your youth. Still the spirit harbors the child you were, the spirit that one day becomes your only companion in a nursing home, the only person to whom your inner heart can speak.

Unseen, unheard and unremembered, you drift quietly out of this life to join the old woman who left a poem as a legacy. It was her autobiography—it might well be yours.

Think about it. You're older than you were when you started to read this column. You're one step closer to her.

Family fighting city hall finds the outlook very dry

By HAL LOWE
Staff Writer

The state of California is in the middle of a drought, and the Eastus Gentry family of Lakewood can sympathize. Their home has been without water for the past month.

On Dec. 28, the city cut off the water supply to the Gentry home for nonpayment of their water bill during a three-year fight which Gentry and his wife Maria say is based on principle.

Under a Lakewood city ordinance, each household in the city pays about $4.80 every two months for trash pick-up service. The resident receives this bill from the city water department. The city owns the water company, and the trash pick-up is handled by private contractors, with the city handling collection of fees.

The water and trash bills were handled separately until three years ago, when the joint billing system began.

Gentry, 60, who has lived for 26 years at 6113 Greenmeadow Road, was employed for 24 years by a Los Angeles trash disposal company. He was recently laid off when the company's owner died and the business declined.

He said he has refused to pay the trash portion of the city's bill because he always took his household's trash to work with him and disposed of it personally, never setting any trash out for pickup by the local contract crews.

A neighbor, who said she has lived near the Gentrys for about 20 years, confirms this.

Gentry noted that he had appeared before the city council several times regarding what he considers an injustice: getting charged for a service which he does not use.

He said he has always paid the water portion of his bill on time, and thought that the matter had been taken care of.

A city official noted that when the money for the trash and water bill is received, the payment is first applied toward the trash portion, and the remainder goes to the water bill.

Thus, Gentry's payment for his water was credited to the trash portion — making his water bill overdue.

This is where Gentry's trouble started. The city, claiming the Gentry family is behind on its water bill, has been pressing for payment for several months.

When it got no response, the city shut off water service last December.

Mrs. Charles Wachter, a neighbor at 6129 Greenmeadow Road, came to the Gentrys' rescue.

A hose was connected from a water outlet at the Wachter house and run to the Gentry home.

Mrs. Wachter said city officials have been telling her family that the hose connection is a violation of the city ordinance.

County health officials told the Wachters and Gentrys that the hose line is a health hazard and a violation of county codes.

Mrs. Wachter said James Grissom, Lakewood city finance officer, has called several times, most recently on Thursday, telling the Wachters their water will also be cut off unless the emergency hose line is disconnected.

At a recent city council meeting, the Gentry plight was again placed before the council, and although Mayor Jo Bennitt wrote out a check to pay the listed water arrears of about $9.80, city department officials said there would be an additional charge of $40 to the Gentrys for having their water restored.

Earlier this week, the Gentrys consulted an attorney who petitioned the court to issue an order restoring the water service until the case is resolved by city officials or the courts.

Later, the Gentrys said they were informed that the restoration order would be issued and their water turned back on.

"It's a matter of principle to us," Gentry said. "I have never used trash service. I have never needed it, so, I don't think I should pay for it."

Finance Director Grissom explained: "It's in the city ordinances. The city provides the trash service through contractors and collects the bill from the household."

"The service is there and charged for. If a resident chooses not to make use of it, that is his decision, but the city ordinance says the bill must be paid."

Grissom said the city has a lengthy procedure for attempting to collect a bill before turning off the water, a procedure which he said was followed carefully in the Gentrys' case.

Westside Center

Paint job symbolizes area hope

By BRAD ALTMAN
Staff Writer

Charles Ara surveyed the young men slapping the maroon-colored paint on the outside walls of the Westside Neighborhood Center.

"In the six years I've been here, this building has been free of graffiti," said Ara, the center's 46-year-old executive director.

At least there was no graffiti until last month, he elaborated, when a few spray-painted words appeared on a back wall of the 10,000-square-foot building at 1372 W. Willow St.

SO TO COVER up a bit of graffiti and a lot of neglect — the last paint job was in 1970 — about 15 volunteer painters, ninth graders who belong to the Junior Optimist Club at Stephens Junior High School, showed up Saturday and donated a day's labor.

Ara did not seem too worried by the graffiti — believed to be the work of teenagers.

It's "symbolic of a frustration," he said.

He smiled. "You might say it's an example of management inefficiency — we're too busy getting people jobs or food to worry about it."

The purpose of the nine-year-old Westside Neighborhood Center has always been to "provide services for the low-income people in West Long Beach," said Ara.

About 30 per cent of the 28,000 residents who live west of the Los Angeles River Channel are either below or just above the federal classification of poverty-stricken — considered to be a family of four earning less than $5,500 a year, he said.

THE WEST Side is the most racially integrated area of Long Beach — about 60 per cent minority — but Ara says it's unwise to equate poverty with ethnic groups.

There are lower, middle and upper class groups among minorities, he said.

Ara says painting the center may help improve the quality of life for the entire West Side.

Is this area going to attract permanent residents? If so, one of the factors will be well-kept homes and buildings.

"The center is interested in providing the stimulus to the rest of the community. If enough homes and stores are spruced up, the whole appearance of the city will change."

Under a bright sun, Ara stood outside and talked frankly about his job and his hopes for the center and the West Side.

ARA IS paid $17,000 a year to be executive director, and he has 16 fulltime staff members who are paid from local, state and federal funds.

Since Long Beach took over the antipoverty program, "we've faced significant cutbacks" Ara said. About 60 per cent of the money for center programs is now allocated by the city. Formerly, the Long Beach Commission on Economic Opportunities distributed federal antipoverty funds.

IN THE early '60s, the civil rights and fair housing movements were led by individuals who risked their lives for those causes.

"People who are poor have no power because they are not organized. Will the city encourage dissent or be threatened by it? The fundamental issue is, will poor people control the programs or will the city?"

Ara walked over to his group of young volunteers who were taking a lunch break, drinking soft drinks and munching McDonald's hamburgers.

"Looks fantastic, great, gorgeous," he told them. The kids smiled.

The center serves 250 persons a month in a variety of ways, Ara said.

Currently, there is a vocational training program for nursing aides who want to be licensed vocational nurses; a "Disabled Advocacy Service" to help disabled persons receive the "government money to which they're entitled," said Ara.

There are classes taught by instructors from the Long Beach City College and Long Beach School for Adults; an "Asian Family Outreach" to assist in relocating new immigrants, primarily from the Philippines, and an emergency food bank program.

"WE ALWAYS say to our clients, 'What else can we help you with?'" said Ara. "We don't pass judgment on a person because he or she is poor or has personal problems."

Among the youngsters who donated time to paint was 14-year-old Tim Wood.

Why?

He may have answered for them all.

"I'll be able," he said, "to walk by on my way home from school and see that I've done something for the community."

Civic groups back art museum in L.B.

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

Representatives of two museum groups have assured city officials that their organizations and others are prepared to support a new art museum in Long Beach with volunteer help and "millions of dollars" in endowment money if the city decides to build the controversial facility.

Dr. Ron Hartman, president of the Foundation of the Long Beach Museum, told the City Council last week that his organization already has budgeted money for hiring a professional fund raiser.

AND MARGARET D. Durnin, a representative of the Art Museum Alliance, said "there are several volunteer groups ready and willing to work in the new museum."

She mentioned such organizations as the Friends of the Art Museum, the Docent Group and the Film Video Council, and said there was no doubt in her mind that all of them would see their memberships grow with the development of a new museum.

"I can assure you that we on the Art Museum Alliance board will also do our share," she said.

Ms. Durnin's and Hartman's statements were made during a hearing on the city's goals and priorities and suggested a major commitment by the city's arts groups on behalf of the proposed museum.

LAST MONTH, the City Council gave its first serious consideration to the possible use of endowment money to support the museum, although it wasn't clear at the time whether the council was thinking of using the private funds to offset the cost of construction or to subsidize exhibitions and shows once the museum was built.

It became evident at Thursday's public hearing, however, that the arts community was thinking in terms of exhibitions and shows, not construction costs.

Thus, if the City Council decides to go ahead with the museum, the likelihood is that the $15 million needed to build and furnish it will come from general revenue funds, with the cost being spread out over a number of years.

Because tax financing is such a sensitive issue, however, the council has been putting off a decision on actual construction of the facility—although it also decided to wait partly because John Dever, Long Beach's new city manager, hadn't had a chance to acquaint himself with the museum and other issues.

EARLIER THIS MONTH, Dever surprised the council by telling its members the city could have a tax-financed museum if the council was willing to support certain other measures—including a reduction in the cost of city government, a possible realignment of city services, increased user fees and a determined effort to redevelop the West Side and the downtown business district.

It's that set of proposals that the council is expected to vote on when it concludes its public goals hearings with a special session Feb. 24.

In his remarks to the council last week, Hartman said he was confident that his organization could raise millions of dollars for the museum. He said his faith rested in part on the knowledge that Long Beach's non-profit hospitals had successfully raised large sums over the years.

"The hospitals have done it, and we can do it, too," he declared.

But he also told the council that the foundation needed the council's go-ahead on the museum before it could really raise significant amounts of money.

Open budget talks promised by port

Long Beach Harbor officials have assured City Manager John Dever that the Board of Harbor Commissioners will start holding open budget hearings from now on.

Dever made the disclosure while responding to a citizen's plea that the City Council give a public airing to the proposed Harbor Department budget during the council's own hearing on city goals and priorities. The council hearing, the second of two on budget priorities, was held Thursday.

The request for a public discussion of the port budget was made by Frank Springer of 216 Roycroft Ave. Springer earlier sent a letter to the council saying that recent

SHE'S gone now from the nursing home where she spent her last years, a memory to the few who cared, her sole legacy a poem the nurses found among her effects. It read:

New homes at Poly

The cost of land, labor and materials has pushed the price of new homes beyond reach of the low-income family, so it was a hopeful sign last week to read of the new program to build lower-priced houses within the Poly High Neighborhood Development Project.

Three-bedroom, two-bath homes will be sold for less than $40,000. Ground was broken last week on the first of 10 such residences.

"Not for many years have single-family houses been built in this area," said Dick Major, Long Beach's city housing director.

THE CITY HAS BEEN struggling for several years now — handicapped largely by cancellation or cutbacks of financing by the federal government — to halt deterioration and provide good housing in the area bounded by Atlantic and California avenues, Anaheim Street and Pacific Coast Highway.

Things are now happening, and it looks as if the long delays are ended.

Shapell Government Housing has completed 78 townhouse units north of 17th Street within the project and they are about 50 per cent occupied. The firm has an architect preparing plans for an additional 50 units, to be built north of Esther Street.

The Shapell units are all rentals. The new program is the first to provide new, single-family homes for purchase within the project.

All of the sites for the new homes will be south of 15th Street, in the area of the project which primarily involves rehabilitation of existing dwellings. Some scattered buildings, however, are too far deteriorated to be brought up to decent housing standards. They will be demolished, and the land used as sites for the new homes. Ultimately, there will be about 25 to 30 such sites.

The individual sites are being acquired by the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency, which directs the Poly High Neighborhood Development Project. The agency has the property cleared, then sells it to private developers.

The private builders — currently James Noel and William Smith Co., both of Long Beach, and Mead Housing Foundation of Los Angeles — are restricted in the amount they can charge for the finished dwelling, under terms of the federal financing, so the homes will be available to low-income families. To help such families, down payments will be 10 per cent or less, and interest will be held down.

IT IS GOOD, TOO, that the city is insisting that former residents of the project area who were forced to move because of the redevelopment will be given first priority in buying one of the new homes. A similar priority was given on the rentals north of 17th Street.

The Central Area has been one of Long Beach's worst from the standpoint of substandard housing. Upgrading it is not only necessary for the well-being of its residents, but is important to the successful rehabilitation of downtown Long Beach as well.

A thriving downtown core must have good residential areas surrounding it — and this is a firm step in that direction.

Nuclear arms ban

When President Carter said in his inaugural address that the ultimate goal of the United States is "the elimination of all nuclear weapons from this earth," he voiced the desire of people throughout the world.

When he proposed this week that all nuclear testing be halted "instantly and completely," he was calling for the first step toward that ultimate goal.

The second step is not to build new nuclear weapons.

When he said he encouraged the Soviet Union to accept his proposal for a ban on all testing, he sent an encouraging message of peace.

A recent issue of U.S. News and World Report, in its "Washington Whispers" feature, carried an item that casts doubt on the sincerity of the Russians' message. It read:

"Since last October, the Ford Administration made 10 different proposals to Russia — all rejected — for an agreement to limit nuclear arms. Outgoing administration officials speculate that Moscow believes it can get a 'better deal' from Carter."

The speculation by the Ford staff, of course, may well be tinged with political partisanship, but the rejection of all proposals for limitation of nuclear arms seems at odds with the "encouraging message" the Soviets sent President Carter.

We sincerely hope agreements can be reached on arms limitation, and elimination of nuclear weapons would remove an awesome burden from all the world's people, but we trust President Carter will move cautiously in his dealings with the Soviet Union. Its leaders have yet to show they have the same concerns for humanity.

Business vs. environment

SACRAMENTO — Dow Chemical Company's Jan. 19 announcement that it had abandoned plans to construct a $500 million complex on the Sacramento River near San Francisco Bay has dumped yet another heavy issue into the Legislature's lap.

As if, with the death penalty, property tax reform and school financial issues, among others, it needed another controversial and complex question needing immediate answers.

Dow said it was dropping its California project because trying to navigate the proposal through local, state and federal government's cumbersome, multi-layered permit processes was tying up too much of its capital for too long a time.

REPUBLICAN opponents of Gov. Brown gleefully seized the opportunity to sing their favorite song, the one about Democrats being anti-business, and labor jumped in to restate its warning about the danger to the employment environment caused by conservation-crazed posy-pluckers.

Having made their declamations, the critics then took time to look at what had happened and found to their embarrassment that Dow's problems were primarily with the office of State Attorney General Evelle Younger, a Republican; with the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, a local agency, and with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Gov. Brown, it appeared, was guilty of not using his office to pressure local, state and federal agencies to violate environmental protection laws.

It will be a while yet before the various public spokesmen have completed their ritual posturing, but then, finally, the Legislature will start getting down to the nitty gritty.

And the elements of the problem are relatively simple and clear to see, if they are not obscured, obfuscated, roiled and muddled by all the ritual posturing.

Those elements are: Industry should be encouraged to locate and expand in California; California's environment is precious, already damaged, and in great danger of further damage; all those local, state and federal regulations designed to protect the environment were developed different permits from 12 different governmental agencies at the local, state and federal level. It said responses to its applications were slow in coming. It said there was unnecessary duplication.

Some of the things government makes businesses do are absurd and absent of common sense. They should not be condoned. Once again, the objectives of the Legislature this session, on this subject, are relatively simple to state.

Industry should be encouraged to locate and expand in California, but without danger or with, at most, minimal danger to the environment. But industry should be able to learn, quickly, whether what it wants to do is permitted by existing law, or conforms to existing guidelines.

ALL OF THAT is without much argument. Now comes the sticky part.

Obviously, the most effective and efficient method of meeting that final objective is for industry to submit its application to one governmental agency, which determines if the proposal conforms to one set of environmental protection standards.

At what governmental level should that agency be located? Obviously, for purposes of uniformity, it should be located at the federal level, so Dow need not be required to build a plant one way in California and another way in New Jersey.

But that's kind of Big Brotherish, isn't it? Does California really wish to yield all of its authority to protect its environment to the federal government? Do local governments really wish to yield all of their authority to protect their local character to the state and/or the federal government?

Being pro-business and anti-big government at the same time isn't easy.

Bob Schmidt

out of necessity because of industry's long record of disrespect for the environment.

That last should not be forgotten, and environmental groups are not going to let the Legislature forget it.

First came the problems: The dumping of sewage into rivers, the dumping of unsafe chemicals and other substances into rivers, lakes and the air, the raping of the landscape, the other abuses.

Then came the governmental efforts to halt the destruction, mitigate the danger, prevent future jeopardy.

The question now is, have the protective efforts gone as far as they can go to be efficient? Is the danger to the economy now greater than the danger to the environment?

Carter can't slash '78 budget

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's people are working furiously these days to meet a Feb. 15 deadline for putting their own stamp on Gerald Ford's budget for 1977-78. How much of a stamp will it be? Not much.

Mr. Carter may find the situation frustrating; conservatives will find it comforting. Viewed in terms of deficit spending, Mr. Ford's budget was bad enough. Mr. Ford projected income of $393 billion and outgo of $440 billion for a $47 billion deficit. Mr. Carter already has promised to make bad matters worse. His combination of tax cuts and spending increases will produce a $75 billion deficit.

But if the new President had more time to work on the figures, the country might be facing a budget to boggle the mind. He doesn't have the time. Under the Budget Reform Act, the various legislative authorizing committees must begin pulling their reports together on Feb. 15. The reports go to the two budget committees on March 15. The budget committees must recommend income and outgo totals to Congress by April 15. The House and Senate then have until May 15 to fix the final target figures.

THESE DEADLINES, unlike most timetables on Capitol Hill, are taken seriously. The budget committees still are fired by the zeal of reform; they performed efficiently last year, and their chairmen mean to match the record this year. And wholly apart from their pride in the reform process, the committees see the new procedures as the one mechanism by which Congress can meet the White House on equal terms.

Carter putting Kremlin to test

By JAMES WIEGHART
Knight News Service

LONDON — Behind the publicly pronounced themes of Vice President Mondale's European diplomatic tour — those of continuity, consultation and cooperation — there is the less obvious one of distrust and suspicion of the Soviet Union.

Mondale has used some rather tough language towards the Soviets and East-West relations in general throughout the trip — in Brussels, when he met with the NATO consul, in Bonn, where he met with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, and in West Berlin, where he visited the wall and exchanged remarks with Mayor Klaus Schultz.

After almost eight years of detente under Republican administrations, Mondale's rather hardline remarks must be provoking a good deal of evaluation, discussion and concern in the Kremlin, whose political, economic and military experts are undoubtedly weighing every word and action the new Democratic administration

Within the fixed timetable, Mr. Carter's people, competent as they are, cannot do much tinkering with 1,300 budget accounts. Some large lump sums can be added — another $4 billion for public works spending. Some large lump sums can be subtracted — $2 billion in tax cuts for business. The deadlines will not permit the thousands of individual revisions that would have to be made to accommodate a national health insurance plan or the federalization of public welfare.

Mr. Carter faces a second difficulty in shaping the budget for fiscal '78. His predecessors have faced it also. This is the sheer momentum of federal programs already in motion. Roughly 75 percent of the budget — about $332 billion out of the $440 billion total — is relatively uncontrollable.

This needs to be understood by those who naively imagine it is a simple matter to whack $50 billion here and add $40 billion there. The budget projects $85.7 billion in payments under Social Security and railroad retirement. The figures are untouchable. The budget included $20.3 billion in federal retirement. Untouchable. There is an item of $31.2 billion in net interest on debts. Untouchable. There is nothing Mr. Carter can do, even if he were so minded, to cut costs of Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, veterans' benefits, and public assistance payments.

The President has a third problem also. During the course of his campaign he made extravagant promises — and he made them in two directions at the same time. On the spending side, he promised a proliferation of new programs. Some of these were massive — vast new sums for education, welfare and comprehensive health insurance. Others were fiscally modest — a new Consumer Advocacy Agency. They all add up. Simultaneously, he is committed absolutely to submitting a balanced budget for fiscal '81.

CONGRESS MAY help him out of this dilemma by balking at some of these grandiose ventures. When young men and women in the working force fully awaken to what Social Security is costing them, we are likely to see political rebellion. Five years hence a worker earning $23,700 will be walloped $3,247 in combined employer-employee taxes for Social Security alone. National health insurance would require much more. A sensitive House will be cautious.

In sum, Mr. Carter hasn't the time, he hasn't the power, and he hasn't the political support to write major innovations into the budget for the coming fiscal year. Like the skipper of one of those prodigious supertankers, Mr. Carter is discovering that he can change course a few degrees, here or a few degrees there. But it takes 20 miles of ocean to turn around and half a day to stop. Next year, maybe, he will have a budget, 30 percent of which he may legitimately call his own.

utters and takes in an effort to figure out what tack President Carter intends to take vis a vis Soviet-U.S. relations.

The reports back to Moscow on Mondale's trip cannot be too reassuring to the Soviets, despite public statements by Carter that he intends to pursue detente, particularly the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

State Department experts traveling with Mondale who worked under former Secretary of State Kissinger have gone out of their way to pooh-pooh the notion that the Carter administration intends to take a harder line against the Soviets than did the Nixon and Ford administrations.

But Mondale's message to Moscow does seem to be different. In Brussels, he warned NATO officials that the new President is deeply concerned about the continuing Soviet buildup and he proposed that NATO begin responding by stepping up its defense spending. The United States would lead the way in this regards, he said.

Mondale also ruled out any unilateral reductions in NATO forces, declaring that none would be made without comparable cutbacks in the Communist Warsaw Pact.

He also assured NATO that they would be fully consulted on SALT negotiations and said that the United States intends to make no new concessions in an effort to get the stalled talks moving.

In his talks with Schmidt, Mondale said that the new administration had no intention of reducing the current 300,000 U.S. force level in NATO, despite almost yearly proposals by Democratic liberals in Congress that this be done.

But Mondale's strongest rhetoric came during his stopover in West Berlin, where he publicly stated in the strongest terms his repugnance to the Berlin Wall, then repeated those statements in a meeting with reporters en route to Rome, apparently for emphasis.

THE WALL, Mondale said, is "a symbol" of the dramatic failure of a social system. There have been a lot of walls built in the history of mankind, but very few have been built solely for the purpose of keeping people in. He then went on to compare the symbolism of the wall to two nearby symbols of the failure of Adolph Hitler and Nazism — the bunker where Hitler committed suicide and the Reichstag building.

All of this does not mean that the Carter administration is scrapping detente efforts in favor of resuming the cold war. But it does mean that the Russians are being put on notice that they can't have it both ways. Either Moscow will have to curb its extraordinary military buildup of the past five years or forego any real chance for meaningful arms limitations or reduction in tensions.

In the past, new American administrations have had to sit out the first year or so in the White House, waiting to see where the Soviets would test its will and fortitude. It looks like Carter is reversing that role and putting the Kremlin to a test.

New homes at Poly

Shortage of land, labor and money has pushed the price of new homes beyond reach of the average family, so it was a relief last week to read of the new program to build lower-priced houses within the Poly High Neighborhood Development Project.

Three-bedroom, two-bath homes will be sold for less than $40,000. Ground was broken last week on the first of 10 such residences.

"Not for many years have single-family houses been built in this area," said Dick Major, Long Beach's city housing director.

THE CITY HAS BEEN struggling for several years now — hampered largely by cancellations or cutbacks of financing by the federal government — to halt deterioration and provide good housing in the area bounded by Atlantic and California avenues, Anaheim Street and Pacific Coast Highway.

Things are now happening, and it looks as if the long delays are ended.

Shapell Government Housing has completed 78 townhouse units north of 17th Street within the project and they are about 50 per cent occupied. The firm has an architect preparing plans for an additional 50 units, to be built north of Esther Street.

The Shapell units are all rentals. The new program is the first to provide new, single-family homes for purchase within the project.

All of the sites for the new homes will be south of 15th Street, in the area of the project which primarily involves rehabilitation of existing dwellings. Some seattered buildings, however, are too far deteriorated to be brought up to decent housing standards. They will be demolished, and the land used as sites for the new homes. Ultimately, there will be about 25 to 30 such sites.

The individual sites are being acquired by the Long Beach Redevelopment Agency, which directs the Poly High Neighborhood Development Project. The agency has the property cleared, then sells it to private developers.

The private builders — currently James Noel and William Smith Co., both of Long Beach, and Mead Housing Foundation of Los Angeles — are restricted in the amount they can charge for the finished dwelling, under terms of the federal financing, so the homes will be available to low-income families. To help such families, down payments will be 10 per cent or less, and interest will be held down.

IT IS GOOD, TOO, that the city is insisting that former residents of the project area who were forced to move because of the redevelopment will be given first priority in buying one of the new homes. A similar priority was given on the rentals north of 17th Street.

The Central Area has been one of Long Beach's worst from the standpoint of substandard housing. Upgrading it is not only necessary for the well-being of its residents, but is important to the successful rehabilitation of downtown Long Beach as well.

A thriving downtown core must have good residential areas surrounding it — and this is a firm step in that direction.

Nuclear arms ban

When President Carter said in his inaugural address that the ultimate goal of the United States is "the elimination of all nuclear weapons from this earth," he voiced the desire of people throughout the world.

When he proposed this week that all nuclear testing be halted "instantly and completely," he was calling for the first step toward the ultimate goal.

Unfortunately, that step is not one the United States can take alone.

The President acknowledged he did not know whether the Soviet Union would agree to his proposal for an immediate halt to all testing, but he said the Russians had sent "an encouraging message" of response.

A recent issue of U.S. News and World Report, in its "Washington Whispers" feature, carried an item that casts doubt on the sincerity of the Russians' message. It read:

"Since last October, the Ford Administration made 10 different proposals to Russia — all rejected — for an agreement to limit nuclear arms. Outgoing administration officials speculate that Moscow believes it can get a 'better deal' from Carter."

The speculation by the Ford staff, of course, may well be tinged with political partisanship, but the rejection of all proposals for limitation of nuclear arms seems at odds with the "encouraging message" the Soviets sent President Carter.

We sincerely hope agreements can be reached on arms limitation, and elimination of nuclear weapons would remove an awesome burden from all the world's people, but we trust President Carter will move cautiously in his dealings with the Soviet Union. Its leaders have yet to show they have the same concerns for humanity.

Business vs. environment

SACRAMENTO — Dow Chemical Company's Jan. 19 announcement that it had abandoned plans to construct a $500 million complex on the Sacramento River near San Francisco Bay has dumped yet another heavy issue into the Legislature's lap.

As if, with the death penalty, property tax reform and school financial issues, among others, it needed another controversial and complex question needing immediate answers.

Dow said it was dropping its California project because trying to navigate the proposal through local, state and federal government's cumbersome, multi-layered permit processes was tying up too much of its capital for too long a time.

REPUBLICAN opponents of Gov. Brown gleefully seized the opportunity to sing their favorite song, the one about Democrats being anti-business, and labor jumped in to restate its warning about the danger to the employment environment caused by conservation-crazed posy-pluckers.

Having made their declamations, the critics then took time to look at what had happened and found to their embarrassment that Dow's problems were primarily with the office of State Attorney General Evelle Younger, a Republican; with the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District, a local agency, and with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Gov. Brown, it appeared, was guilty of not using his office to pressure local, state and federal agencies to violate environmental protection laws.

It will be a while yet before the various public spokesmen have completed their ritual posturing, but then, finally, the Legislature will start getting down to the nitty gritty.

And the elements of the problem are relatively simple and clear to see, if they are not obscured, obfuscated, roiled and muddled by all the ritual posturing.

Those elements are: Industry should be encouraged to locate and expand in California; California's environment is precious, already damaged, and in great danger of further damage; all those local, state and federal regulations designed to protect the environment were developed out of necessity because of industry's long record of disrespect for the environment.

That last should not be forgotten, and environmental groups are not going to let the Legislature forget it.

First came the problems: The dumping of sewage into rivers, the dumping of unsafe chemicals and other substances into rivers, lakes and the air, the raping of the landscape, the other abuses.

Then came the governmental efforts to halt the destruction, mitigate the danger, prevent future jeopardy.

The question now is, have the protective efforts gone as far as they can go to be efficient? Is the danger to the economy now greater than the danger to the environment?

Dow said it was required to secure 65 different permits from 12 different governmental agencies at the local, state and federal level. It said responses to its applications were slow in coming. It said there was unnecessary duplication.

Some of the things government makes businesses do are absurd and absent of common sense. They should not be condoned. Once again, the objectives of the Legislature this session, on this subject, are relatively simple to state.

Industry should be encouraged to locate and expand in California, but without danger or with, at most, minimal danger to the environment. But industry should be able to learn; quickly, whether what it wants to do is permitted by existing law, or conforms to existing guidelines.

ALL OF THAT is without much argument. Now comes the sticky part.

Obviously, the most effective and efficient method of meeting that final objective is for industry to submit its application to one governmental agency, which determines if the proposal conforms to one set of environmental protection standards.

At what governmental level should that agency be located? Obviously, for purposes of uniformity, it should be located at the federal level, so Dow need not be required to build a plant one way in California and another way in New Jersey.

But that's kind of Big Brotherish, isn't it? Does California really wish to yield all of its authority to protect its environment to the federal government? Do local governments really wish to yield all of their authority to protect their local character to the state and/or the federal government?

Being pro-business and anti-big government at the same time isn't easy.

Carter can't slash '78 budget

WASHINGTON — Jimmy Carter's people are working furiously these days to meet a Feb. 15 deadline for putting their own stamp on Gerald Ford's budget for 1977-78. How much of a stamp will it be? Not much.

Mr. Carter may find the situation frustrating; conservatives will find it comforting. Viewed in terms of deficit spending, Mr. Ford's budget was bad enough. Mr. Ford projected income of $393 billion and outgo of $440 billion for a $47 billion deficit. Mr. Carter already has promised to make bad matters worse. His combination of tax cuts and spending increases will produce a $75 billion deficit.

But if the new President had more time to work on the figures, the country might be facing a budget to boggle the mind. He doesn't have the time. Under the Budget Reform Act, the various legislative authorizing committees must begin pulling their reports together on Feb. 15. The reports go to the two budget committees on March 15. The budget committees must recommend income and outgo totals to Congress by April 15. The House and Senate then have until May 15 to fix the final target figures.

THESE DEADLINES, unlike most timetables on Capitol Hill, are taken seriously. The budget committees still are fired by the zeal of reform; they performed efficiently last year, and their chairmen mean to match the record this year. And wholly apart from their pride in the reform process, the committees see the new procedures as the one mechanism by which Congress can meet the White House on equal terms.

Within the fixed timetable, Mr. Carter's people, competent as they are, cannot do much tinkering with 1,300 budget accounts. Some large lump sums can be added — another $4 billion for public works spending. Some large lump sums can be subtracted — $2 billion in tax cuts for business. The deadlines will not permit the thousands of individual revisions that would have to be made to accommodate a national health insurance plan or the federalization of public welfare.

Mr. Carter faces a second difficulty in shaping the budget for fiscal '78. His predecessors have faced it also. This is the sheer momentum of federal programs already in motion. Roughly 75 percent of the budget — about $332 billion out of the $440 billion total — is relatively uncontrollable.

This needs to be understood by those who naively imagine it is a simple matter to whack $50 billion here and add $40 billion there. The budget projects $85.7 billion in payments under Social Security and railroad retirement. The figures are untouchable. The budget included $20.3 billion in federal retirement. Untouchable. There is an item of $31.2 billion in net interest on debts. Untouchable. There is nothing Mr. Carter can do, even if he were so minded, to cut costs of Medicare, Medicaid, food stamps, veterans' benefits, and public assistance payments.

The President has a third problem also. During the course of his campaign he made extravagant promises — and he made them in two directions at the same time. On the spending side, he promised a proliferation of new programs. Some of these were massive — vast new sums for education, welfare and comprehensive health insurance. Others were fiscally modest — a new Consumer Advocacy Agency. They all add up. Simultaneously, he is committed absolutely to submitting a balanced budget for fiscal '81.

CONGRESS MAY help him out of this dilemma by balking at some of these grandiose ventures. When young men and women in the working force fully awaken to what Social Security is costing them, we are likely to see political rebellion. Five years hence a worker earning $23,700 will be walloped $3,247 in combined employer-employee taxes for Social Security alone. National health insurance would require much more. A sensitive House will be cautious.

In sum, Mr. Carter hasn't the time, he hasn't the power, and he hasn't the political support to write major innovations into the budget for the coming fiscal year. Like the skipper of one of those prodigious supertankers, Mr. Carter is discovering that he can change course a few degrees here or a few degrees there. But it takes 20 miles of ocean to turn around and half a day to stop. Next year, maybe, he will have a budget, 30 percent of which he may legitimately call his own.

Carter putting Kremlin to test

By JAMES WIEGHART
Knight News Service

LONDON — Behind the publicly pronounced themes of Vice President Mondale's European diplomatic tour — those of continuity, consultation and cooperation — there is the less obvious one of distrust and suspicion of the Soviet Union.

Mondale has used some rather tough language towards the Soviets and East-West relations in general throughout the trip — in Brussels, when he met with the NATO council, in Bonn, where he met with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, and in West Berlin, where he visited the wall and exchanged remarks with Mayor Klaus Schultz.

After almost eight years of detente under Republican administrations, Mondale's rather hardline remarks must be provoking a good deal of evaluation, discussion and concern in the Kremlin, whose political, economic and military experts are undoubtedly weighing every word and action the new Democratic administration utters and takes in an effort to figure out what tack President Carter intends to take vis a vis Soviet-U.S. relations.

The reports back to Moscow on Mondale's trip cannot be too reassuring to the Soviets, despite public statements by Carter that he intends to pursue detente, particularly the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT).

State Department experts traveling with Mondale who worked under former Secretary of State Kissinger have gone out of their way to pooh-pooh the notion that the Carter administration intends to take a harder line against the Soviets than did the Nixon and Ford administrations.

But Mondale's message to Moscow does seem to be different. In Brussels, he warned NATO officials that the new President is deeply concerned about the continuing Soviet buildup and he proposed that NATO begin responding by stepping up its defense spending. The United States would lead the way in this regard, he said.

Mondale also ruled out any unilateral reductions in NATO forces, declaring that none would be made without comparable cutbacks in the Communist Warsaw Pact.

He also assured NATO that they would be fully consulted on SALT negotiations and said that the United States intends to make no new concessions in an effort to get the stalled talks moving.

In his talks with Schmidt, Mondale said that the new administration had no intention of reducing the current 300,000 U.S. force level in NATO, despite almost yearly proposals by Democratic liberals in Congress that this be done.

But Mondale's strongest rhetoric came during his stopover in West Berlin, where he publicly stated in the strongest terms his repugnance to the Berlin Wall, then repeated those statements in a meeting with reporters en route to Rome, apparently for emphasis.

THE WALL, Mondale said, is "a symbol" of the dramatic failure of a social system. There have been a lot of walls built in the history of mankind, but very few have been built solely for the purpose of keeping people in. He then went on to compare the symbolism of the wall to two nearby symbols of the failure of Adolph Hitler and Nazism — the bunker where Hitler committed suicide and the Reichstag building.

All of this does not mean that the Carter administration is scrapping detente efforts in favor of resuming the cold war. But it does mean that the Russians are being put on notice that they can't have it both ways. Either Moscow will have to curb its extraordinary military buildup of the past five years or forego any real chance for meaningful arms limitations or reduction in tensions.

In the past, new American administrations have had to sit out the first year or so in the White House, waiting to see where the Soviets would test its will and fortitude. It looks like Carter is reversing that role and putting the Kremlin to a test.

Specter of divided Canada

NEW YORK — The Prime minister of the Canadian Province of Quebec, Rene Levesque, has been in New York this week explaining to the Economic Club why he thinks Quebec should be an independent nation and a good investment for U.S. money. He suggests some scary problems.

He is one of the most intelligent and eloquent visitors we've had around here for quite a while, but his political objective — a separate Quebec sovereign nation on our New England border, and his hope of raising American capital to demonstrate its economic viability and thus promote its separating from the Canadian Union — raises such difficult and delicate questions that one almost hesitates to write about them.

Some things, however, may be said without offense. The political controversy between Rene Levesque and Pierre Elliot Trudeau, the prime minister of Canada, over relations between the provinces and the central government in Ottawa, is none of our business. And the government in Washington is being meticulously careful, even in private conversations, to avoid even the appearance of intervention in the internal affairs of Canada.

But when the prime minister of Quebec comes here to New York, which is virtually broke, it is a fair assumption that he was not offering to lend money to Mayor Beame or to David Rockefeller at Chase Manhattan, but looking for financial aid to help achieve his political objective of separating Quebec from the Canadian federation.

Levesque made a very good speech. He

James Reston

was candid that the prime objective of his party was "political sovereignty."

He said: "We believe we are a nation, with all the essential requirements: a clearly defined territory, our own history, a common language and culture, a collective will to live together and maintain a national identity."

HE WAS ALSO clever in his historical analogies between Quebec and the original 13 American colonies. His ancestors, he said, were among the greatest discoverers, missionaries, and fur traders, the first white men to explore North America as far as the Rockies and Louisiana.

"Independence for Quebec, therefore," he insisted, "now appears as normal. I might say almost as inevitable, as it was for the American states of two hundred years ago. . . In my opinion, the important question . . . is not whether Quebec will become independent, nor indeed when it will happen, but how, rather, in due time, Quebecers can be expected to take full charge of their own political affairs. . ."

There is something in Levesque's historical analogy, but not much. The 13 American colonies tried the separatist route of independent commonwealths, tied loosely together, as he suggests a customs union with Ottawa, but it was a spectacular failure in the American Articles of Confederation, and had to be scrapped and followed by a more perfect union centered on the federal capital and not on the states.

No doubt Canada is different, but since Levesque has come down to New York and raised these nostalgic, historic points and invited us to invest in the sovereignty of Quebec as an independent nation, maybe we have to remind him that we have been experimenting with the narrow concept of states rights since Appomattox, and after a hundred years, are just beginning to go the other way and bring the American South into the Union under Jimmy Carter. His timing here was not very good.

In fact, the idea is beginning to get through to state legislatures along the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes that they have to form regional compacts to deal with their common problems to deal with one another and with Canada along the border.

Also, that they have to deal with Mexico and its eight million illegal aliens in the United States. And that even the powerful nation-state centered on Washington cannot really deal with the integrity of its money, the pollution of the atmosphere, or the security of its airways — except on a worldwide basis.

Accordingly, New York has heard this eloquent and yearning voice out of Quebec City with admiration — because he speaks so well and is so earnest — but with regret. The melody of separatism, like the longing of the Scots and the Welsh for independence, seems a little out of date and almost tragic.

The guess here is that Prime Minister Rene Levesque has misjudged the Economic Club of New York, the bankers of New York, like David Rockefeller, the multinational corporations, and even the press, though he has been a brilliant journalist.

THEY ARE ALL having to deal with a different world. They all want to make money as usual, but the notion of a separate Quebec, breaking off from Ottawa, with even the possibility of a divided Canada — between the Soviet border and the United States — is not the sort of thing they are likely to invest in over the long run.

What Levesque, bright and eloquent as he is, has apparently misunderstood is that the United States believes in Canada. It even loves its neighbor, and is startled by the thought that Canada might break down into a series of squabbling states, even if some of them wanted to join the American Republic.

President Carter understood this point a little late. He sent Vice President Mondale to Europe and Japan, and arranged for Secretary of State Vance to go to the Middle East and Moscow in February or March.

But only late in the agenda for the next couple of months, he invited Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada and the new President of Mexico, Jose Lopez Portillo, to come to Washington.

It is high time, for Canada, and not Europe or Japan, is our most important trading partner. And Mexico, with its eight million illegal aliens, is our most serious social and economic problem. Quebec, the Rio Grande, and Panama may be the most critical foreign questions for President Carter in the next four years.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Jan. 30, the 30th day of 1977. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1933, Adolf Hitler became Chancellor of Germany.

On this date —

In 1649, King Charles I of England was beheaded.

In 1835, a would-be assassin fired two shots at President Andrew Jackson at the Capitol in Washington, but missed.

In 1847, the California town of Yerba Buena was renamed San Francisco.

In 1882, Franklin D. Roosevelt was born at Hyde Park, N.Y.

No special favors

At the Lakewood City Council meeting of Jan. 11, Donald Plunkett sought to make ineffective one of the most important requirements of adding to one's home by his attempt to coerce and intimidate the council into doing things his way.

Anyone else that wants to add a room to his home has to follow procedure. They apply to the Building Department, then the Planning Department and finally, if both these contacts are negative, to the City Council, appealing their case.

Mr. Plunkett seems to feel, again, that the law of the land doesn't apply to him, because he promptly asked the council to override the Building Department's objection, and even brought a lawyer with him to attempt to ram through his position, and thereby to have the council do his bidding.

Eric David an avid city improvement advocate, strongly objected for the reasons already mentioned, and stated the feeling many of us have, that Donald Plunkett isn't any better than anybody else, even if his position as councilman might make him think so. The feeling in the audience was similar to David's, as every time Plunkett continued to push for his attorney to be allowed to speak, he was nearly shouted down.

Mayor Jo Bennett is to be commended for her gentle but firm refusal to allow Plunkett's attorney to be heard at that time. He had previously been forced to plead Plunkett's case during "Oral Communications," which allows individuals to challenge those they oppose. During the regular business of the meeting, this is not allowed, and it is during the latter time that Plunkett attempted to force his presentation.

Since the recall petitions were approved, only the apathy of the voters can possibly cause his remaining on the council. If he does remain in office, God help us all, for his attacks surely will only increase and become more bizarre.

Plunkett brags in his editorials what he has done. He has not done anything without the majority vote of the council. In his particular case, he was shown most dramatically that he really isn't better than anybody else.

Where blame lies

The natural gas shortage, which could aggravate the current unemployment problem and leave many schools and homes cold this winter is "Washington D.C." made.

Since the 1950's, the federal government has controlled the price of interstate gas while deregulating intrastate gas. The maximum price the government allows on natural gas interstate usage is a small fraction of unregulated intrastate gas. It wasn't until the mid-70's that the interstate ceiling was moderately increased. But despite such raise, the average price of interstate gas remains too low. In sum, the government has for quite some time underpriced interstate natural gas relative to its market value.

The government's preoccupation with low prices to the consumer has neglected his need for adequate supplies. The inevitable outcome has been the fiasco that is currently plain for all of us to see.

Price controls are as effective as trying to steer a ship with a locked rudder. Controls that artificially depress prices are conducive to wasteful use of resources and discourage investment that must be undertaken to locate new reserves.

What happens when supplies begin to dwindle? The consumer will inevitably pay higher prices, regardless of controls. For example, the federal government has approved the importation of liquefied natural gas from overseas that will cost two to three times as much delivered to the U.S. East Coast as domestic gas delivered there. This is a prime case of bureaucracy versus the market system. Our government creates a shortage by unwise regulatory policies and then tries to relieve such shortage by importing gas at prices that would have induced greater domestic production.

It has become increasingly clear from public surveys that most Americans realize the economic benefits of deregulation. Let's hope President Carter is cognizant of such public opinion polls, but more important, on not emphasizing low prices without regard to supply.

It's still your money

I am writing as a concerned taxpayer. Several weeks ago I received a questionnaire from Sacramento. It was from my state legislator. The questionnaire dealt mainly with taxes, and I was pleasantly surprised by our elected officials' concern for the taxpayer.

I was going to answer the questionnaire, but then I realized that all the changes this elected official wanted to make would only shift the tax burden. Instead of paying property tax, we would pay more sales tax or gas tax, or whatever it would take to keep the revenue at the same level. That is like shifting your money from one pocket to the other. It doesn't matter which pocket the money comes out of, it's still your money.

What we need, instead, is to cut out or cut back on a lot of government programs. The rate the government agencies are being formed is crazy. There seems to be a new one every day. The way it's going, I figure we will all be working for the government before too long. That sounds great — but who is going to pay all those taxes to pay for our salaries?

As for the State University and Colleges faculty not being pleased with a proposed 2.2-per-cent raise, it's better than nothing. According to my calculator, a 2.2-per-cent raise for Mr. Dumke would amount to $1,320 a year. That's $1,020 more than I received last year.

I also feel that the clerks should get the same percentage raise as the professors. I don't know what professors make, but common arithmetic tells you 5 per cent of $60,000 is $3,000 and 5 per cent of $10,000 is $500.

I didn't vote for Jerry Brown last time, because I thought he would be for more free government programs that just cost the taxpayer more money. I am surprised and thankful for what he is trying to do for the taxpayers of this state. Keep fighting! I, for one, am backing him to lower taxes.

Hold it elsewhere

Last night I presented a petition signed by 28 property owners or renters in the vicinity of Mayfair Park, asking the City Council of Lakewood not to grant use of a public park for the Pan American Festival.

The people who live near the park or directly across from it feel that it could have been left in Lakewood Center where it has been held for years.

I made a presentation of the petition and asked for one minute to give rebuttal if someone got up and talked in favor of the carnival at the park.

I understand two people got up and talked in favor of it at the park. They were Madge Brock, president of the Pan American Festival, Inc., and a Mr. Davis.

After doing a little research, I find the person who heads the Pan American Festival, Inc., of Lakewood which is subsidized with Lakewood tax dollars doesn't live in Lakewood. This may be all right with some, but there is the question: why does it take people who don't live in Lakewood to run Lakewood projects?

I carried a petition because the people wanted something done. I am not a committee of one. There were 28 signers. We could have got more, but it was got up on a Sunday and I presented it to the council Tuesday.

I believe that Mr. Van Nostran make the remark that 28 names was not enough. He had better remember that only 50 names got him elected.

I hope that the council will reconsider and encourage Lakewood to let the festival be staged at Lakewood Center. There will be a big sale combined with it. We the taxpayers would even give more support to having Lakewood Center help the Pan American and other groups use the center.

Choosing a coach

A recent article in the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram concerning the replacement of Jordan High School football coach Dave Radford indicated that the district would seek a replacement from either within the district or outside if necessary. We have a host of dedicated young assistant coaches who have gained invaluable experience under superior head coaches. These men have sacrificed untold (mostly underpaid) hours in promoting football programs in our high schools without due recognition of their abilities or dedication to the youth they serve. Since many of these young men aspire to a head coaching job, I believe the district owes them first consideration in choosing a new coach for Jordan High School.

It has always been my impression that the district hired a proficient teacher who could also coach a sport. Now it seems we seek a coach who can incidentally teach a class. Is this a change in school district policy? If so, I believe the tax-paying public with students in school who do not participate in interscholastic athletics should be so informed.

'Just Plains Folks' walk to work

Good morning, housewives and other shut-ins. It's time for another heart-warming chapter of "Just Plain Folks" — the true-to-life drama that asks the question: Can a humble little millionaire agribusinessman become the leader of the Free World and not lose the common touch?

As we join up with Just Plain Jimmy today, he and his attractive wife, Just Plain Rosalynn, are at the breakfast table in their new Just Plain White House.

Rosalynn: Oh, Jimmy, your speech was just plain wonderful and everyone's still talking about the way you decided to walk all the way from Capitol Hill to the White House.

Jimmy: Yes, in all humility, I must admit it was a great idea. By walking down the middle of Pennsylvania Avenue smiling and waving I showed all those thousands and thousands of people jammed on the sidewalk behind the soldiers that I was one of them.

Rosalynn: You certainly did, dear.

Jimmy: And what's more, I set an example that will cast fear into the hearts of all those power-mad Arab oil sheiks. I walked to work! Just think, if every American walked to work the way I did, the energy crisis would be solved.

Rosalynn: But, dear, we were followed every step of the way by an empty limousine.

Jimmy: Exactly. Do you realize how much less gas an empty limousine uses

Arthur Hoppe

San Francisco Chronicle

than a full one? I just wish every American would walk to work in front of a just plain empty limousine. As I said in my speech, "In a spirit of individual sacrifice for the common good, we must simply do our best."

Rosalynn: You're so right, dear. And I must say that even your brother, Just Plain Billy, was so filled with The New Spirit that he followed your example.

Jimmy: He walked to work?

Rosalynn: No, he walked down the middle of Pennsylvania Avenue. But, fortunately, it was 2 a.m. so there wasn't much traffic except for that police car which . . .

Jimmy: He sure is a card, isn't he? But enough small talk. I must get to work. I have a very important economic message to deliver to Congress.

Rosalynn: Be sure to dress warmly, dear. Will you be home in time for lunch?

Jimmy: Well, it's a 40-minute walk over there and 40 minutes back. Tell Just Plain Jody to alert the tee-vee cameramen.

Rosalynn: Yes, dear. By the way, Jody wants to know when you'll be going to Europe to talk to our overseas allies.

Jimmy annoyed: That's not so doggone easy as it sounds. But I'll learn the hang of it yet. Tell Jody to fill the pool and we'll give it another try.

Well, tune in again next time, friends. And meantime, remember that bit of Just Plains Folks Wisdom: "Walk softly and you'll carry a big schtick."

Specter of divided Canada

NEW YORK — The Prime minister of the Canadian Province of Quebec, Rene Levesque, has been in New York this week explaining to the Economic Club why he thinks Quebec should be an independent nation and a good investment for U.S. money. He suggests some scary problems.

He is one of the most intelligent and eloquent visitors we've had around here for quite a while, but his political objective — a separate Quebec sovereign nation on our New England border, and his hope of raising American capital to demonstrate its economic viability and thus promote its separating from the Canadian Union — raises such difficult and delicate questions that one almost hesitates to write about them.

Some things, however, may be said without offense. The political controversy between Rene Levesque and Pierre Elliot Trudeau, the prime minister of Canada, over relations between the provinces and the central government in Ottawa, is none of our business. And the government in Washington is being meticulously careful, even in private conversations, to avoid even the appearance of intervention in the internal affairs of Canada.

But when the prime minister of Quebec comes here to New York, which is virtually broke, it is a fair assumption that he was not offering to lend money to Mayor Beame or to David Rockefeller at Chase Manhattan, but looking for financial aid to help achieve his political objective of separating Quebec from the Canadian federation.

Levesque made a very good speech. He

James Reston

was candid that the prime objective of his party was "political sovereignty."

He said: "We believe we are a nation, with all the essential requirements: a clearly defined territory, our own history, a common language and culture, a collective will to live together and maintain a national identity."

HE WAS ALSO clever in his historical analogies between Quebec and the original 13 American colonies. His ancestors, he said, were among the greatest discoverers, missionaries, and fur traders, the first white men to explore North America as far as the Rockies and Louisiana.

"Independence for Quebec, therefore," he insisted, "now appears as normal, I might say almost as inevitable, as it was for the American states of two hundred years ago. . . In my opinion, the important question . . . is not whether Quebec will become independent, nor indeed when it will happen, but how, rather, in due time, Quebecers can be expected to take full charge of their own political affairs. . ."

There is something in Levesque's historical analogy, but not much. The 13 American colonies tried the separatist route of independent commonwealths, tied loosely together, as he suggests a customs union with Ottawa, but it was a spectacular failure in the American Articles of Confederation, and had to be scrapped and followed by a more perfect union centered on the federal capital and not on the states.

No doubt Canada is different, but since Levesque has come down to New York and raised these nostalgic, historic points and invited us to invest in the sovereignty of Quebec as an independent nation, maybe we have to remind him that we have been experimenting with the narrow concept of states rights since Appomattox, and after a hundred years, are just beginning to go the other way and bring the American South into the Union under Jimmy Carter. His timing here was not very good.

In fact, the idea is beginning to get through to state legislatures along the St. Lawrence and the Great Lakes that they have to form regional compacts to deal with their common problems to deal with one another and with Canada along the border.

Also, that they have to deal with Mexico and its eight million illegal aliens in the United States. And that even the powerful nation-state centered on Washington cannot really deal with the integrity of its money, the pollution of the atmosphere, or the security of its airways — except on a worldwide basis.

Accordingly, New York has heard this eloquent and yearning voice out of Quebec City with admiration — because he speaks so well and is so earnest — but with regret. The melody of separatism, like the longing of the Scots and the Welsh for independence, seems a little out of date and almost tragic.

The guess here is that Prime Minister Rene Levesque has misjudged the Economic Club of New York, the bankers of New York, like David Rockefeller, the multinational corporations, and even the press, though he has been a brilliant journalist.

THEY ARE ALL having to deal with a different world. They all want to make money as usual, but the notion of a separate Quebec, breaking off from Ottawa, with even the possibility of a divided Canada — between the Soviet border and the United States — is not the sort of thing they are likely to invest in over the long run.

What Levesque, bright and eloquent as he is, has apparently misunderstood is that the United States believes in Canada. It even loves its neighbor, and is startled by the thought that Canada might break down into a series of squabbling states, even if some of them wanted to join the American Republic.

President Carter understood this point a little late. He sent Vice President Mondale to Europe and Japan, and arranged for Secretary of State Vance to go to the Middle East and Moscow in February or March.

But only late in the agenda for the next couple of months, he invited Prime Minister Trudeau of Canada and the new President of Mexico, Jose Lopez Portillo, to come to Washington.

It is high time; for Canada, and not Europe or Japan, is our most important trading partner. And Mexico, with its eight million illegal aliens, is our most serious social and economic problem. Quebec, the Rio Grande, and Panama may be the most critical foreign questions for President Carter in the next four years.

Today in history

By The Associated Press

Today is Sunday, Jan. 30, the 30th day of 1977. There are 335 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1933, Adolf Hitler became Chancellor of Germany.

On this date —

In 1649, King Charles I of England was beheaded.

In 1835, a would-be assassin fired two shots at President Andrew Jackson at the Capitol in Washington, but missed.

In 1847, the California town of Yerba Buena was renamed San Francisco.

In 1882, Franklin D. Roosevelt was born at Hyde Park, N.Y.

No special favors

At the Lakewood City Council meeting of Jan. 11, Donald Plunkett sought to make ineffective one of the most important requirements of adding to one's home by his attempt to coerce and intimidate the council into doing things his way.

Anyone else that wants to add a room to his home has to follow procedure. They apply to the Building Department, then the Planning Department and finally, if both these contacts are negative, to the City Council, appealing their case.

Mr. Plunkett seems to feel, again, that the law of the land doesn't apply to him, because he promptly asked the council to override the Building Department's objection, and even brought a lawyer with him to attempt to ram through his position, and thereby to have the council do his bidding.

Eric David an avid city improvement advocate, strongly objected for the reasons already mentioned, and stated the feeling many of us have, that Donald Plunkett isn't any better than anybody else, even if his position as councilman might make him think so. The feeling in the audience was similar to David's, as every time Plunkett continued to push for his attorney to be allowed to speak, he was nearly shouted down.

Mayor Jo Benaitt is to be commended for her gentle but firm refusal to allow Plunkett's attorney to be heard at that time. He had previously been forced to plead Plunkett's case during "Oral Communications," which allows individuals to challenge those they oppose. During the regular business of the meeting, this is not allowed, and it is during the latter time that Plunkett attempted to force his presentation.

Since the recall petitions were approved, only the apathy of the voters can possibly cause his remaining on the council. If he does remain in office, God help us all, for his attacks surely will only increase and become more bizarre.

Plunkett brags in his editorials what he has done. He has not done anything without the majority vote of the council. In his particular case, he was shown most dramatically that he really isn't better than anybody else.

Where blame lies

The natural gas shortage, which could aggravate the current unemployment problem and leave many schools and homes cold this winter is "Washington D.C." made.

Since the 1950's, the federal government has controlled the price of interstate gas while deregulating intrastate gas. The maximum price the government allows on natural gas interstate usage is a small fraction of unregulated intrastate gas. It wasn't until the mid-70's that the interstate ceiling was moderately increased. But despite such raise, the average price of interstate gas remains too low. In sum, the government has for quite some time underpriced interstate natural gas relative to its market value.

The government's preoccupation with low prices to the consumer has neglected his need for adequate supplies. The inevitable outcome has been the fiasco that is currently plain for all of us to see.

Price controls are as effective as trying to steer a ship with a locked rudder. Controls that artificially depress prices are conducive to wasteful use of resources and discourage investment that must be undertaken to locate new reserves.

What happens when supplies begin to dwindle? The consumer will inevitably pay higher prices, regardless of controls. For example, the federal government has approved the importation of liquefied natural gas from overseas that will cost two to three times as much delivered to the U.S. East Coast as domestic gas delivered there. This is a prime case of bureaucracy versus the market system. Our government creates a shortage by unwise regulatory policies and then tries to relieve such shortage by importing gas at prices that would have induced greater domestic production.

It has become increasingly clear from public surveys that most Americans realize the economic benefits of deregulation. Let's hope President Carter is cognizant of such public opinion polls, but more important, on not emphasizing low prices without regard to supply.

It's still your money

I am writing as a concerned taxpayer. Several weeks ago I received a questionnaire from Sacramento. It was from my state legislator. The questionnaire dealt mainly with taxes, and I was pleasantly surprised by our elected officials' concern for the taxpayer.

I was going to answer the questionnaire, but then I realized that all the changes this elected official wanted to make would only shift the tax burden. Instead of paying property tax, we would pay more sales tax or gas tax, or whatever it would take to keep the revenue at the same level. That is like shifting your money from one pocket to the other. It doesn't matter which pocket the money comes out of, it's still your money.

What we need, instead, is to cut out or cut back on a lot of government programs. The rate the government agencies are being formed is crazy. There seems to be a new one every day. The way it's going, I figure we will all be working for the government before too long. That sounds great — but who is going to pay all those taxes to pay for our salaries?

As for the State University and Colleges faculty not being pleased with a proposed 2.2-per-cent raise, it's better than nothing. According to my calculator, a 2.2-per-cent raise for Mr. Dumke would amount to $1,320 a year. That's $1,020 more than I received last year.

I also feel that the clerks should get the same percentage raise as the professors. I don't know what professors make, but common arithmetic tells you 5 per cent of $60,000 is $3,000 and 5 per cent of $10,000 is $500.

I didn't vote for Jerry Brown last time, because I thought he would be for more free government programs that just cost the taxpayer more money. I am surprised and thankful for what he is trying to do for the taxpayers of this state. Keep fighting! I, for one, am backing him to lower taxes.

Hold it elsewhere

Last night I presented a petition signed by 28 property owners or renters in the vicinity of Mayfair Park, asking the City Council of Lakewood not to grant use of a public park for the Pan American Festival.

The people who live near the park or directly across from it feel that it could have been left in Lakewood Center where it has been held for years.

I made a presentation of the petition and asked for one minute to give rebuttal if someone got up and talked in favor of the carnival at the park.

I understand two people got up and talked in favor of it at the park. They were Madge Brock, president of the Pan American Festival, Inc., and a Mr. Davis.

After doing a little research, I find the person who heads the Pan American Festival, Inc., of Lakewood which is subsidized with Lakewood tax dollars doesn't live in Lakewood. This may be all right with some, but there is the question: why does it take people who don't live in Lakewood to run Lakewood projects?

I carried a petition because the people wanted something done. I am not a committee of one. There were 28 signers. We could have got more, but it was got up on a Sunday and I presented it to the council Tuesday.

I believe that Mr. Van Nostran make the remark that 28 names was not enough. He had better remember that only 50 names got him elected.

I hope that the council will reconsider and encourage Lakewood to let the festival be staged at Lakewood Center. There will be a big sale combined with it. We the taxpayers would even give more support to having Lakewood Center help the Pan American and other groups use the center.

Choosing a coach

A recent article in the Long Beach Independent, Press-Telegram concerning the replacement of Jordan High School football coach Dave Radford indicated that the district would seek a replacement from either within the district or outside if necessary. We have a host of dedicated young assistant coaches who have gained invaluable experience under superior head coaches. These men have sacrificed untold (mostly underpaid) hours in promoting football programs in our high schools without due recognition of their abilities or dedication to the youth they serve. Since many of these young men aspire to a head coaching job, I believe the district owes them first consideration in choosing a new coach for Jordan High School.

It has always been my impression that the district hired a proficient teacher who could also coach a sport. Now it seems we seek a coach who can incidentally teach a class. Is this a change in school district policy? If so, I believe the tax-paying public with students in school who do not participate in interscholastic athletics should be so informed.

'Just Plains Folks' walk to work

Good morning, housewives and other shut-ins. It's time for another heart-warming chapter of "Just Plain Folks" — the true-to-life drama that asks the question: Can a humble little millionaire agribusinessman become the leader of the Free World and not lose the common touch?

As we join up with Just Plain Jimmy today, he and his attractive wife, Just Plain Rosalynn, are at the breakfast table in their new Just Plain White House.

Rosalynn: Oh, Jimmy, your speech was just plain wonderful and everyone's still talking about the way you decided to walk all the way from Capitol Hill to the White House.

Jimmy: Yes, in all humility, I must admit it was a great idea. By walking down the middle of Pennsylvania Avenue smiling and waving I showed all those thousands and thousands of people jammed on the sidewalk behind the soldiers that I was one of them.

Rosalynn: You certainly did, dear. Jimmy: And what's more, I set an example that will cast fear into the hearts of all those power-mad Arab oil shieks. I walked to work! Just think, if every American walked to work the way I did, the energy crisis would be solved.

Rosalynn: But, dear, we were followed every step of the way by an empty limousine.

Jimmy: Exactly. Do you realize how much less gas an empty limousine uses

Arthur Hoppe

San Francisco Chronicle

than a full one? I just wish every American would walk to work in front of a just plain empty limousine. As I said in my speech, "In a spirit of individual sacrifice for the common good, we must simply do our best."

Rosalynn: You're so right, dear. And I must say that even your brother, Just Plain Billy, was so filled with The New Spirit that he followed your example.

Jimmy: He walked to work?

Rosalynn: No, he walked down the middle of Pennsylvania Avenue. But, fortunately, it was 2 a.m. so there wasn't much traffic except for that police car which. . .

Jimmy: He sure is a card, isn't he? But enough small talk. I must get to work. I have a very important economic message to deliver to Congress.

Rosalynn: Be sure to dress warmly, dear. Will you be home in time for lunch?

Jimmy: Well, it's a 40-minute walk over there and 40 minutes back. Tell Just Plain Jody to alert the tee-vee cameramen.

Rosalynn: Yes, dear. By the way, Jody wants to know when you'll be going to Europe to talk to our overseas allies.

Jimmy annoyed: That's not so doggone easy as it sounds. But I'll learn the hang of it yet. Tell Jody to fill the pool and we'll give it another try.

Well, tune in again next time, friends. And meantime, remember that bit of Just Plains Folks Wisdom: "Walk softly and you'll carry a big schtick."

Fighting city hall

Their drought's here

He noted there are more than 19,000 water connections in the city system and that only about two or three a week are shut off for nonpayment, usually because the resident has moved without paying.

Gentry said a month without water in the house is — to him — a small price to pay to fight city hall for a principle, but he indicated he hopes the judge issues an order restoring the water connection soon so the Gentrys drought breaks before the state drought does.

Mrs. Gentry, 55, said: "I can't live here much longer without water. I'll have to move in with my sister who lives a few blocks away."

Open budget talks vowed

harbor developments—including the controversy over a proposed Alaskan oil tanker terminal in the port—no longer justified "perfunctory reviews and approvals of Harbor Department budgets."

In the past, there has been little if any effort to solicit citizen comment on the harbor budget, and Dever reportedly told Harbor Commissioners H. E. "Bud" Ridings and Richard Wilson last week he would like to see the practice changed.

Wilson, recently elected president of the commission, reportedly agreed with the manager's recommendation and said he and James McJunkin, assistant general manager of the Harbor Department, would make arrangements for public hearings from now on.

The two commissioners and McJunkin had met with Dever to discuss a number of "items of mutual interest" between the city and the Harbor Department.

The Harbor Commission, which oversees a $100 million budget, has generally operated as an almost autonomous body in city government. Its semi-independent status was set out in the City Charter many years ago, reportedly to insulate it from political influences.

There appears to be increasing pressure, however, to bring the department closer to the rest of city government, and Dever's latest conference with the commissioners has been interpreted as a step in that direction.

Copter landings planned for rotorcraft convention

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

A special fly-in of 14 of the latest model rotorcraft will open the 29th annual international meeting of the Helicopter Association of America (HAA) at the Disneyland Hotel Convention Center in Anaheim next Sunday.

The opening day events, including the landings at Disneyland Heliport starting at 11:30 a.m., and displays of 80 exhibitors in the Convention Center, will be open to the public free of charge until 5 p.m.

The balance of the convention through Wednesday, Mar. 9, will be reserved for members of the helicopter industry. Helicopters of eight airframe manufacturers and the support products which keep the free world's estimated $100 million civilian whirlybird fleet flying will be on static display in the convention center.

At least one new model, the Aerospatiale SA350, a French-built turbine-powered helicopter, will be making its first public appearance in the U.S.

Other firms scheduled to show their latest models include Agusta of Italy, Bell Helicopter Textron, Boeing Vertol, Emstrom Helicopter Corp., Hiller Aviation, Hughes Helicopter, and Sikorsky Aircraft.

Aircraft on display will range in size from two-passenger utility and agricultural helicopters to a new Sikorsky 15-passenger twin-turbine mockup and a flight model of the new Bell 222 twin. One of the newest in production will be the Hughes 500D, which received Federal Aviation Administration certification last December.

Leading manufacturers of powerplants, avionics, flight system components, air conditioning equipment and other accessories also will be represented.

In addition to the product exhibition, there will be a full schedule of technical and flight safety seminars for helicopter pilots and operators.

M. S. Kamminga, managing director of KLM Noordzee Helicopters in Amsterdam, Netherlands, and current HAA president, said the international organization selected Anaheim for its convention twice in two years because California has more active commercially registered helicopters and more designated heliports than any other state in the U.S.

'Meals on Wheels' for senior shut-ins

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, has introduced legislation for a national "Meals On Wheels" program for shut-in senior citizens.

Hannaford said the program would enable many such senior citizens to live independently in their own residences and provide 125,000 to 175,000 meals at 10 per cent of the cost of a meal served in an institution.

"By aiding local groups to deliver meals to the elderly in their homes, this legislation could save as much as $200 million to $400 million annually," Hannaford said.

LAW FOR VICTIMS

Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, has reintroduced legislation that would allow the victim of a crime to be represented by counsel in criminal proceedings relating to the defendant.

Thomas said his bill "will allow victims of crime to have their attorneys present during criminal proceedings of their assailant, would provide them with a voice in informal plea bargaining sessions as well as in formal trials and should assure the victim the same rights as are accorded to the accused."

An identical bill introduced last year was referred for interim study.

WILLS CEREMONY

Faye Wills will be installed as president of the Bellflower Democratic Club at a dinner at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Bamboo Room, Tahitian Village, 13535 Lakewood Blvd., Downey.

Congressman Hannaford and State Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena, will speak. Municipal Judge J. Kimball Walker will be the installing officer. Lyle McKenzie will be master of ceremonies.

Other officers are Walter Mohr, vice president; Nellie Connell, secretary; Mary E. Lewis, treasurer, and McKenzie, executive vice president.

Reservations for the $5.50-per-person dinner may be made with Ellen Garland at 429-2076, Esther Lindstrom at 867-1159, or Mary Lewis at 867-9921.

The Bellflower club will have its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the curriculum room of the Bellflower School District administration building at Clark Avenue and Flower Street, Bellflower.

Esther Lindstrom and Frankie Graham will discuss the beginnings of the Carter administration.

COMMON CAUSE

Carl Crothers of the Common Cause Speakers Bureau will speak on "Common Cause, Democracy's Lobby" for the Expand Your Horizons group of the Unitarian Universalist Church, 5450 Atherton St., Long Beach, at 8 p.m. Friday.

V. Faure Rilliet, coordinator of Common Cause in the 34th Congressional District, said Crothers would discuss the Korean bribery scandal. Common Cause has asked for a thorough investigation of the matter.

L.B. unit joins tax reform caravan

A countywide coalition of community and labor organizations — attempting to prevent cutbacks in human service programs — joins property taxpayer groups from 10 counties today in a caravan to Sacramento demanding tax reform.

About 50 Long Beach members and supporters of the Human Services Coalition of Los Angeles County will leave to join the caravan from Long Beach General Hospital at the corner of Willow Street and Redondo Avenue at 6 p.m.

LONG Beach members of the coalition are mainly opposing the County Board of Supervisors' possible closure of Long Beach General Hospital, a 300-bed facility that provides acute medical care and alcohol treatment.

According to Mary Siegfried, co-chairperson of the coalition, the supervisors suggested that the issue of trimmed human services be taken to the state level where tax reform can be implemented.

"The reason we're joining the tax protesters is that we realize the issue of tax reform is vital to continued services," she said.

"WE'RE going as a united group instead of fighting each other over the budget," she said. "We'll support some of the proposals offered by the tax groups."

Caravaners will meet with their respective legislators Monday morning, according to Ms. Siegfried, following the buses' arrival after a night-long journey to the state capital.

Guest speakers will address the issue of tax reform and health care services at a noon luncheon, she said, and the buses will depart at 2 p.m. for the return trip to the Los Angeles-Long Beach area.

The demand for tax reform, Ms. Siegfried noted, stems from the largest increase in property taxes since the 1947-48 fiscal year.

MANY homeowners experienced a countywide average increase of 14.33 per cent in assessed value of property for the 1975-76 fiscal year, triggering protests before the supervisors.

As a result of homeowner protests, the supervisors held special sessions — convened with special authorization from the State Legislature — to make cuts in the $3.3 billion budget adopted June 30.

Last April, however, cuts totaling more than $31.4 million in health service programs were proposed in the record budget that exceeded the previous year's budget by more than $270 million.

The proposal spawned the coalition.

GROUPS joining the coalition include the County Federation of Labor, the County Health Employee Coalition, the Los Angeles Alcoholism Task Force, the National Association of Social Workers, the Bilingual Latino Mental Health Committee, the Interns and Residents Association, the Drug Abuse Task Force and the Long Beach Coalition for Economic Survival.

The coalition's pressure at several board meetings, according to Ms. Siegfried, eventually became responsible for the board's cutting only $12.5 million from the health budget rather than the $31.4 million originally proposed.

SUCH CUTS, she claimed, mean "double taxation" for the thousands of small homeowners who would still pay high taxes but would lose important services.

Meanwhile, she added, the coalition expected to be present when the entire county budget, including the health services operation, comes under review at a public hearing scheduled for Feb. 16.

Groundbreaking ceremonies

Activities marking the groundbreaking of the $2.5 million Hawaiian Gardens Community Center continue today at the construction site on the west side of Pioneer Boulevard just south of Carson Street.

A carnival featuring rides and games is scheduled from noon to 11 p.m. Montebello and Hawaiian Gardens clubs are to present a boxing show during the day, with a marimba band scheduled to perform at 4 p.m.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Friday. When construction is completed in about 17 months, the center will offer recreational facilities and meeting rooms.

Overpass to college parking planned

A construction project near El Camino College will provide an overpass connecting the campus with the college's overflow parking lot south of Redondo Beach Boulevard.

During the construction period—approximately one year, according to college officials—eastbound traffic along Redondo

Beach Boulevard between Prairie Avenue and Crenshaw Boulevard will be rerouted through the parking lot, and westbound traffic will detour through a frontage road on college property.

The overpass project is jointly financed by the college and Los Angeles County.

Young woman killed in hit-run accident

A 19-year-old Santa Fe Springs woman was fatally injured Saturday when a truck struck her in Pico Rivera and the driver sped away, sheriff's deputies reported.

Edna Penunuri, 9207 Danby St., died at 9:30 a.m. at Pico Community Hospital in Pico Rivera.

Witnesses told deputies the woman was walking northbound on Cord Avenue shortly after midnight when she was hit by a vehicle, described as a light blue or silver 1968 or '69 Chevrolet pickup with two male occupants.

Their drought's here

He noted there are more than 19,000 water connections in the city system and that only about two or three a week are shut off for nonpayment, usually because the resident has moved without paying.

Gentry said a month without water in the house is — to him — a small price to pay to fight city hall for a principle, but he indicated he hopes the judge issues an order restoring the water connection soon so the Gentry drought breaks before the state drought does.

Mrs. Gentry, 55, said: "I can't live here much longer without water. I'll have to move in with my sister who lives a few blocks away."

'Meals on Wheels' for senior shut-ins

By BOB HOUSER
Political Editor

Rep. Mark Hannaford, D-Long Beach, West Orange County, has introduced legislation for a national "Meals On Wheels" program for shut-in senior citizens.

Hannaford said the program would enable many such senior citizens to live independently in their own residences and provide 125,000 to 175,000 meals at 10 per cent of the cost of a meal served in an institution.

"By aiding local groups to deliver meals to the elderly in their homes, this legislation could save as much as $200 million to $400 million annually," Hannaford said.

LAW FOR VICTIMS

Assemblyman Vincent Thomas, D-San Pedro, has reintroduced legislation that would allow the victim of a crime to be represented by counsel in criminal proceedings relating to the defendant.

Thomas said his bill "will allow victims of crime to have their attorneys present during criminal proceedings of their assailant, would provide them with a voice in informal plea bargaining sessions as well as in formal trials and should assure the victim the same rights as are accorded to the accused."

An identical bill introduced last year was referred for interim study.

WILLS CEREMONY

Faye Wills will be installed as president of the Bellflower Democratic Club at a dinner at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the Bamboo Room, Tahitian Village, 13535 Lakewood Blvd., Downey.

Congressman Hannaford and State Sen. Ralph Dills, D-Gardena, will speak. Municipal Judge J. Kimball Walker will be the installing officer. Lyle McKenzie will be master of ceremonies.

Other officers are Walter Mohr, vice president; Nellie Connell, secretary; Mary E. Lewis, treasurer, and McKenzie, executive vice president.

Reservations for the $5.50-per-person dinner may be made with Ellen Garland at 429-2076, Esther Lindstrom at 867-1159, or Mary Lewis at 867-9921.

The Bellflower club will have its regular meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the curriculum room of the Bellflower School District administration building at Clark Avenue and Flower Street, Bellflower.

Esther Lindstrom and Frankie Graham will discuss the beginnings of the Carter administration.

COMMON CAUSE

Carl Crothers of the Common Cause Speakers Bureau will speak on "Common Cause, Democracy's Lobby" for the Expand Your Horizons group of the Unitarian Universalist Church, 5450 Atherton St., Long Beach, at 8 p.m. Friday.

V. Faure Rilliet, coordinator of Common Cause in the 34th Congressional District, said Crothers would discuss the Korean bribery scandal. Common Cause has asked for a thorough investigation of the matter.

L.B. unit joins tax reform caravan

A countywide coalition of community and labor organizations — attempting to prevent cutbacks in human service programs — joins property taxpayer groups from 10 counties today in a caravan to Sacramento demanding tax reform.

About 50 Long Beach members and supporters of the Human Services Coalition of Los Angeles County will leave to join the caravan from Long Beach General Hospital at the corner of Willow Street and Redondo Avenue at 6 p.m.

LONG Beach members of the coalition are mainly opposing the County Board of Supervisors' possible closure of Long Beach General Hospital, a 300-bed facility that provides acute medical care and alcohol treatment.

According to Mary Siegfried, co-chairperson of the coalition, the supervisors suggested that the issue of trimmed human services be taken to the state level where tax reform can be implemented.

"The reason we're joining the tax protesters is that we realize the issue of tax reform is vital to continued services," she said.

"WE'RE going as a united group instead of fighting each other over the budget," she added. "We'll support some of the proposals offered by the tax groups."

Caravaners will meet with their respective legislators Monday morning, according to Ms. Siegfried, following the buses' arrival after a night-long journey to the state capital.

Guest speakers will address the issue of tax reform and health care services at a noon luncheon, she said, and the buses will depart at 2 p.m. for the return trip to the Los Angeles-Long Beach area.

The demand for tax reform, Ms. Siegfried noted, stems from the largest increase in property taxes since the 1947-48 fiscal year.

MANY homeowners experienced a countywide average increase of 14.33 per cent in assessed value of property for the 1975-76 fiscal year, triggering protests before the supervisors.

As a result of homeowner protests, the supervisors held special sessions — convened with special authorization from the State Legislature — to make cuts in the $3.3 billion budget adopted June 30.

Last April, however, cuts totaling more than $31.4 million in health service programs were proposed in the record budget that exceeded the previous year's budget by more than $270 million.

The proposal spawned the coalition.

GROUPS joining the coalition include the County Federation of Labor, the County Health Employee Coalition, the Los Angeles Alcoholism Task Force, the National Association of Social Workers, the Bilingual Latino Mental Health Committee, the Interns and Residents Association, the Drug Abuse Task Force and the Long Beach Coalition for Economic Survival.

In addition to the product exhibition, there will be a full schedule of technical and flight safety seminars for helicopter pilots and operators.

M. S. Kamminga, managing director of KLM Noordzee Helicopters in Amsterdam, Netherlands, and current HAA president, said the international organization selected Anaheim for its convention twice in two years because California has more active commercially registered helicopters and more designated heliports than any other state in the U.S.

The coalition's pressure at several board meetings, according to Ms. Siegfried, eventually became responsible for the board's cutting only $12.5 million from the health budget rather than the $31.4 million originally proposed.

SUCH CUTS, she claimed, mean "double taxation" for the thousands of small homeowners who would still pay high taxes but would lose important services.

Meanwhile, she added, the coalition expected to be present when the entire county budget, including the health services operation, comes under review at a public hearing scheduled for Feb. 16.

Groundbreaking ceremonies

Activities marking the groundbreaking of the $2.5 million Hawaiian Gardens Community Center continue today at the construction site on the west side of Pioneer Boulevard just south of Carson Street.

A carnival featuring rides and games is scheduled from noon to 11 p.m. Montebello and Hawaiian Gardens clubs are to present a boxing show during the day, with a marimba band scheduled to perform at 4 p.m.

Groundbreaking ceremonies were held Friday. When construction is completed in about 17 months, the center will offer recreational facilities and meeting rooms.

Overpass to college parking planned

A construction project near El Camino College will provide an overpass connecting the campus with the college's overflow parking lot south of Redondo Beach Boulevard.

During the construction period—approximately one year, according to college officials—eastbound traffic along Redondo

Beach Boulevard between Prairie Avenue and Crenshaw Boulevard will be rerouted through the parking lot, and westbound traffic will detour through a frontage road on college property.

The overpass project is jointly financed by the college and Los Angeles County.

harbor developments—including the controversy over a proposed Alaskan oil tanker terminal in the port—no longer justified "perfunctory reviews and approvals of Harbor Department budgets."

In the past, there has been little if any effort to solicit citizen comment on the harbor budget, and Dever reportedly told Harbor Commissioners H. E. "Bud" Ridings and Richard Wilson last week he would like to see the practice changed.

Wilson, recently elected president of the commission, reportedly agreed with the manager's recommendation and said he and James McLunkin, assistant general manager of the Harbor Department, would make arrangements for public hearings from now on.

The two commissioners and McLunkin had met with Dever to discuss a number of "items of mutual interest" between the city and the Harbor Department.

The Harbor Commission, which oversees a $100 million budget, has generally operated as an almost autonomous body in city government. Its semi-independent status was set out in the City Charter many years ago, reportedly to insulate it from political influences.

There appears to be increasing pressure, however, to bring the department closer to the rest of city government, and Dever's latest conference with the commissioners has been interpreted as a step in that direction.

Copter landings planned for rotorcraft convention

By HERB SHANNON
Aerospace Editor

A special fly-in of 14 of the latest model rotorcraft will open the 29th annual international meeting of the Helicopter Association of America (HAA) at the Disneyland Hotel Convention Center in Anaheim next Sunday.

The opening day events, including the landings at Disneyland Heliport starting at 11:30 a.m., and displays of 80 exhibitors in the Convention Center, will be open to the public free of charge until 5 p.m.

The balance of the convention through Wednesday, Mar. 9, will be reserved for members of the helicopter industry.

Helicopters of eight air-frame manufacturers and the support products which keep the free world's estimated $100 million civilian whirlybird fleet flying will be on static display in the convention center.

At least one new model, the Aerospatiale SA350, a French-built turbine-powered helicopter, will be making its first public appearance in the U.S.

Other firms scheduled to show their latest models include Agusta of Italy, Bell Helicopter Textron, Boeing Vertol, Emstrom Helicopter Corp., Hiller Aviation, Hughes Helicopters, and Sikorsky Aircraft.

Aircraft on display will range in size from two-passenger utility and agricultural helicopters to a new Sikorsky 15-passenger twin-turbine mockup and a flight model of the new Bell 222 twin. One of the newest in production will be the Hughes 500D, which received Federal Aviation Administration certification last December.

Leading manufacturers of powerplants, avionics, flight system components, air conditioning equipment and other accessories also will be represented.

In addition to the product exhibition, there will be a full schedule of technical and flight safety seminars for helicopter pilots and operators.

M. S. Kamminga, managing director of KLM Noordzee Helicopters in Amsterdam, Netherlands, and current HAA president, said the international organization selected Anaheim for its convention twice in two years because California has more active commercially registered helicopters and more designated heliports than any other state in the U.S.

FRENCH ALPS GUARD LA GRANDE CHARTREUSE

Secret elixir safe in Alps

By HERB SHANNON
I.P.T. Travel Editor

ST. PIERRE DE CHARTREUSE, France — The many-gabled monastery guarded by towering cliffs ringing this village in the French Alps holds one of the best-kept secrets of the age of alchemy. Only three of the Carthusian monks in the 11th century sanctuary know the formula for the 130-herb Chartreuse "Elixir of Long Life," and they're not talking.

Neither are the other fathers, brothers, nuns and novitiates of La Grande Chartreuse. All have taken the austere vows of the order as set down by St. Bruno in 1084: Silence, solitude, and servitude. They sleep, work and take their meals in separate cells, meeting only for collective religious observance.

A desolate, almost impassable stretch of terrain separates the monastery from the outside world. This zone of silence is inviolate to villagers and visitors alike. A building outside the compound, once used as an infirmary for monks who broke their vows, is operated as a historical museum from Easter to All Saints Day by lay brothers and sisters. One of the exhibits is a small copper still in which the first elixir was made.

The only other glimpse into La Grande Chartreuse is available by special arrangement between village authorities and the prelate of the monastery. The view is from a road clinging to the mountainside opposite, a distance sufficient to prevent any disturbance of the monks at work and prayer below.

The isolation of the monastery also served as an effective sanctuary for French soldiers fleeing the Nazi invasion early in World War II and it is reported the monks sheltered at least one German conscientious objector who refused to serve Hitler. Some of these military refugees stayed on afterward as brothers.

IN SPITE of the obvious obstacles, there have been countless attempts to steal the secret of La Grande Chartreuse since the tattered manuscript of an unknown 16th century alchemist arrived at the monastery in 1737. The instant success of Green Chartreuse, the first liqueur compounded of the vegetal elixir and carefully distilled brandy, attracted the attention of industrial spies all over Europe.

The monks foiled every effort, including an order by Emperor Napoleon confiscating the formula for exploitation by the government of France. The Carthusians scattered into exile, passing the precious document from hand to hand like relay runners until it finally was smuggled back to Chartreuse. In celebration, Brother Bruno Jaquet developed a new yellow liqueur which proved so popular on introduction in 1838 that the name of the monastery was applied universally to the color.

Today, furtive agents of foreign distilleries make periodic efforts to pry information from the local herb farmers who supply the monks, and chemists around the world are still analyzing the liqueur to discover the proportions of its ingredients.

All they have found out so far is what they knew in the first place. The elixir base requires 130 herbs and it is fortified with a superb brandy.

"EVEN IF the farmers would talk, the list of herbs would be useless," explains jovial Paul Goffon, president of Chartreuse Diffusion, the private distributing company which markets the monastery's product worldwide. "The brothers arrange to buy more than 130 different herbs for the elixir, and only they know which ones they don't use."

"We know the formula is under lock and key, but only the three brothers entrusted with the secret know where it is hidden. Besides, I think they change the location from time to time."

In a recent reception at Voiron, co-sponsored by Chartreuse Diffusion, Air France and the French Government Tourist Office, the distributors unveiled a new variant of the original green liqueur aimed specifically at the American market. The new product was mixed with pineapple and lime juice in a concoction labeled Swamp-water, served in plastic replicas of the familiar pint Mason jar. The sales slogan: "More bang than a Wallbanger."

AFTER DINNER the visitors were permitted to switch to brandy sniffers to sample the Green Chartreuse straight from the bottle. It proved to have more bang than a French howitzer. The traditional yellow liqueur, also on hand in copious quantity, was a relatively mild and mellow 80 proof. The newer version, sometimes used to make an aptly named Green Fire cocktail, is a whopping 110.

Noticing my face gradually turning the color of the higher-powered liqueur, a French journalist sitting at my elbow offered some friendly advice.

"Mix them," he whispered. "One-third green and two-thirds yellow makes a Presbyterian. Two parts green and one part yellow is an Episcopalian. Stay with the Presbyterian."

PENNY-WISE TRAVELER

Fly the wide plane every time

It's been a tough decision, but for the book I'm writing called "Twelve Fates Worse Than Death," I have finally picked No. 1: Flying shoulder to shoulder with two strangers, stuffed between them in the dreaded middle seat.

When you fear this kind of flying, you are forced to look especially nervously at charters. Charters always fly full and planes that fly full seat people in middle seats. I also know that one of these people will be me and that there's no way to jump ship and still get a refund.

Some people can sit more or less happily in almost any seat, secure in the knowledge that no one else has any more room than they do. Others of us, plunked down in a middle seat, for no discernible reason begin internalizing feelings of hostility — which is to say we go ape.

The fact is that I know I will never, ever, get one of seat-back release button and descend into my lap.

Since scheduled flight prices are reaching such grand new heights, it's a sure thing lots of charters are in my future. This means it is necessary to learn ways to avoid the middle seat, however sneaky they may be.

matically by choosing one operator's flight over another's.

Unless you can find a charter on a wide-bodied plane. It's not a great improvement, but there are those of us who'd call it a good one. While most wide-bodied planes (747s, DC10s and L1011s) flying charter have wound up with 10-abreast seating (in groups of 3-4-3 divided by two aisles) and an increase in the total number of middle seats, there is — for me, anyhow — a psychological improvement. I do not feel as trapped in the middle seat on a wide-bodied plane. There is at least more "open" space in which my eyes can roam.

"THERE ARE lots of variables that influence aircraft design, but in the wide-bodied planes we did try to break up spaces and make the cabin more appealing," says Richard Gabriel, a "human factors" specialist at Douglas Aircraft Co.

He also concedes that "middle seats are a sore point with most people, and on the first- and second-generation jets they're not very pleasant places to be."

In the end, there is only one workable way to manage things. It's possible to get the jump on fellow passengers by going to the airport early, since, for the most part, charter operators leave seat assignments up to the airlines and the airlines generally fall back on the old rule, "First come, first served."

That's "First come" to the check-in positions, which open about one hour before departure for domestic flights and two hours for international.

Confirmed late-arriver though I am, I guess reform is in my future: I will get there slightly before the airline staffers do. What this means, fellow passengers, is that you're not going to have me to kick around in the middle seat anymore. I hope.

ONCE IN a great while when a plane is pressed into charter service too late to put in all-coach seating, the first-class compartment stays as it is and inside it are — yes! — those bigger, broader and cushier two-by-two seats. At such times the operator sometimes assigns those choicer positions to winners of an impromptu pre-boarding lottery.

Naturally, this is fine with those who luck their way out, but it still means that on flights sold to individuals at normal charter prices, there's no way to better your situation auto-

Start with a 4-day cruise of the fabled Inside Passage aboard a luxury cruise ship from Vancouver, B.C. to Skagway—past forested islands, towering mountains, massive glaciers. Ride a narrow-gauge railroad over the historic Trail of '98. Visit Anchorage, Fairbanks, Juneau, Valdez, Mt. McKinley, Columbia Glacier, the Arctic. See gold rush towns, Eskimo villages, fascinating cultures, modern cities, a myriad of wildlife—and unspoiled, awesome scenery all the way. Choose from a variety of sea-land-air itineraries (9 to 25 days; $657 to $1,797) offered by Westours, the leading travel organization in Alaska. Ask your travel agent or mail the coupon.

Next time try train in Europe

San Francisco

"When the girl at the Paris reservation desk heard my Alliance Francaise French, she shut the wicket. Put up a 'Closed' sign and sat there sullenly until I went away."

Some people swear by Eurailpass. Some swear at it. One month of unlimited train travel in 13 countries of Europe. First-class, $260. Hop off in charming villages. Charm the charming villagers. Hop back on again.

We sent a savvy, no-frills travel reporter on this with her husband. It was an education.

"Best thing about Eurailpass is you only have to stand in one line. Reservations. Otherwise you line up to buy tickets. Then line up to reserve a seat.

"If you don't reserve, people already on will do anything short of murder to keep compartments to themselves. They lie across three seats and pretend to be asleep — or maybe dead."

"They wag their fingers angrily if you try to open the door. They pile luggage on the seat and tell you the occupant has gone to the bathroom."

WHERE HAVE all the porters gone? Used to be plenty of porters. Now — "We saw only ONE porter in a month of travel. Figure to carry your bags."

If you do get a porter, he will put your bags in your compartment. But he will NOT come on to take them off. You have to lower the window and throw them out. Hard on luggage if there's no porter to catch them.

On the good side: "The trains are GREAT if they're the famous TEE jobs. (Trans Europe Express.) The Mistral between Paris and the French Riviera. The Settebello from Rome to Milan. The Edelweiss from Amsterdam to Italy. The Rosenkavalier Express between Munich and Vienna."

"When you're not on a TEE, brace yourself." "We were drinking cafe espresso topped with almond whipped cream at the hotel in Rapallo when the waiter told us all Italian trains were being struck at midnight. Decided we'd better head for France."

"Rushed to the station. Hauled baggage down the platform looking for first-class. Finally got on second-class, planning to work our way to first."

"Even in winter, second-class is jammed throughout the aisles. Burping babies. Bundled belongings. Knots of soccer fans. Conductor said we were on right train but wrong car. This one splitting for Milan."

(EUROPEAN trains constantly take off cars to join other trains. I lost my glasses getting off a train in Germany. The entire railroad system couldn't trace where that car went.)

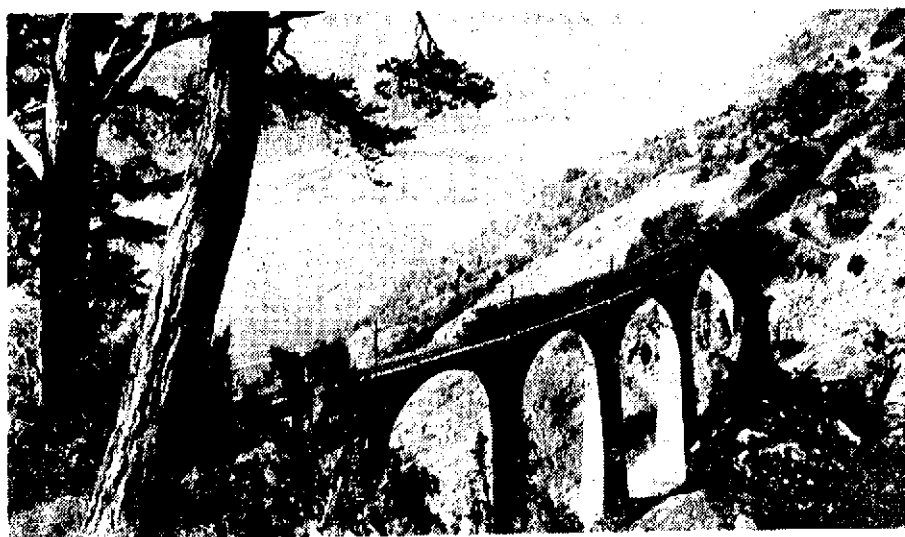

Our reporter finally made the right car by jumping off at stations, running forward a few cars and leaping on again. "We did this three times. Scary because doors close electrically. And the train stops only a few minutes."

"If you want to wrinkle-proof your travel, take only TEE trains. And you MUST have reservations: 24 hours in advance is safest. Then you must find a town large enough to merit a computerized reservation machine. And one that isn't broken."

We've decided the best way is to make ALL reservations before you go. And the best way is reading "Eurail-Guide — How To Travel Europe By Train". Paperback sells for $5.95 in bookstores. Gives a complete how-to-do-it. Get educated before you go. On-the-job training is for heroes.

New Broadway, a single-family home development by Pacesetter Homes, Inc., features solid, rustic wood construction. The development is located in Anaheim near Lincoln Avenue and Loara.

Realty briefs

The Konwiser Corporation of Newport Beach is constructing an $8.4 million, two-phase development of 144 townhomes in Fullerton, east of the Orange Freeway and about a half-mile from Fullerton State College. It is expected first move-ins will occur in April 1977.

Bill Hogan, co-owner of Cerritos Realty in Cerritos, accepted the presidential gavel from Fran Sloan Brown, past president of the Southeast International Real Estate Network Governing Board. Brown is owner of a real estate office in Downey at 10234 Lakewood Blvd.

Expanding its Resale Division, Walker & Lee, Inc., has established new Central and Desert regions.

Newly-appointed regional vice presidents are Merle Friedman, assigned to the Central Region, and Carl Meisterlin, who will head the desert region.

Warmington Development Inc. has announced the opening of new corporate offices at 1641 Langley Ave. in Irvine. Warmington Development reported $42 million in sales in 1976 including the sales of 624 homes, primarily in Orange County, and the construction of Dana West Marina at the Dana Point Harbor. The company plans to build over 1,000 single family homes in 1977.

Felix Tulay has been accepted for membership in the Real Estate Certificate Institute Division of the California Association of Realtors, according to Ed Deal, president of the Long Beach District Board of Realtors.

Raymond E. Mueller has been named sales manager of Grubb & Ellis Company's South Bay Office in Carson and two salesmen have been added to the staff. Frank J. Schindler, Jr. is a new commercial real estate salesman and Craig S. Meyer is an industrial real estate sales trainee.

John F. Shea, Chairman of the Board of the J. F. Shea Corp., and William Okell, president, have announced that Century Community Developers will now be known as Shea Homes.

"This proud new name in homebuilding takes over for a proud old name in the American construction industry," Shea said. "Century Community Developers was a good name and, under its banner, we've built residential communities that are home to thousands of families in California and Nevada."

QUESTION:

Should you buy or sell first

By Stephanie Fuller
Knight News Service

If you can't decide whether to sell your present home before buying a new one or vice versa, you're not alone.

Experts in the realty field say there are risks and advantages to selling first and buying later and to buying a new home when you still own the first residence. In the main, however, they agree the decision rests on individual circumstances.

One general situation that should be explored is whether it is a buyers' or sellers' market. When the real estate market is down and houses aren't selling, a buyer can make a good purchase.

In a buyers' market, it is safe to assume the family that sells its original home first has a good chance of finding a replacement residence they like quickly and at a reasonable price.

The reverse is true in a sellers' market, where the home listings are few and houses are sold almost as fast as they're made available. In this situation, it is probably best to hang onto the first home and purchase the second.

Tom Koenig, vice president of Koenig and Strey, Glenview, Ill., thinks this is a good time for buyers. Therefore, a person could sell his first home and go on to buy his second at a good price.

Koenig points out the time of year makes a difference in the market. Right now he says it looks as though interest rates may go down 0.25 per cent, but prices will go up. A person may get a quarter per cent less on a mortgage, but pay more for his home in the spring.

A person in the buy-sell dilemma should consider interim financing. The family that hangs on to the original home and buys another may get interim financing during the lag period before the first house is sold. Most banks will lend money on a note pending the sale of the first home.

The psychological factors in these home transactions are many. The family that considers selling first may worry about ending up in a motel or hotel for some time before finding a home members want. In the end, they may discover the home they want is too high in price, but they do have money in hand for a second purchase.

The family considering keeping its first home and buying a second has fears of being stuck with two residences. They have no worries over where they are going to live, but they may worry over how long they can handle two homes. Money is tied up; and, if they become desperate, money may be lost in their anxiety to sell.

Home sales continue strong

Sales of both used and new single-family homes continued at strong levels across the United States as 1976 drew to a close, according to the latest status report of the National Association of Realtors.

On a seasonally adjusted annual rate basis, there were 3,320,000 existing homes sold in November at a total market value of $142.4 billion, the association's Department of Economics and Research said.

In releasing the data, H. Jackson Pontius, association executive vice president, said, "Early figures for December suggest a further sharp gain. Sales activity should be in the 3,550,000 to 3,600,000 range on a seasonally adjusted annual rate basis. The December pace will easily outdistance September, the previous record month, when a pace of 3,330,000 was established."

The new home market remains healthy, the report says. On an annualized basis, 696,000 new single-family homes were sold in November, just under the October pace of 729,000. Sales activity for the year should surpass 620,000 units for the second best year in the 13 year history of the report.

In spite of cold weather in December, housing starts increased 13.1 per cent over November, according to the report.

Private homes for choice child care

By PATRICIA de LUNA
Staff Writer

Family day care management is most familiar as the friendly neighborhood home wherein dwells the proverbial kind woman who will care for your children while you work.

This form of child care has been around for a long time. But until recently, it has been in the shadow of the much-talked-about child care centers. Today, family day care homes are enjoying a renewed popularity, says Phyllis Lauritzen, a teacher and family day care manager.

She believes this child care arrangement, which requires the home to be properly licensed, offers many advantages to working parents, advantages that can not be found at child care centers.

In her eyes, child care in a private home has a great potential for excellence.

Family day care is "a nice transition" for a child. "It has unique qualities that should be preserved, qualities such as the ability of a child to cozy up on a couch to have a story read to him. A different relationship can be established."

She adds, "A parent can find a family day care home that fits into his or her lifestyle. There is more variety in this type of care than is available with child care centers."

"Emotionally, physically, socially and educationally, a family day care home is potentially better for children than centers," Mrs. Lauritzen declares.

There are no education standards required of a man or woman to have their home licensed as a family day care residence. But as she says, the 12 units of early childhood education required of workers at some childcare centers "do not necessarily insure a warm nurturing person."

Family day care offers a range of good homes and bad homes, acknowledges Mrs. Lauritzen who is working on her doctorate in early childhood curriculum at USC, "but I would choose a good family day care home over a good child care center."

Much of her reasoning lies in the fact that family day care allows for the care of infants, limits the number of children in each home to five or six depending on ages, offers children more interaction with adults, offers flexible hours for parents working swing shifts and weekends and offers much more informal and individualized care for each child.

MRS. LAURITZEN is a former Long Beach resident who takes care of two infants in her home part-time, works on her doctorate and teaches two classes in family day care management. Her first family day care management class was offered in Pasadena, where Mrs. Lauritzen now lives and where she was director of a day care center for one year before becoming founding director of the Pasadena child care information service.

She points to experts who believe that the first three years in a child's life are the most important in the child's development. It follows, she says, that if family day care homes are caring for infants, then it is most important that these homes realize their full potential.

PHYLLIS Lauritzen, a child care specialist, will teach a class at Long Beach City College in how to care for children in a private residence.

To this end, Mrs. Lauritzen considers the class in family day care management, offered under the Parent Education department at Long Beach City College, worthwhile for parents, baby sitters, prospective day care mothers and those already operating family day care homes.

The class will begin Feb. 9 for 12 weeks on Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. and begin Feb. 12 on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon. Both classes will be offered in room 127 in the Pacific Coast Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

The class is designed to make family day care operators aware of the potential for care and to make them "feel good about doing it," Mrs. Lauritzen, who teaches a similar class through the Pasadena City College, says the class can enhance the knowledge of children's characteristics at certain ages.

Knowing for instance that at age 2 a child is working on his sense of autonomy and will automatically answer "no" to any request, will help the family day care mother avoid head on clashes with the child. "She can develop ways to work around this."

FAMILY CARE HOMES are licensed in Los Angeles County under the Department of Public Social Services which maintains a list of names, phone numbers and addresses for parents seeking such care.

In Long Beach, family day care homes also are listed with the Family Day Association (phone 429-8928). At present there are 269 licensed family day care homes in the Long Beach area.

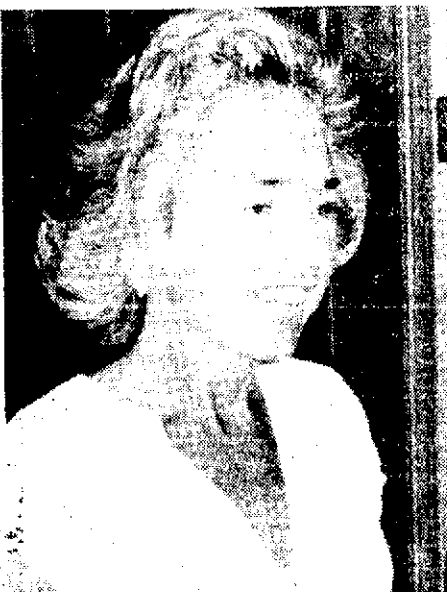

Licensing, which is free of cost but requires each adult member of the home to have a chest X ray, fingerprint clearance, and TB skin test, guarantees that homes have sufficient play equipment and play space, nap facilities, and snacking facilities.

Licensing does not guarantee the quality of the care in the home, says Mrs. Lauritzen. That responsibility lies with each parent and Mrs. Lauritzen says she would urge parents to visit several homes before choosing one, and to ask questions about discipline methods, toilet training, recreation and meals.

Ethel Kennedy—a very private person

By ELEANOR RANDOLPH
Knight News Service

The public pity is gone now. Eight years after an assassin killed her husband, Ethel Skakel Kennedy is no longer America's national widow. In an age of instant mourning, when even our heroes are buried quickly, the women and children they leave behind are expected to suffer, then mend and finally forget.

WIDOW of Robert Kennedy, Ethel maintains a fierce loyalty to the Kennedy family and demands the same loyalty of her friends.

So, the public Ethel Kennedy is a 48-year-old woman left with 11 children, a woman who has the wit to send valentines referring to herself as someone who lives in a shoe and who has so many children, as she puts it, that "I'd even marry you."

She is the ferocious sportswoman whose killer serve is one of the high points of the annual RFK Celebrity Tennis Tournament at a charitable social event that allows thousands of common New Yorkers to view the Kennedys and a variety of famous people at play.

She is the self-appointed guardian of the Kennedy name. And because she is not a Kennedy by blood, she can afford to seethe openly at family affronts, such as at the 1976 Democratic Convention, where the Carters publicly succeeded the Kennedys. It was not the succession that bothered Ethel, one friend said: It was the way Jimmy Carter treated Teddy. For one thing, he didn't give Kennedy a part in the program; for another thing, he didn't give the Kennedys good seats. One friend suspects that if Ethel voted for President in 1976, she went Republican.

Ethel Kennedy is also the unmarried socialite whose name has been linked with a variety of sports figures as well as with old Kennedy friends like singer Andy Williams and New York's Gov. Hugh Carey. But some Washington regulars, like columnist Nicholas von Hoffman, believe the dates are just escorts and that Mrs. Kennedy prefers a title he gave her several years ago — the Virgin of Hickory Hill.

"WHOEVER THINKS Ethel will get married again just doesn't know her," says Sylvia Wright, a journalist who became a friend of the Kennedys in the late 1960s. "She is already married in her mind. Her husband is Bobby, and her one purpose in life is to do what Bobby wants even if he isn't around anymore to tell her what it is." Another close friend of Mrs. Kennedy, Time magazine correspondent Hays Corey, agrees. "I'm sure in her mind Bobby is always overhead watching, telling her what to do. He is still a part of her life." In an ancient and durable way, Ethel Kennedy was Robert Kennedy's wife for 18 years, and whether the world tires of it or not, she is now Robert Kennedy's widow.

She had snuck up on all of us. We stood waiting in a private New York club for Ethel Kennedy to launch the RFK Celebrity Tennis Tournament publicity. It was a press conference to announce the format of the tournament, but because the format seldom changes, we were not expecting any zingers. We were there to see the celebrities, one of whom was to be Ethel Kennedy, and to chronicle anything they would say that might be amusing.

"Hey, hey," came the voice with a sharp Eastern accent and an edge of hoisterous, good-time sarcasm. "Hey, whatcha up to, kiddo?"

Ethel was talking to an unsuspecting Howard Cosell, whose face assumed an expression the public rarely if ever sees. He looked shy and defenseless.

"Hiya, sweetheart," he countered finally. "This is the most wonderful lady who ever... who ever... well, who ever stole my heart."

Ethel realized that this exchange was being seen and heard. Two reporters, seeing Cosell at a loss for words, were hanging limply on the sidelines, hoping to blend unseen into the lime-green and yellow decor of the club. Ethel grabbed Cosell's arm and moved him out of earshot.

IN ONLY A FEW minutes, we had been made aware that there were two categories of people at this event: those who fit and those who didn't. Because I was not rich, powerful, or athletic, I quickly was aware that I didn't fit, but in journalistic tradition, I decided to fake it. I moved closer to Ethel Skakel Kennedy and smiled.

"Howdy," I said finally, trying to sound suitably peppy. "I'm so glad to meet you finally. I'm doing this magazine piece about you and..."

She smiled and fingered the catch on her purse, quietly observing my growing discomfort. The newspaper photos had not prepared me for the fact that she is extremely pretty. In the pictures, her mouth is usually open in a breathless, cocker-spaniel grin. In person, she looks friendly but cautious. The face did not change, but I sensed that I was losing her — that

I had lost her the instant I had announced my profession.

"A story about me?" she said through the continuous grin. "You poor thing." Then somehow she was gone.

"She doesn't like anything written about her personality," one of her friends explained later. "It's not just that she has been burned by the press; it's that she thinks she's a private person."

"I saw her at a party one time when this girl from People magazine came up and started talking. Ethel never said a word, and when the reporter went away, she said, 'You can't say anything to those people. You never know what they'll make of it.'"

But the Ethel Kennedy who avoids the press does not shy away from publicity. If there is a big event in Washington, she is there — from lunch at the Sans Souci, a French restaurant with a number of rich patrons and suitably overpriced food, to an opening at the Kennedy Center, to the town's notable dinner parties.

Occasionally, she is even the center of attention, as she was at a dinner to which an unsuspecting hostess had invited both Ethel and syndicated newspaper columnist Joseph Kraft. Kraft had just written a column on Bobby Kennedy's career that was mostly praise but was laced with what he thought was minor criticism.

To Ethel, it apparently wasn't minor. She walked into the party, according to reports from those who were there, spotted Kraft, and walked back out.

MORE RECENTLY, she grew particularly unhappy with Lawrence Stern of the Washington Post, a man with a healthy streak of social mischief. Last spring, Watergate investigative reporter Robert Woodward of the Post expressed some interest in a prospectus or outline of a book being proposed by Judith Exner, John Kennedy's alleged girlfriend, and Stern promised to find it for him.

There were those, however, who thought Stern picked a particularly unusual moment to present the

Much of her reasoning lies in the fact that family day care allows for the care of infants, limits the number of children in each home to five or six depending on ages, offers children more interaction with adults, offers flexible hours for parents working swing shifts and weekends and offers much more informal and individualized care for each child.

MRS. LAURITZEN is a former Long Beach resident who takes care of two infants in her home part-time, works on her doctorate and teaches two classes in family day care management. Her first family day care management class was offered in Pasadena, where Mrs. Lauritzen now lives and where she was director of a day care center for one year before becoming founding director of the Pasadena child care information service.

She points to experts who believe that the first three years in a child's life are the most important in the child's development. It follows, she says, that if family day care homes are caring for infants, then it is most important that these homes realize their full potential.

To this end, Mrs. Lauritzen considers the class in family day care management, offered under the Parent Education department at Long Beach City College, worthwhile for parents, baby sitters, prospective day care mothers and those already operating family day care homes.

The class will begin Feb. 9 for 12 weeks on Wednesdays from 7 to 10 p.m. and begin Feb. 12 on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to noon. Both classes will be offered in room 127 in the Pacific Coast Campus, 1305 E. Pacific Coast Highway.

The class is designed to make family day care operators aware of the potential for care and to make them "feel good about doing it." Mrs. Lauritzen, who teaches a similar class through the Pasadena City College, says the class can enhance the knowledge of children's characteristics at certain ages.

Knowing for instance that at age 2 a child is working on his sense of autonomy and will automatically answer "no" to any request, will help the family day care mother avoid head on clashes with the child. "She can develop ways to work around this."

FAMILY CARE HOMES are licensed in Los Angeles County under the Department of Public Social Services which maintains a list of names, phone numbers and addresses for parents seeking such care.

In Long Beach, family day care homes also are listed with the Family Day Association (phone 429-9928). At present there are 269 licensed family day care homes in the Long Beach area.

Licensing, which is free of cost but requires each adult member of the home to have a chest X ray, fingerprint clearance, and TB skin test, guarantees that homes have sufficient play equipment and play space, nap facilities, and snacking facilities.

Licensing does not guarantee the quality of the care in the home, says Mrs. Lauritzen. That responsibility lies with each parent and Mrs. Lauritzen says she would urge parents to visit several homes before choosing one, and to ask questions about discipline methods, toilet training, recreation and meals.

Ethel Kennedy—a very private person

By ELEANOR RANDOLPH
Knight News Service

The public pity is gone now. Eight years after an assassin killed her husband, Ethel Skakel Kennedy is no longer America's national widow. In an age of instant mourning, when even our heroes are buried quickly, the women and children they leave behind are expected to suffer, then mend and finally forget.

WIDOW of Robert Kennedy, Ethel maintains a fierce loyalty to the Kennedy family and demands the same loyalty of her friends.

So, the public Ethel Kennedy is a 48-year-old woman left with 11 children, a woman who has the wit to send valentines referring to herself as someone who lives in a shoe and who has so many children, as she puts it, that "I'd even marry you."

She is the ferocious sportswoman whose killer serve is one of the high points of the annual RFK Celebrity Tennis Tournament (a charitable social event that allows thousands of common New Yorkers to view the Kennedys and a variety of famous people at play).

She is the self-appointed guardian of the Kennedy name. And because she is not a Kennedy by blood, she can afford to seethe openly at family affronts, such as at the 1976 Democratic Convention, where the Carters publicly succeeded the Kennedys. It was not the succession that bothered Ethel, one friend said; it was the way Jimmy Carter treated Teddy. For one thing, he didn't give Kennedy a part in the program; for another thing, he didn't give the Kennedys good seats. One friend suspects that if Ethel voted for President in 1976, she went Republican.

Ethel Kennedy is also the unmarried socialite whose name has been linked with a variety of sports figures as well as with old Kennedy friends like singer Andy Williams and New York's Gov. Hugh Carey. But some Washington regulars, like columnist Nicholas von Hoffman, believe the dates are just escorts and that Mrs. Kennedy prefers a title he gave her several years ago — the Virgin of Hickory Hill.

"WHOEVER THINKS Ethel will get married again just doesn't know her," says Sylvia Wright, a journalist who became a friend of the Kennedys in the late 1960s. "She is already married in her mind. Her husband is Bobby, and her one purpose in life is to do what Bobby wants even if he isn't around anymore to tell her what it is." Another close friend of Mrs. Kennedy, Time magazine correspondent Hays Corey, agrees. "I'm sure in her mind Bobby is always overhead watching, telling her what to do. He is still a part of her life." In an ancient and durable way, Ethel Kennedy was Robert Kennedy's wife for 18 years, and whether the world tires of it or not, she is now Robert Kennedy's widow.

She had snuck up on all of us. We stood waiting in a private New York club for Ethel Kennedy to launch the RFK Celebrity Tennis Tournament publicity. It was a press conference to announce the format of the tournament, but because the format seldom changes, we were not expecting any zingers. We were there to see the celebrities, one of whom was to be Ethel Kennedy, and to chronicle anything they would say that might be amusing.

"Hey, hey," came the voice with a sharp Eastern accent and an edge of boisterous, good-time sarcasm. "Hey, whatcha up to, kiddo?"

Ethel was talking to an unsuspecting Howard Cosell, whose face assumed an expression the public rarely if ever sees. He looked shy and defenseless.

"Hiya, sweetheart," he countered finally. "This is the most wonderful lady who ever... who ever... well, who ever stole my heart."

Ethel realized that this exchange was being seen and heard. Two reporters, seeing Cosell at a loss for words, were hanging limply on the sidelines, hoping to blend unseen into the lime-green and yellow decor of the club. Ethel grabbed Cosell's arm and moved him out of earshot.

IN ONLY A FEW minutes, we had been made aware that there were two categories of people at this event: those who fit and those who didn't. Because I was not rich, powerful, or athletic, I quickly was aware that I didn't fit, but in journalistic tradition, I decided to fake it. I moved closer to Ethel Skakel Kennedy and smiled.

"Howdy," I said finally, trying to sound suitably peppy. "I'm so glad to meet you finally. I'm doing this magazine piece about you and..."

She smiled and fingered the catch on her purse, quietly observing my growing discomfort. The newspaper photos had not prepared me for the fact that she is extremely pretty. In the pictures, her mouth is usually open in a breathless, cocker-spaniel grin. In person, she looks friendly but cautious. The face did not change, but I sensed that I was losing her — that

I had lost her the instant I had announced my profession.

"A story about me?" she said through the continuous grin. "You poor thing." Then somehow she was gone.

"She doesn't like anything written about her personality," one of her friends explained later. "It's not just that she has been burned by the press; it's that she thinks she's a private person."

"I saw her at a party one time when this girl from People magazine came up and started talking. Ethel never said a word, and when the reporter went away, she said, 'You can't say anything to those people. You never know what they'll make of it.'"

But the Ethel Kennedy who avoids the press does not shy away from publicity. If there is a big event in Washington, she is there — from lunch at the Sans Souci, a French restaurant with a number of rich patrons and suitably overpriced food, to an opening at the Kennedy Center, to the town's notable dinner parties.

Occasionally, she is even the center of attention, as she was at a dinner to which an unsuspecting hostess had invited both Ethel and syndicated newspaper columnist Joseph Kraft. Kraft had just written a column on Bobby Kennedy's career that was mostly praise but was laced with what he thought was minor criticism.

To Ethel, it apparently wasn't minor. She walked into the party, according to reports from those who were there, spotted Kraft, and walked back out.

MORE RECENTLY, she grew particularly unhappy with Lawrence Stern of the Washington Post, a man with a healthy streak of social mischief. Last spring, Watergate investigative reporter Robert Woodward of the Post expressed some interest in a prospectus or outline of a book being proposed by Judith Exner, John Kennedy's alleged girlfriend, and Stern promised to find it for him.

There were those, however, who thought Stern picked a particularly unusual moment to present the

Q: What's comedian Jackie Mason doing since he made such an auspicious debut as a straight actor in his first movie, "The Stoolie"? And does he still harbor bitterness because the late Ed Sullivan, misinterpreting as insulting an innocent gesture in which Jackie pointed his finger at him on camera, publicly banished him "forever" from his top-rated program? — Mr. and Mrs. A. "Right now I'm performing at the Colonial Inn in uptown Miami Beach for the entire season. Much better than hopping from one place of employment to another. I like to know where I am when I wake up in the afternoon — after that silly sun sinks in the West."

Jackie also told us his "Stoolie" film has just been sold to ABC to help amortize his close-to-a-million-dollar investment in the celluloid. It will run sometime in March.

Q: Is it true that Betty and Gerald Ford, their three sons and daughter Susan have signed en masse with the William Morris theatrical office? — The Brent Family, St. Louis.

A: Yes, through their personal representative, Norman Brokaw. The pact for the pack, we're informed, will include their memoirs, TV guest appearances and specials. Also films, if any.

Q: I've heard that Rod Steiger, who I think had a face-lift several years ago, disapproves of such surgery. If so, why? — Mrs. Emily Potter, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A: Observes the famous actor: "People who ponder this kind of surgery should think twice. Unless they think young and feel attractive inside, a new face isn't going to make them any happier."

Q: A friend just back from London says she saw "Charlie's Angels" on TV there — and I'm curious. Is it the same show we have here? If so, how do they like it over there? — Ted Powell, Indianapolis.

A: Only recently introduced on British television, the same show with the same three glamorous crimebusters is already the talk of London. Here's what one critic, who found it "disappointing," said:

"The girls are certainly easy on the eyes...but are about as sexy as Miss World contestants...The series depends mainly on gloss and double meanings. Talking of a drug smuggler one girl says, 'Keep him off our backs,' another replies: 'Keep him off our backs.' Another replies: 'It's not our backs he's after.' A third 'Angel,' shivering after a swim in a revealing costume, says, 'My goose-bumps are so big I can't tell which ones are the real me.'"

Q: In retrospect, what does Larry O'Brien think about the now-historic bungled burglary of his Democratic committee office in the Watergate building? — Ms. Dolly Reed, Baltimore.

A: It is, according to author Naura Hayden. The dean of TV anchorpeople is totally uninhibited when it comes to dancing. Miss Hayden, who wrote "Everything You've Always Wanted to Know About Energy But Were Too Weak to Ask," insists Walter's so good doing the Charleston that other guests at parties stop their own gyrations to stand around and watch him doing the old dance.

Las Vegas and Liberace — dazzling to behold

LAS VEGAS — Rising like an asteroid of Jello in a desert of some forgotten planet, lit by enough neon to illuminate the city of Chicago at midnight, it survives the rest of the world through pipelines of money and mendacity.

Vegas? It's still there. While the rest of the world reads about the Gilmore execution and the Carter inauguration, the Vegas headlines herald "Playgirls on Ice" above a five-column photo spread of Liberace emerging from a rhinestone Rolls Royce in a floor-length white mink. It's only Friday night, and I'm not sure I'll survive till Sunday.

Before I get out of the airport, the vulgarity of well-designed decadence hits me between the eyes. Intellectual processes slow to a record crawl as the voice of Tote Fields pierces the din of slot machines: "Please step to the right so those in back of you can pass you on the left!" Pregnant women jockey for position with real cowboys in from the ranches, jerking levers and inserting quarters in silent, mocking bandits.

The last Harvey House in the West unleashes its graveyard shift and sashaying Harvey Girls unload rum punches on shell-shocked, empty pursed tourists in double-knit polyesters waiting for the night flight out to L.A. These Harvey Girls don't look like Judy Garland. More like Raquel Welch.

Everybody in Vegas looks like Raquel Welch. You see them, empty-eyed and empty-headed, munching enchiladas at 4 a.m., waiting for taxis in front of the Dunes, hustling drinks at the keno tables, snapping photos at the dinner show at Caesar's Palace. They sleep all day and boogie all night and everybody wants to be Valerie Perrine, who symbolizes the Vegas Vamp, the all-American Dream.

This is the town where everyone's a friend until the bar closes and then everyone's a stranger. It's a plastic paradox where the old begin to live and the young begin to die and sometimes the tuxedo you rent to get married in turns up three hours later on the corpse at the all-night mortuary ("Go Out in Style at the Permanent Snooze Factory! Emergency Wakes Our Specialty! Credit Cards Welcome!") near the Discreet Motel.

ON THE WAY to the MGM Grand Hotel, the cab driver grumbles: "That's the first time I ever turned that corner without waiting in a line of traffic!"

"Slow weekend?" "Ghost City, baby."

They talk like that in Vegas. At the MGM, there's a contact lens convention in the "Gigi" restaurant, a chiropractors clinic in the "Great Caruso" room and Len the Lion is lying in his cage, facing the wall with humiliation. The pages bombard the speakers of the elevators ("Phone call for Red Buttons!"), the swimming pool ("Message for Angie Dickinson!") and the MGM theater, where you can punch a button and order a Tom Collins while you watch a 35-mm print of Greta Garbo in "Mata Hari." If there's a recession, they didn't hear about it in Vegas.

At the Sahara, Lena Horne and Vic Damone!

LENA HORNE, "redesigns class, has never sung better," says Rex Reed of her current appearance with Vic Damone at the Sahara, Las Vegas.

Lena, undulating, sighing, caressing her songs like she's snuggling into a feather bed with a good book (or a good friend who's just read one). She purrs rhapsodically, "I've Grown Accustomed to Your Face," and every male in the audience still breathing wishes she'd grow accustomed to his.

I've seen Lena before, but never like this. She growls. She stalks like a panther in the jungle night. She tip-toes, she bounces, then she faces her predators and wails with the caged heat of a captive animal bursting to get free.

In her pomegranate jersey, she ties a dinner napkin around her neck to absorb the perspiration and it looks like a Paris design. She redefines class. And she has never sung better.

Along with her new versions of old movie favorites like "A Fine Romance" and "Honeysuckle Rose" (laced with delicious comments on what color the pillars were she leaned on in Technicolor while Red Skelton got the closeups), she adds a few from films even the buffs can't remember. "Don't remember the movie this one came from — just remember some glass scenery," she sighs.

THE CHERRY ON TOP of the cake is a medley of 21 Richard Rodgers classics with Lena and Vic, less wooden and more mellow than usual and who can blame him, on the same stage with the Queen of Pizzazz, swinging their noses off. The polyesters stagger drunkenly to their feet in a rare standing ovation.

Backstage, Lena is dripping water, bundled in terrycloth, trying to phone her daughter Gail Lumet in Hollywood, where Peter Finch, star of Lena's son-in-law Sidney Lumet's "Network," has just died. "Last thing they need is a nosy mother offerin' condolences before her midnight show," snorts Lena. "Come back at 2 a.m. and Sammy Davis'll take us out for Chinese breakfast at the Sands." My colon lurches at the thought.

Before I get out of the Sahara, I drop by the lounge to see the career comeback of the famous Mary Kaye Trio. Frank Sinatra and Judy Garland used to pay Mary Kaye just to stay around so they could hear her sing when they got off work. She's got a woman named Nadine Jansen working with her now who plays four different keyboards with her left hand while she plays trumpet and flugel horn with her right hand. Damnedest thing I've ever seen. She plays like Shorty Rogers, except he needs two hands. She also plays piano like Errol Garner. No tempo, no rhythm, no style of music eludes this group or gets neglected in their versatile act.

And just in case you need a breather between losses at the roulette table, Don the Beachcomber serves pina colodas till sunrise while you listen to jazz singer Mavis Rivers and vibe supremist Red Norvo. All of this and bankruptcy, too, and you never even have to leave the Sahara.

I WAKE THE NEXT afternoon at 3 — miraculously in my own room back at the MGM. A masseur brings me to life, locating a spot in my left ankle he swears could lead to a dead nerve in my right elbow.

Too weak to resist, I am kneaded, pummeled, hacked, slapped and oiled into semi-consciousness in time to lose $200 at roulette betting on the nines.

I pass on Tony Orlando and Dawn, sneak by Wayne Newton, and head for the Liberace show at the Hilton International. The room seems bigger than Shea Stadium.

An orchestra that sounds like it's being piped in from Mars beats it daddy eight to the bar while 14 dancers with white candelabras from something called the Nevada Dance Theater swing onto the stage. During "Winter Wonderland," the ceiling opens up and it literally snows all over the stage, the piano and Liberace, whose teeth match all 88 keys of his piano.

Shifting into a snappy "Skater's Waltz," the back of the stage opens up to reveal the internationally famous — yes, it's the Dancing Waters! Direct from Somewhere! SOCIALLY SPEAKING

To sing or not to sing, that was the question

SOME MONTHS AGO, a gentleman by the name of Harry Christensen, began elaborate planning for a surprise 50th birthday party for his wife, Joyce.

If the name sounds familiar to you, Joyce is editor of Life/Style.

Came the Big Day and appointed time at the Long Beach Yacht Club, and everyone agreed that Joyce had not caught on to the plans for a cocktail

Anyhow, the dinner party finally got underway and the duly surprised honoree began opening a mountainous pile of "gag" gifts.

Ann Wade, there with husband, Frank, said she wanted to get a genuine gag but didn't know where to buy one.

Joyce's absent Honolulu-based sister, Ann Wilmoth and husband, Jack, sent 25 packages — one for every other birthday. Among the gifts were Tapa print cocktail napkins, macadamia nut clusters and genuine Hawaiian sand.

Harry's daughter, Deonne Hanson, and her husband, Bob, couldn't make it from their home in Connecticut so they sent a Mailgram — "Happy Birthday Mama Joyce — from your 42-year-old daughter and your 52-year-old son."

Joyce's sister, Marilyn Swanson (the one who really wasn't serving the family dinner in San Pedro) and her husband, John, presented her with a photographic collage of the past 50 years, including baby pictures. Joyce's mom, Laura Hartley, gave her a gold chain for a golden anniversary. Other family members included Joyce's son, Keith Kent and his wife, Patria, a cousin Herb Williamson and his wife, Cathy of San Clemente and a niece Karen Jacot and husband, Denny, who shares the same birthday with Joyce but had to wait a day for his celebration.

Long-time friends included the forever Kiwanis quartet featuring Harry, Bruce Gray, Jack Hammond and Norm Masterson. All attended with their long-listening wives, Hester, Liz and Lola, who served as assistant hostess.

Dianne Gleib (you know her as Dianne Smith) also assisted and husband, Bill, served as official photographer.

Among other good friends and neighbors were Oda Tveit, Bill and Rosie Kimmel, Dick and Mary Ann McCabe, Marion Northrup, Cecil and Cheryl Brian and Bud and Doris Minor.

SOME PEOPLE have been traveling.

Jim and Marilyn Shirley got away from it all in the sun and surf at a Club Mediterranean spot — Cancun on the Yucatan Peninsula.

THINGS ARE quieter today in the home of Stu and Aura Monfort. Their daughter, Aura, became Mrs. John Levy on Saturday.

The Monforts and John's parents, USC Athletic Director Dave and Marlys Levy, have been caught in a whirl of pre-wedding parties and house guests from all over.

Aura was honored with a brunch and crystal shower at the new home of Gini Drew. Co-hostesses were Kay Lenz, Janey Jenkins and Edith Hindley.

June Harris was co-hostess for a miscellaneous dessert shower at the home of Ann DeLine.

Co-workers in the medical complex where Aura is employed also showered her.

The Senior Levys hosted a rehearsal dinner at the Long Beach Yacht Club and the Monforts had a party for family members from out of town.

Katie Gordon, age 9, came from Tucson, Ariz., with her mother, Jerry. Katie was flower girl as her mother, Jerry had been for Stu and Aura's wedding (nearly 25 years ago) AND Katie's grandmother was an attendant at the senior Aura's (her name is Berghlund) wedding many years ago.

Ring bearer Stephen Bray was also at the family party.

Other family members were Stu's mother, Helen Hoffman, and her husband, Art, Justin and Marge Berglund with their youngsters, Jeff, Kristy and Brett, Bob and Mickey Berglund with daughter, Karen (a bridesmaid) and Laura and Mark, all from Northern California.

Marlys' parents, John and Ruth Bray, came from Hawaii for the wedding.

The bridegroom's grandmother, Irene Levy, was there as was his great-grandmother, Mary Jones.

GRACE SPENCER just returned from a quick trip to her native Texas to attend the 88th birthday celebration for her mother.

Grace made a weather check just before she left for the trip and was informed that the temperature was 12 degrees.

She got off the plane wearing long johns, boots and a fur coat. She was welcomed with sunshine and 52 degree weather.

MOE AND SHIRLEY Lieberman of Lakewood just missed the weird weather when they took a nine-day winter cruise aboard the Home Lines Liner Doric out of Port Everglades, Fla.

party and dinner (she didn't get to come to the cocktail party because she was the surprisee and only the surprisers get to have fun.)

Fun included not being sure that the ruse for getting her there was going to work and a minor argument between two factions, one wanting to yell, "surprise" if she showed up and the other group wanting to sing "Happy Birthday."

She did show up — at last — and the "Happy Birthday" group won.

Judge Charlie Smith, who officiated at Joyce and Harry's wedding some years ago, was in on the plot to get her to LBVC prior to a family dinner she thought she was going to in San Pedro, only of course she wasn't.

CONTEMPORARY LIVING

Slumber parties road to old age

My daughter, who's in the 7th grade, is planning another slumber party for her upcoming birthday. I have not yet recovered from the last one and I'm now trying to decide whether I should arrange a quick business trip. After all, my husband slept peacefully through last year's so why shouldn't he cope with this year's?

One thing is apparent. My daughter and I look at slumber parties through different eyes.

My daughter's idea of a perfect slumber party

There should be a minimum of six guests. Twelve is perfect. Everyone uses sleeping bags and stays in one room (one girl gets to use the tub). No one is allowed to sleep under the covers of the beds in the room. The sleeping bags must go on top of or under the beds. We try to keep the noise down — a little.

Everyone should come to a party like this dressed like slob — jeans, sneakers, work shirts, old sweaters. This means it will be a good party. But everyone should bring her prettiest nightgown, too.

The hamburger dinner is only a prelude to what really matters — the food we eat later on. It is a matter of honor to eat as many brownies, potato chips, pieces of candy and cookies as we can, as well as to drink sodas and chew gum. It's a responsibility at a slumber party to eat a lot of glop.

We stay up all night listening to radio and watching TV and talking above it all. We turn out the lights and play shadow pictures on the ceiling with flashlights and our hands. We play neat games like Truth or Dare.

tish baldrige

We all get in one long line for the bathroom with our toothbrushes in hand. One girl squirts toothpaste onto each brush and that helps get everyone finished fast at the bathroom sink.

After being up all night, we are always really hungry and by 7 a.m. we're ready for a big breakfast of cereal, English muffins, bacon and eggs.

My description of last year's party

It would be nice if there were only 3 or 4 guests. Six is bad enough, but 12, which we had last year, was unbearable. We gave them three rooms to use. They used one. I'm still trying to figure out why they fought over who got to sleep in the tub. The noise was unbelievable!

The girls arrived looking positively scruffy. Then came the transformation into little long-haired angels with fluffy nightgowns. Hard to believe they were the same girls.

I felt that feeding them a nutritious meal of ground roundsteak, green beans and a salad would so fill them up they would be unable to eat too much junk food later. I was wrong. They ate enough to make every one of their faces break out in pimples for weeks. And it will be our fault.

Since they came at 6 p.m., I felt they would settle down for sleep by midnight. I couldn't have been more wrong. The noise was deafening all night and at least one was on duty in the kitchen all night. (One girl had her head in the garbage pail, carrying out her assignment in a game called Truth or Dare.) We gave over two bathrooms to them so they could all wash properly before going to bed. They used only one bathroom. No face cloths were used and hardly a towel.

Considering what they ate for a solid 14 hours, I relaxed about breakfast, thinking my chores were done. I was so wrong. I was short-order cook for a pack of hungry wolves!

What's real meaning?

BOSTON, Mass. — The elections may be over, but the ballots have just come in on the way politicians use language.

NUC News Correspondent Edwin Newman, chairman of the American Heritage Dictionary Usage Panel, said that new terms used by candidates in recent political campaigns have not won a vote of confidence from language authorities. The acceptability of these terms was voted on recently by the 150 arbiters of usage who constitute the AHD Usage Panel.

According to Newman, only two terms could muster approval from as many as half of the Usage

Panel members: "gavel" used as a verb and "powerbroker" in the sense of a "dealer in political power or influence." At the other extreme, "prioritize" and "free up" were voted down by more than 90 percent of the panel members.

The word "prioritize" elicited the harshest comments. Said Heywood Hale Brown: "I'm afraid this one headachizes me too much for comment." Perhaps sports columnist Red Smith best expressed the case against "prioritize" by saying "let's negate this one, wordwise." Nat Hentoff, the writer and critic, voted against the acceptance of "input" as "the kind of mechanical shorthand that rusts thought."

Leo Rosten commenting on "affordables" said: "Next we'll have savables, or throwables."

On "downplay," Peter de Vries, novelist and satirist, said: "If I heard a speaker use it, I would upget and outwalk." Writer Isaac Asimov urged that the phrase "cost out" be "valued out."

Women are asking

'What's the easiest way to exercise?'

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

Walking is great exercise! It could be the answer for those who alibi, "I just don't have the time to do daily workouts."

At a recent interview-seminar, we checked with some of the nation's best in physical fitness. They agreed, "Walking is one of the most overlooked forms of calisthenics. Jogging is in, but it can be too vigorous for many; also, it necessitates special clothes and the proper setting. Walking is so easy, yet accomplishes so much. You're in the air, you can breathe freer, you can rev the circulation and get the feeling of exhilaration that accomplishing something often brings.

"Instead of parking 'next door' to your job or class, walk a few blocks. Next time the elevator is too busy, try walking up stairs. And, when you go 'out' to lunch, really go 'out.' Walk to the restaurant or lunch counter and walk back."

These suggestions from the pros depend on your age and physical condition. As they point out, "most people are lazy and can really do much more than they think they can. The key to walking is doing it correctly. Check these tips with your doctor."

"Step forth with an easy gait. In a continuous action, swing the limb from the hips (not the knee), lift the thigh, and propel the knee forward. Instead of hitting the ground with a jolt, keep the step feather-light.

"Arms should be free-swinging. If you carry a shoulder purse, make it a habit to switch sides so one shoulder doesn't always carry the weight."

As Diana Enke illustrates, walk with upper torso and shoulders relaxed, head erect and chin level to the ground. Move with a slide-like walk, not a machine-gun prance. Let each step melt into the next. Actually feel the coordination of the muscles.

"The idea," say the experts, "is to keep feet straight and parallel; try to feel your weight a little toward the outer side of the foot. Do not let toes turn out, for this throws undue strain on the arches. When you finish a step, feel as if you were stepping right off the middle toes. Such walking is neither tense nor tiring."

NBC News Correspondent Edwin Newman, chairman of the American Heritage Dictionary Usage Panel, said that new terms used by candidates in recent political campaigns have not won a vote of confidence from language authorities. The acceptability of these terms was voted on recently by the 150 arbiters of usage who constitute the AHD Usage Panel.

According to Newman, only two terms could muster approval from as many as half of the Usage

Panel members: "gavel" used as a verb and "powerbroker" in the sense of a "dealer in political power or influence." At the other extreme, "prioritize" and "free up" were voted down by more than 90 per cent of the panel members.

The word "prioritize" elicited the harshest comments. Said Heywood Hale Brown: "I'm afraid this one headachizes me too much for comment." Perhaps sports columnist Red Smith best expressed the case against "prioritize" by saying "let's negate this one, wordwise." Nat Hentoff, the writer and critic, voted against the acceptance of "input" as "the kind of mechanical shorthand that rusts thought."

Leo Rosten commenting on "affordables" said: "Next we'll have savables, or throwoutables."

On "downplay" Peter de Vries, novelist and satirist, said: "If I heard a speaker use it, I would upget and outwalk." Writer Isaac Asimov urged that the phrase "cost out" be "valued out."

Women are asking

'What's the easiest way to exercise?'

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

Walking is great exercise! It could be the answer for those who alibi, "I just don't have the time to do daily workouts."

At a recent interview-seminar, we checked with some of the nation's best in physical fitness. They agreed, "Walking is one of the most overlooked forms of calisthenics. Jogging is 'in,' but it can be too vigorous for many; also, it necessitates special clothes and the proper setting. Walking is so easy, yet accomplishes so much. You're in the air, you can breathe freer, you can rev the circulation and get the feeling of exhilaration that accomplishing something often brings.

"Instead of parking 'next door' to your job or class, walk a few blocks. Next time the elevator is too busy, try walking up stairs. And, when you go 'out to lunch,' really go 'out.' Walk to the restaurant or lunch counter and walk back."

These suggestions from the pros depend on your age and physical condition. As they point out, "most people are lazy and can really do much more than they think they can. The key to walking is doing it correctly. Check these tips with your doctor.

"Step forth with an easy gait. In a continuous action, swing the limb from the hips (not the knee), lift the thigh, and propel the foot forward. Instead of hitting the ground with a jolt, keep the step feather-light.

"Arms should be free-swinging. If you carry a shoulder purse, make it a habit to switch sides so one shoulder doesn't always carry the weight."

As Diana Enke illustrates, walk with upper torso and shoulders relaxed, head erect and chin level to the ground. Move with a slide-like walk, not a machine-gun prance. Let each step melt into the next. Actually feel the coordination of the muscles.

ADVICE TO THE TAXLORN

Apartment, mobile home sales raise questions

DEAR MR. SMITH: I want to trade down on an apartment building having a tax basis of $30,000, but now worth $100,000. In exchange, I will receive an apartment building worth $50,000, and $50,000 in cash. How much profit is taxable — $35,000? In a previous year, I had rescinded a listing for $80,000 with another broker, and the proposed trade did not close. I was forced to pay the broker a commission, after a lawsuit. Is that deductible as an ordinary expense of the building? — J.P.G.

The amount taxable on your trade is $50,000, assuming that your old property was not mortgaged. Your profit will be $70,000; but the gain that is recognized is limited to the $50,000 of cash received. Fill out Form 4797 to determine the ordinary income, if any, attributable to depreciation recapture. The tax basis of your new property is $30,000 ($50,000 value less the profit of $20,000 not recognized.)

You have an ordinary deduction for the damages you were forced to pay because you rescinded the contract with the previous broker. Internal Revenue has agreed to follow some old court decisions to that effect.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I had eight mobile homes as rental units. An impending divorce caused me to sign the voluntary repossession papers to dispose of the units. The mortgage holders just took over the units and no money was involved. Each unit had a payoff balance of $4,000. I had depreciated each unit down to $2,000; this difference times eight was entered as a profit of $16,000 for my yearly income. I filed a bankruptcy later and I was still required to pay $3,000 capital gains tax.

The IRS has not reviewed the forms I had filed. The tax was the result of the way my tax forms were prepared. I find it hard to believe that I am required to pay $5,000 in taxes after a bankruptcy. $3,000 plus the $2,000 withheld during the year from my salary. — E. S.

The general rule is that taxable gain is derived when you sell property subject to a debt that is greater than the tax basis of the property, even though you receive no cash.

Depending on the precise legal facts, your transaction might be considered a cancellation of debt while solvent, insolvent, or bankrupt. In each case, less harsh but different rules apply. If you determine that any of your 1973, 1974 and 1975 returns were filed incorrectly, file amended returns or refund claims. You may require professional guidance.

DEAR MR. SMITH: I had more than $10,000 in medical expenses in 1976. Can I deduct the full amount even though I was not able to pay them all in 1976? How do I handle insurance reimbursements? I received only a small amount so far, because two insurance policies are involved, which has caused some delay. F. P. T. and B. H.

Deduct for 1976 only the medical expenses actually paid in 1976, reduced by insurance compensation you received in 1976. If the reimbursements exceed the expenses, you have no deduction, but the excess is non-taxable. In 1977, you will go through the same process, except that, if you deducted certain items in 1976 that are reimbursed in 1977, you report those reimbursements in 1977, but only to the extent that such deductions decreased 1976 taxable income.

DEAR MR. SMITH: You mentioned recently that an apartment house manager who was required to live on the premises did not have to pay federal income tax on a free apartment. I am 70 and my wife is 68; we pay no income tax. But the $300 apartment, plus $225 cash, results in a big Social Security deduction each month and may cause me to lose my benefits. Is this correct? — H. & S. F.

Yes, non-cash compensation may be subject to Social Security tax, even though not subject to income tax. If you and your wife each earn 50 per cent of the compensation, the effect on your benefits should not be as drastic as you say. If not, your excess earnings may affect your benefits until age 72, when you become free to earn all you can. For 1977, you and your wife can earn $3,000 each, without reduction of benefits.

DEAR MR. SMITH: In 1976, my brother passed away and willed to me the balance of monthly payments due him on his residence, which had been sold at a profit. He had the property for five years before selling. I am receiving the monthly payments, plus interest.

I understand interest is fully taxable. Do I have to pay taxes on the total number of payments of principal as ordinary gain or 50 per cent capital gain? I cannot gain access to my brother's tax returns. His former wife will not release them. If capital gain, what information can I put on my 1976 return? — W. S. L.

Unless you are receiving the monthly payments from a tax-free source (state, city, etc.), the interest you receive is taxable for federal income tax purposes. If your brother had elected installment reporting of the sale, a portion of the principal received is taxable as "income in respect of a decedent" and you are entitled to a deduction for your pro-rata share of federal estate tax, if any, paid on the note you inherited. In the absence of the necessary data, report only the interest and attach an explanation.

Do you have an income tax problem? Write to "Advice to the Taxlorn," P.O. Box 49081, Tucson, Ariz., with a self-addressed, stamped envelope, for information that may help you. Your identity will not be disclosed.

Shies away from press, but still likes publicity papers to Woodward. He did it when Woodward was engrossed in conversation with Ethel at a party.

"When she saw it," Stern recalled recently, "she began shouting and screaming. Then she grabbed her job-of-the-week escort and left."

Excessive as her reaction may seem in an insouciant society like Washington's, it was predictable to her close friends, who almost always mention Ethel's sense of loyalty just before they ask you not to use their names.

It is not the easy loyalty between friends who love each other when one of them does something stupid or wrong. It is a demanding loyalty, a rough brand of friendship that permits no transgressions in certain areas.

Friends of LaDonna Harris, the warm-hearted wife of former Sen. Fred Harris, say she was heartbroken when Ethel refused to speak to her in 1968 after her husband supported Sen. Hubert Humphrey for President instead of Bobby.

"When Ethel turns it off, it's like a wall. You are no longer there. You do not exist, and there is no remorse on her part. It's just over," said one Washington woman who endured a similar Kennedy turnoff.

In the case of Kraft, who reportedly was bewildered by Ethel's response to his column, he was disloyal to her image of Bobby. In Stern's case, he had attacked her belief that the rumors about JFK's love life were sordid and untrue.

"She's almost naive," one friend explains hesitantly. "She refused to believe anything was going on between JFK and Exner. Finally somebody had to tell her about the phone calls. Nobody makes 90 phone calls to the President — gets through to the President of the United States 90 times — unless something is going on."

But Ethel's rigidity on some matters may be understandable. She has been rich, but not comfortable, for a lot of her life. From the beginning, her parents somehow prepared her to endure some of the tragedies that would follow.

ETHEL WAS BORN in Chicago in 1928, the daughter of George and Ann Skakel. Her father, who built his fortune in Great Lakes Carbon Corp., moved the family to New York and finally to gracious Greenwich, Conn. But he repeatedly reminded his four girls and three boys that their easy life was not a secure one. "We could all be thrown out on the street tomorrow," he told them often.

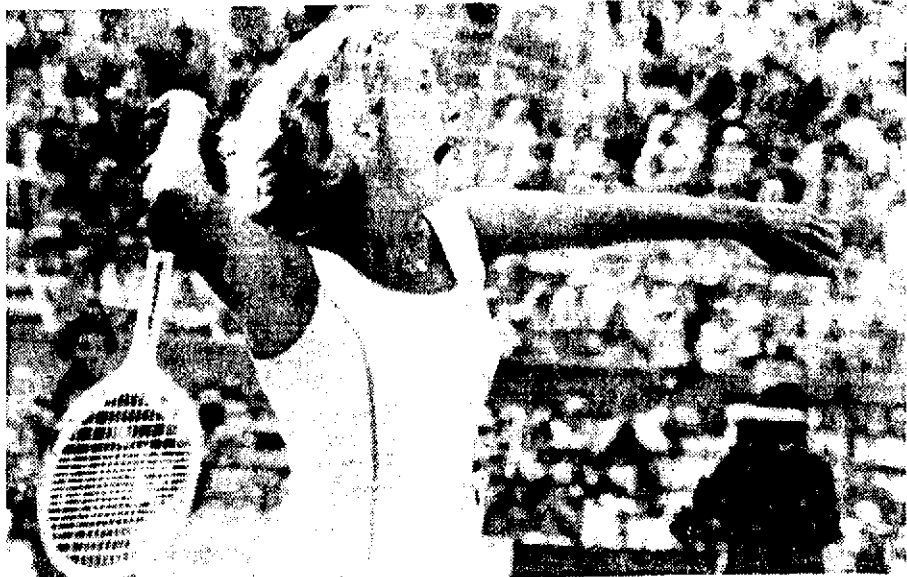

Ethel's mother provided her with the fundamental religious faith that most of her friends believe sustained her when her parents were killed in a plane crash in 1955, when her brother George Skakel Jr. died in a small plane in 1966, when her brother-in-law John Kennedy was assassinated, and when her husband was killed in 1968.

These tragedies were followed by others, some familiar to this generation's parents. One son was arrested for possession of marijuana and later reportedly hospitalized for a drug-related illness. Another, Joseph, a Harvard student who spent part of last spring as campaign manager for his uncle Teddy's certain re-election to the Senate, was the driver of a Jeep involved in an accident in which a girlfriend was paralyzed.

Ethel's devout Catholicism — she goes to mass each day and once lectured Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger about allowing God in public schools — has helped her with these times. Friends like John Siegenthaler, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, and columnist Art Buchwald and relatives like Teddy have listened to hours of Ethel's motherly complaints and worries, but in the end, it is Ethel, not the surrogate fathers, who is bringing up the Bobby Kennedy children.

As a girl, Ethel had not planned to take on the troubles of motherhood, her friends recall. She wanted instead to be a nun, and she was not very interested in boys until age 17, when she met a handsome blue-eyed Irishman — 20-year-old Bobby Kennedy — at a Canadian ski resort.

From the beginning, Bobby's enthusiasms became hers. She joined Jack's 1946 campaign for Congress, and four years later, to nobody's surprise by then, she and Bobby were married.

ETHEL KENNEDY'S exuberant spirit and competitive nature are never more in evidence than when she is supporting a cause. Here she plays in last year's RFK Celebrity Tennis Match, a charitable social of the great and near-great.

Eunice Shriver, Bobby's sister and the wife of Sargent Shriver, told Time magazine after her brother's death: "I hear him on the beach, in his home, on his boat, on the front lawn playing football, at the tennis court — always with the same question: 'Where is Ethel?' He grew out slowly. He was a lonely, very sensitive, and unfulfilled youngster. He met Ethel, and all the love and appreciation for which she seemed to have an infinite capacity came pouring down on him. How he blossomed."

HE GREW, IN FACT, from a shy lawyer to a crusading attorney general for his brother and finally to a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1968 — in a campaign that ended with his assassination in Los Angeles by Sirhan Sirhan.

During the hysteria and shock following Bobby Kennedy's death, friends remember, Ethel was calm and comforting to others. On the train that took her husband's body home, Ethel roamed through the 29 cars consoling friends, relatives, and journalists who had covered his campaign. It was only when she was alone in the family compartment that she threw herself over her husband's bier and sobbed with the agony that was expected.

Most of that mania, that desire to fill every moment with fun even if she doesn't feel like it, is gone from Ethel now, according to associates who have watched her endure these last eight years.

The energy has settled into a steady surge — to bring up the 11 children, the youngest of whom was born almost seven months after her husband's death, and to preserve the image of a man that the world won't be able to forget. At least, not if Ethel Kennedy has anything to say about it.

Women must learn management game

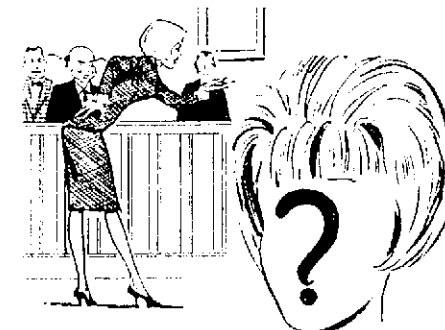

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Competent women are missing opportunities to advance in the corporate world because they fail to understand the unwritten code by which large industrial enterprises operate, a management authority says.

"Assertiveness is no match for the smarts," said Prof. Eugene Jennings, who has spent his adult life studying the routes and techniques used in ascending the corporate management ladder.

Jennings, management professor at Michigan State University and confidential adviser to many corporate chief executives, said the female behavior pattern has revealed itself as more managerial jobs open up for them.

"Potentially competent women are opting themselves right into oblivion," he said. After promising beginnings, and in spite of equal rights legislation, their upward mobility is stalled by an insensitivity to the code.

Jennings states that the first principle of mobility is to see the corporation as it really is. Assertive women, he explained, sometimes try to make the company over to fit their desires rather than to work with it as it is.

"American women have been misled into thinking the assertiveness of the service world, such as advertising, will work in the more sedate and tough-minded manufacturing sector of our society," he continued.

Those who understand the real world of manufacturing know that "nobody is put in charge of an enterprise unless trusted implicitly, and hard work and assertiveness are not necessarily synonymous with trust," said Jennings.

A woman with the smarts, as Jennings chooses to call a knowledge of the corporate code, recognizes that it is a team effort that cannot be played by just one person, no matter how assertive that person might be. Compromise is essential.

THE SMART WOMAN, he said, will recognize she must have a sponsor, a supervisor who is mobile and wants a talented subordinate who will work hard to get her promoted, and who in fact believes she is crucial to his mobility.

"Women who are self-centered cannot work to get the boss promoted and therefore cannot get themselves promoted," Jennings observed, adding: "No woman is allowed to walk over more than one boss to get a promotion."

Asked if that remark might not provoke a caustic retort from women, Jennings revealed that his sympathies are entirely with the women — that in fact he is guiding a seminar for women executives on the subject at his college on Feb. 12 and that he pioneered a similar seminar back in 1965.

Nevertheless, he added that "Women who react to that statement have themselves as their worst problem." Assertiveness by itself, he emphasized, can be counterproductive.

A lot of women are doing great things in corporations but nobody sponsors them, said Jennings. Not that the situation is all their fault. "Women are given training but not private coaching."

As a result, they often play the game poorly. They fail to become part of the "in" group. Sometimes they make enemies of their bosses. They are boxed in and shut out.

A PARTICULARLY bad blunder — for women and men — is to align themselves with the wrong supporters. A supervisor who is immobile, whose own Truman Capote. But there's no time for laughter. "Lee" is about to "slip into something more spectacular." A voice like God parting the Red Sea announces: "And now...the Palace of Versailles proudly presents...Freddie Chopin!"

Yes, it's Lee, dressed like Cornel Wilde, in a blue sequin tux dripping with French lace, playing the "Polonaise" while fountains of turquoise water splash recklessly behind him in a drawing room filled with ballet dancers and crystal chandeliers. He can't top this! But wait. There's more.

Lee, in high-heel sequin boots, plays boogie woogie 8 to the bar, then 16 to the bar, in a brand new rink, lined in red with all the faces of the little punks writhing in a mask of revulsion. Maybe they don't like boogie woogie. Maybe they don't live Las Vegas.

"Remember that bank I used to cry all the way to," beams Lee, undaunted. "Well, I bought it." Then he brings out his chauffeur, who plays "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," and a 15-year-old protégée, who sings like Edith Piaf. But enough of all that music.

It's time to show the ring collection. Lee, in black diamond mink lined in Austrian rhinestones, bends over to the fainting women from Des Moines on a night out from the Midwest Dr. Pepper Bottling Convention, and shows the rings on every finger — Russian sapphires, diamonds in the shape of pianos and candlesticks, and a watch of 26 rubies with two diamonds you press, releasing a fly-open top that reveals the time in star sapphires!

and blue Rolls convertible with a license plate that reads "88 KEYS" from which emerges — you guessed it — in a red, white and blue Mardi Gras costume enshrouded with white maribou feathers. The lights go out while the band strikes up "Stars and Strips Forever." Lee lights up in firecrackers and Roman candles, and then flies across the ceiling screaming "Mary Poppins, eat your heart out!"

The audience, limp from hysteria, eats it like milk and cookies. It's awful. It's over. Outside, the chauffeur is signing autographs and selling Liberace records while a loudspeaker rages: "Telephone call for Sheeky Greene!"

No, I don't want to bump and grind till 4 a.m. in the underground Benihana Palace. I'm too weary to catch Ann-Margret, too bruised to enter the $100,000 bingo game at 3 a.m. at the Aladdin, too broke to place another $5 bet on the nines at the Circus Circus while trapeze acts fly over my head at 5 a.m. and nude go-go girls feed me a champagne breakfast.

The plane leaves the ground. The lights blaze below, scorching the moon surface with an electric bill that would pay off the national debt. The man next to me beams. "Love that town. Won $10,000 on the nines. Is manslaughter legal at 30,000 feet!"

papers to Woodward. He did it when Woodward was engrossed in conversation with Ethel at a party. "When she saw it," Stern recalled recently, "she began shouting and screaming. Then she grabbed her jock-of-the-week escort and left."

Excessive as her reaction may seem in an insouciant society like Washington's, it was predictable to her close friends, who almost always mention Ethel's sense of loyalty just before they ask you not to use their names.

Above all, Ethel is loyal. It is not the easy loyalty between friends who love each other when one of them does something stupid or wrong. It is a demanding loyalty, a rough brand of friendship that permits no transgressions in certain areas.

Friends of LaDonna Harris, the warm-hearted wife of former Sen. Fred Harris, say she was heartbroken when Ethel refused to speak to her in 1968 after her husband supported Sen. Hubert Humphrey for President instead of Bobby.

"When Ethel turns it off, it's like a wall. You are no longer there. You do not exist, and there is no remorse on her part. It's just over," said one Washington woman who endured a similar Kennedy turnoff.

In the case of Kraft, who reportedly was bewildered by Ethel's response to his column, he was disloyal to her image of Bobby. In Stern's case, he had attacked her belief that the rumors about JFK's love life were sordid and untrue.

"She's almost naive," one friend explains hesitantly. "She refused to believe anything was going on between JFK and Exner. Finally somebody had to tell her about the phone calls. Nobody makes 40 phone calls to the President — gets through to the President of the United States 90 times — unless something is going on."

But Ethel's rigidity on some matters may be understandable. She has been rich, but not comfortable, for a lot of her life. From the beginning, her parents somehow prepared her to endure some of the tragedies that would follow.

ETHEL WAS BORN in Chicago in 1928, the daughter of George and Ann Skakel. Her father, who built his fortune in Great Lakes Carbon Corp., moved the family to New York and finally to gracious Greenwich, Conn. But he repeatedly reminded his four girls and three boys that their easy life was not a secure one. "We could all be thrown out on the street tomorrow," he told them often.

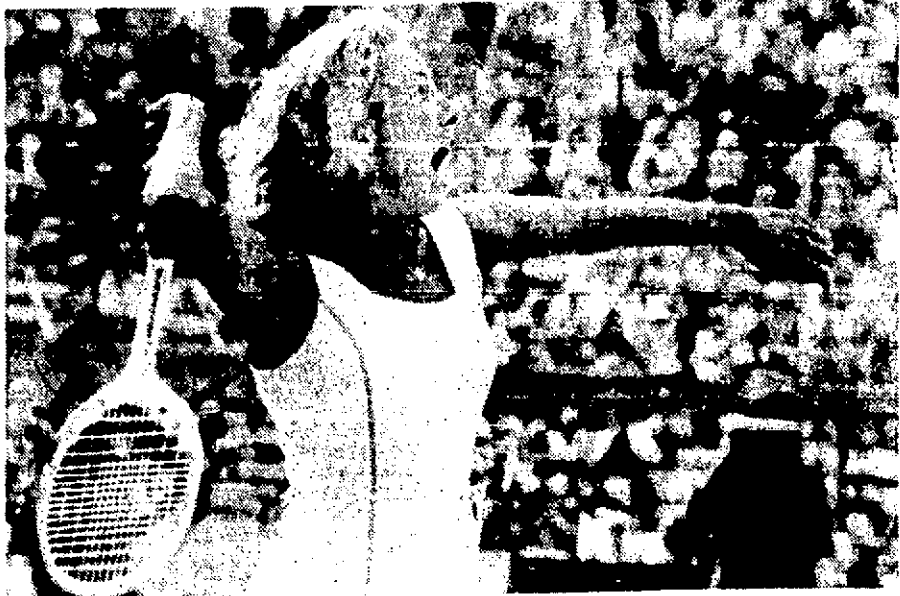

Ethel's mother provided her with the fundamental religious faith that most of her friends believe sustained her when her parents were killed in a plane crash in 1955, when her brother George Skakel Jr. died in a small plane in 1966, when her brother-in-law John Kennedy was assassinated, and when her husband was killed in 1968.

These tragedies were followed by others, some familiar to this generation's parents. One son was arrested for possession of marijuana and later reportedly hospitalized for a drug-related illness. Another, Joseph, a Harvard student who spent part of last spring as campaign manager for his uncle Teddy's certain re-election to the Senate, was the driver of a Jeep involved in an accident in which a girlfriend was paralyzed.

Ethel's devout Catholicism — she goes to mass each day and once lectured Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger about allowing God in public schools — has helped her with these times. Friends like John Siegenthaler, publisher of the Nashville Tennessean, and columnist Art Buchwald and relatives like Teddy have listened to hours of Ethel's motherly complaints and worries, but in the end, it is Ethel, not the surrogate fathers, who is bringing up the Bobby Kennedy children.

As a girl, Ethel had not planned to take on the troubles of motherhood, her friends recall. She wanted instead to be a nun, and she was not very interested in boys until age 17, when she met a handsome blue-eyed Irishman — 20-year-old Bobby Kennedy — at a Canadian ski resort.

From the beginning, Bobby's enthusiasms became hers. She joined Jack's 1946 campaign for Congress, and four years later, to nobody's surprise by then, she and Bobby were married.

ETHEL KENNEDY'S exuberant spirit and competitive nature are never more in evidence than when she is supporting a cause. Here she plays in last year's RFK Celebrity Tennis Match, a charitable social of the great and near-great.

Eunice Shriver, Bobby's sister and the wife of Sargent Shriver, told Time magazine after her brother's death: "I hear him on the beach, in his home, on his boat, on the front lawn playing football, at the tennis court — always with the same question: 'Where is Ethel?' He grew out slowly. He was a lonely, very sensitive, and unfulfilled youngster. He met Ethel, and all the love and appreciation for which she seemed to have an infinite capacity came pouring down on him. How he blossomed."

HE GREW, IN FACT, from a shy lawyer to a crusading attorney general for his brother and finally to a candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1968 — in a campaign that ended with his assassination in Los Angeles by Sirhan Sirhan.

During the hysteria and shock following Bobby Kennedy's death, friends remember, Ethel was calm and comforting to others. On the train that took her husband's body home, Ethel roamed through the 20 cars consoling friends, relatives, and journalists who had covered his campaign. It was only when she was alone in the family compartment that she threw herself over her husband's bier and sobbed with the agony that was expected.

Most of that mania, that desire to fill every moment with fun even if she doesn't feel like it, is gone from Ethel now, according to associates who have watched her endure these last eight years.

The energy has settled into a steady surge — to bring up the 11 children, the youngest of whom was born almost seven months after her husband's death, and to preserve the image of a man that the world won't be able to forget. At least, not if Ethel Kennedy has anything to say about it.

Women must learn management game

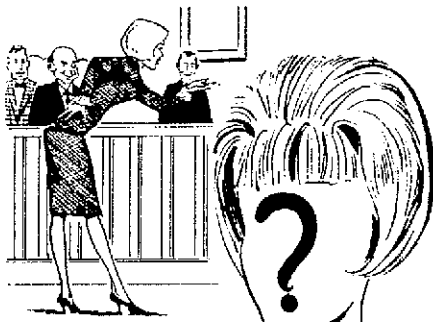

By JOHN CUNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK — Competent women are missing opportunities to advance in the corporate world because they fail to understand the unwritten code by which large industrial enterprises operate, a management authority says.

"Assertiveness is no match for the smarts," said Prof. Eugene Jennings, who has spent his adult life studying the routes and techniques used in ascending the corporate management ladder.

Jennings, management professor at Michigan State University and confidential adviser to many corporate chief executives, said the female behavior pattern has revealed itself as more managerial jobs open up for them.

"Potentially competent women are opting themselves right into oblivion," he said. After promising beginnings, and in spite of equal rights legislation, their upward mobility is stalled by an insensitivity to the code.

Jennings states that the first principle of mobility is to see the corporation as it really is. Assertive women, he explained, sometimes try to make the company over to fit their desires rather than to work with it as it is.

IN-SIGHTS

A voice for marriage

An increasing number of couples are living together without the benefit of marriage. From 1960 to 1970, census figures showed a 20-fold increase in young adults living with an unrelated member of the opposite sex. Since 1970, the number has again doubled.

Why so? Why a reluctance to make a permanent marriage commitment to one another? Some young people rationalize their behavior by saying they're not ready. They don't want to get married until they are "sure." Sure of what? Not being left? Or hurt? Or trapped?

One of the significant features of the marriage contract is an agreement to accept each other "for better or for worse, for richer or for poorer, in sickness and in health." There is no guarantee against being hurt.

dr. walt menninger

Why get married? Recently, I received another letter from Helen Graebner, a widow in Grandview, Mo., who speaks to this question beautifully:

Dear Dr. Menninger,

I wonder if you will sometime write a column on the positive aspects of marriage. It seems to me that marriage has had a "bad press" for quite some time now. We seem to read almost exclusively about the negative qualities of marriage. Divorce or "living together" without a commitment are the fashionable things to do.

I think that the closest, finest, most satisfying relationship in the world is that found between a husband and wife in a good marriage. And I believe this relationship can be found only within marriage. Which, I suppose, marks me as hopelessly old-fashioned; but I still believe it.

I am aware that the term "good" does not necessarily mean the same thing to all people. I am speaking of a relationship in which each partner cares more for the happiness of the other than for his or her own. Within that context, a caring, loving concerned relationship can banish loneliness and illuminate the dailyness of living.

MY HUSBAND and I had that kind of marriage; it is not achieved easily or quickly and must be earned by constant effort — but it is worth all it costs in energy and time and thought and love expended.

I am appalled at much of the drivel being written in today's books and slick magazines: do what YOU want to do — never mind whom you hurt in the process; find yourself.

In the first place, no one ever "found" a self; you build one, little by little, day by day, year by year. In the second place, it is only a child who believes that he can always do only what he wants to do.

A mature person knows that sometimes the needs of others must take precedence over his or her own desires of the moment. Who wants to get up in the middle of the night with a sick or fretful child?

What the please-yourself authors are not telling their readers is that their way leads eventually to aloneness and loneliness. The Christian edict that you gain a life by losing it is still valid — not losing it in slavery or servitude to a mate, but in blending it into a partnership to seek common goals.

This does not mean that each one must sacrifice his or her own personality; each partner's concern for the other will make opportunities for that personality to develop.

I am sad when I think of all the people who are being cheated of a wonderful loving relationship within a marriage because they listen to and believe the anti-marriage propaganda so prevalent today.

The horrible thought is that most of these people are going to grow into a lonely old age. So, please, Dr. Menninger, write a column from time to time on the positive, wonderful aspects of marriage.

Sincerely, Helen Graebner.

MEDICINE AND YOU

Problem more than skin deep

Patients with delusions of parasitosis (parasitic infestation) need the comfort and support of the dermatologist (skin specialist).

So says Dr. Robert W. Goltz, professor of dermatology at the University of Minnesota Medical School.

"It's important, of course, to rule out actual infestation, and that, perhaps, is our main obligation," he says.

The typical patient with delusion, he says, is a woman in her 40s or 50s who has numerous excoriations and gouges on the skin.

Characteristically, she brings with her shreds and bits of skin, usually wrapped in Kleenex or ben zinser

bathroom tissue. She hands this material to the doctor and urges him to examine it under the microscope.

This type of patient usually has already visited several other physicians before seeing the dermatologist. She probably has been treated for some skin disorder.

The typical patient is the menopausal or postmenopausal female who is depressed. But others who can develop this delusion are patients with organic brain disease, cocaine addicts and those with various brain or circulatory disorders.

A clue to such patients is the absence of involvement in the back area where they can't reach.

Smoke inhalation

X-ray films often fail to show smoke damage to the lungs of fire victims, a doctor says.

The finding is significant because one-third of fire victims die of pulmonary damage due to smoke inhalation.

The report on smoke inhalation problems comes from Dr. Charles E. Putman, clinical director of radiology at Yale University School of Medicine, New Haven, Conn.

He cites a series of 21 patients aged 21 to 81 who were victims of smoke inhalation in household fires. The most common finding was a normal chest X-ray film.

However, the development of a rasping cough, or a cough that produces sput or hoarseness, does indicate injury to the respiratory tract, he says.

Various tests can quickly indicate pulmonary injury so that treatment can be started, he says.

Details are in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Firm grip on numbers

A device for training and exercising hand muscles has a built-in counter for documenting completion of a prescribed therapy.

The instrument, called Ergo Rehab, is held in one hand. The patient gradually increases flexion (bending) force until there's a click and the small dial on the right advances by one. This signals that full flexion force has been exerted.

The exerciser is available in three models requiring five, 10 or 20 pounds or pressure, respectively, to attain full flexion force.

Information about Ergo Rehab may be obtained by writing: Psytech, Inc., Canton at Railroad Ave., St. Michaels, Md. 21063.

A report on the device appears in Geriatrics, a medical journal.

Get a job, Mom

It's better for mothers to work, a pediatrician says.

Reason: It's good for the child since the child is removed from the over-protectiveness of the mother.

The view is that of Dr. Augusta Rebham, assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of Toronto, Canada.

Firm grip on numbers

A device for training and exercising hand muscles has a built-in counter for documenting completion of a prescribed therapy.

The instrument, called Ergo Rehab, is held in one hand. The patient gradually increases flexion (bending) force until there's a click and the small dial on the right advances by one. This signals that full flexion force has been exerted.

The exerciser is available in three models requiring five, 10 or 20 pounds or pressure, respectively, to attain full flexion force.

Information about Ergo Rehab may be obtained by writing: Psytech, Inc., Canton at Railroad Ave., St. Michaels, Md. 21663.

A report on the device appears in Geriatrics, a medical journal.

Get a job, Mom

It's better for mothers to work, a pediatrician says.

Reason: It's good for the child since the child is removed from the over-protectiveness of the mother.

The view is that of Dr. Augusta Rebham, assistant professor of pediatrics at the University of Toronto, Canada.

When the ordinary becomes extraordinary

Opening Monday at USC's Art Galleries is a major exhibition of the art of Wayne Thiebaud, one of the most important realist painters in America today. Thiebaud, who grew up in Long Beach, deals with a wide range of subject matter including landscapes, figures, cityscapes, animals, food and many ordinary objects of modern life.

Examples of all the artist's interests have been gathered for the exhibition by Don Brewer, gallery director, who comments, "Thiebaud's art has a lot to do with the innocent point of view and a sense of wonder about the painted object. In a way, he comes from the perspective of the universal child. He is more concerned about the meanings his paintings immediately convey than he is about their place in any classification of art history."

The USC exhibition includes many subjects not often thought of as objects for the serious artist. There are lollipops, cakes, pin ball machines, ice cream cones and men's neckties.

"I try to find things to paint which I feel have been overlooked," Thiebaud explains. "Maybe a lollipop tree has not seemed like a thing worth painting because of its banal references."

His paintings are in collections at the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Coreorran Gallery of Art, Philadelphia Museum of Art, Whitney Museum of American Art and numerous private collections.

Catalog for the exhibition, "Wayne Thiebaud: Survey 1947-1976," includes an in-depth essay on the artist and his work written by Gene Cooper, associate professor of art history at Long Beach State University.

The exhibition, open to the public Tuesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m., continues through March 6.

AWARD-WINNING artists will be present at a reception Monday when Long Beach Art Association's all-media open juried show opens at the Long Beach Recreation Department, 155 Queens Way Landing.

The public is invited to attend the 7 to 10 p.m. event and to meet the artists whose entries were juried by Thomas Enman, director of the Laguna Beach Museum of Art.

Cash award winners were Helen B. Reed, first, "Summer Picnic;" Marjorie Graham, second, "The Jurying;" and David R. Johnson, third, "Rudder's Chapel." Aline Thistlethwaite won the Saylor Art Supply Company award for "Fourth of July Race."

Honorable mention went to Joan Beck, Marian Bruce, Ruth Eyrich, Neil Frankenhauser, Douglas McPhaul and B. J. Wilson.

More than 260 entries were received for the show which continues through March 1. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

YOUTH FROM seven area junior high schools, six high schools and four colleges have come up with an idea for a creative youth art show that promises to be of interest to the general public.

The one-day event will be next Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. in Bixby Knolls Christian Church, 1240 E. Carson St.

Arts and crafts exhibited by the young people will include oil paintings, batik, sand painting, geometric string designs, ceramics and macramé. There also will be a continuous program of drama, dance, gymnastics, vocal ensembles, a rock band and stage band — even a demonstration in the fine points of skateboarding.

Helping coordinate the event are Dan Krigbaum, art exhibition; Connie Adams, drama segment; Kent Hayworth, instrumental music, and Ken Willey and Gayle Schoepf, vocal music.

DEMONSTRATING landscape painting before Bellflower Art Association Tuesday will be William Palluth. The meeting, which is open to the public, will take place in Simms Park social hall, 16614 Clark Ave., Bellflower, at 7:30 p.m.

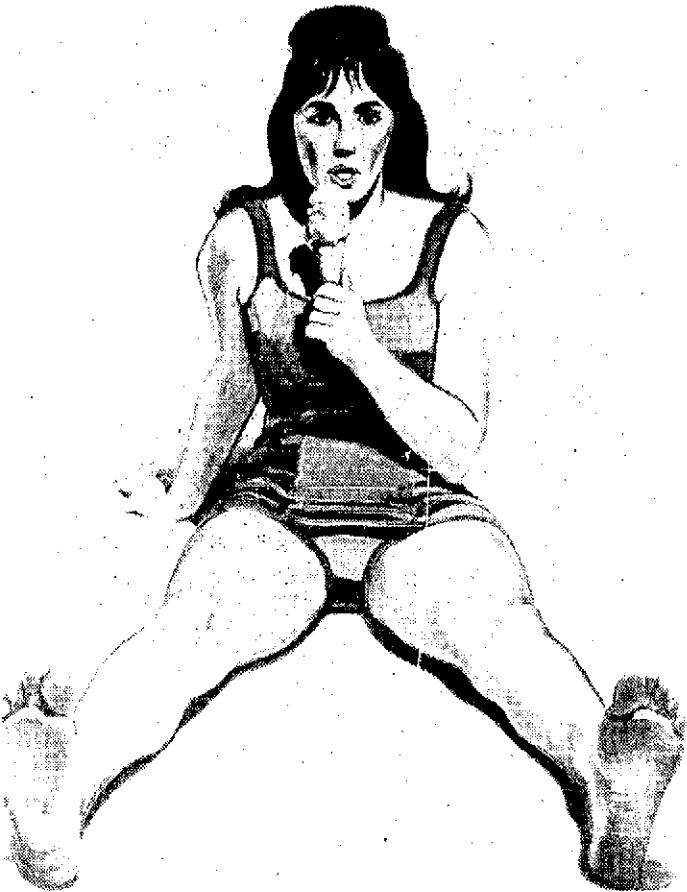

"THE CAULIFLOWER Alley Tapes," produced by artists Lowell Darling and Ilene Segalove of Los Angeles, are an interesting attraction at the Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

The tapes are part of a documentary artwork focused on Hollywood's Cauliflower Alley Club, an organization of ex-boxers and wrestlers whose careers also included appearances as "heavies" in countless Hollywood detective and gangster films. The 50-minute color videotape is based on the club members' remembrances of the fight game, the motion pictures and their lives in general.

Prefaced with a dedication by Mae West, a catalog accompanying the exhibition includes an introduction by David A. Ross, the museum's deputy director for television and film, writings by the artists and Cauliflower Alley Club photographs. The show concludes March 13.

REDWOOD EMPIRE, as seen through the sensitive eyes of Ansel Adams, one of California's most renowned photographers, will be seen in 60 photographs in an exhibit until Feb. 24 at Occidental Center, 1150 S. Olive St., Los Angeles.

The exhibition is free and open to the public from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. seven days a week. The exhibit was first commissioned by the Redwood Empire Association and displayed at the San Francisco Museum of Art in 1965. Later the collection was given on permanent loan to the California Historical Society for circulation.

"GIRL With Ice Cream Cone" is one of the paintings in Wayne Thiebaud exhibition through March 6 at USC art galleries. Artist, once a Long Beach resident, is considered one of the most important realist painters in America today.

IMAGINATION PLAYS a role in two exhibits at the California State Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles. The city and the country of the midwest are explored photographically by Tim White of Chicago in the Omnibus Room.

In two groups of photographs, White compares an urban setting with the folk architecture of small villages in Wisconsin's north woods. The urban portrait explores a great midwestern city in the long shadows of late afternoon through dusk. The second group reveals the objects and habitants of the countryside suggesting a relationship between the area's occupants and natural environment.

Another exhibit, "Printer's Ink," is a collection of derivagraphics, an art form developed by Californian Kenneth Stone who combines lithography and photography in his work, utilizing black and white or color film and producing the final image from metal plates.

Admission to both exhibits is free. The displays will be at the museum, open 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily, through May 1.

Browning to perform

Sidney Harth, associate conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic, will be on the Music Center podium Thursday through Sunday leading the orchestra in a program that features the internationally-acclaimed American pianist John Browning as soloist in Ravel's Concerto in G.

Harth also will conduct the Rachmaninoff Symphony No. 2 and the Los Angeles premiere of Leslie Bassett's Bicentennial commissioned work, "Echoes from an Invisible World" which was first performed last year by the Philadelphia Orchestra.

Program times are Thursday at 8:30 p.m.; Friday, 1:30 p.m.; Saturday, 8:30 p.m., and Sunday, 2:30 p.m.

Concerts manager Richard Bass will be guest speaker at a symphony preview Friday noon in the Music Center. The preview is free to ticketholders of the 1:30 concert.

Senior citizen discount tickets at $3 are now on sale for the Friday matinee concert. Identification is required. Tickets may be purchased at the Music Center box office in advance. Special discount tickets for senior citizens at $1.50 are subject to availability and go on sale at 10 a.m. the day of the performance.

Takes two to tango

Karen Aldridge and Steve Cobb are ready to dance their way to Rio in this scene from "Spinoff," new comedy by Jack Sharkey involving a zany bank embezzlement. The play is the current production at Long Beach Community Playhouse, 5021 Anaheim St. Audiences find out if they get away with the cash Fridays and Saturdays at 8:30 p.m. through Feb. 12. Playhouse's Studio Theater opens Tuesday with "Norman. Is That You?"

YOUR BEST CHANCE
Achieve your dreams through a Universal Wall Systems Dealership

Until now, women have played little part in the planning and sale of room additions, but we believe that with the new Universal Wall Systems Room Addition Kits, women may do the best job of all. It does not matter that you do not know the remodeling business, nor that you do not know how to plan and sell room additions, nor even that you do not know how to start and manage your own business. If you are mentally alert, know how to talk with people and have some degree of creative imagination, the Universal Wall Systems Sales Manual will teach you all that and more. It will teach you all you really need to know to achieve your wildest dreams. We are not the least interested in those who will be satisfied with earning only $1,000 or $2,000 a week. We seek only those who are not limited by their ambitions and have the energy to pursue them.

The remarkable Universal Wall Systems Room Addition Kits are amongst the most saleable items in the world. They make possible the construction of a roomy room addition in only seven to nine days of work, instead of the weeks and months it takes for conventional construction. They may be erected either by homeowners (it's easy) or contractors. And when constructed by a contractor aligned with the Universal Wall Systems Room Addition program, the total cost of the addition is only a fraction of the price most contractors charge for similar additions built with conventional construction. The Universal Wall Systems method of construction is better than conventional construction in every way. Furthermore, with the training we give our sales representatives, and the draftsmen and architects who work with them, Universal Wall Systems room additions are amongst the best planned and best designed in the world. Our 15-minute Audio-Visual program makes the explanation and sale of our system a simple matter.

NO INVESTMENT IS NEEDED TO BECOME A UNIVERSAL WALL SYSTEMS DEALER. However, those selected will need a small amount of capital to cover expenses of their own business.

No material will be mailed. All interviews will be held at the Universal Wall Systems factory in Costa Mesa, California. Write or telephone for an appointment.

CHAMBER SOCIETY

Schedule doubled

Three additional concerts will be given by the Los Angeles Philharmonic Chamber Music Society, since the inaugural season of three concerts at the Mark Taper Forum was oversubscribed within days of the first announcement.

All extra concerts will take place in Bovard Auditorium on the USC campus at 8:30 p.m.

First concert is tonight and will feature guest artist James Levine, pianist. The works of Mozart, Ravel and Dvorak will be on the program. Tickets may be purchased at Bovard Auditorium box office.

Violist Pinchas Zukerman will be guest artist at the March 13 concert. The guest artist for the concert April 24 will be announced.

THE SOCIETY consists mainly of principal players of the Philharmonic joining under direction of Sidney Harth, the orchestra's principal concertmaster and associate conductor.

The Society was formed to apply the varied literature of instrumental music designed for ensembles of from two to twelve players. It draws upon the numerous solo artists in all sections of the Philharmonic for performances of repertoires not possible to conventional chamber groups such as string quartets or wind quintets.

The broad repertoire, representing music from four centuries, allows flexible programming possible to such groups as the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center, the Boston Symphony Chamber Players and the Melos Ensemble of London.

Cabaret goes 12th century

"The Lion in Winter," starring Gretchen Kanne and William Poore, is current offering through March 6 of the Cabaret Theater Company, 1201 W. Malvern Ave., Fullerton, site of the Muckenthaler Cultural Center.

Performances are at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and at 6 p.m. Sunday. Tickets are $6 and include admission to the play, gourmet snacks and choice of beverages.

The exhibition, open to the public Tuesdays through Sundays from noon to 5 p.m., continues through March 6.

AWARD-WINNING artists will be present at a reception Monday when Long Beach Art Association's all-media open juried show opens at the Long Beach Recreation Department, 155 Queens Way Landing.

The public is invited to attend the 7 to 10 p.m. event and to meet the artists whose entries were judged by Thomas Enman, director of the Laguna Beach Museum of Art.

Cash award winners were Helen B. Reed, first, "Summer Picnic," Marjorie Graham, second, "The Jurying," and David R. Johnson, third, "Rudder's Chapel." Aline Thistlethwaite won the Saylor Art Supply Company award for "Fourth of July Race."

Honorable mention went to Joan Beck, Marian Bruce, Ruth Eyrich, Neil Frankenhauser, Douglas McPhaul and B. J. Wilson.

More than 260 entries were received for the show which continues through March 1. Hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays.

YOUTH FROM seven area junior high schools, six high schools and four colleges have come up with an idea for a creative youth art show that promises to be of interest to the general public.

Fashion exhibit reflects changes

Styles fashionable in Los Angeles from the 1820s through the late 1940s form a free exhibit opening Tuesday at the Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd.

Oldest dresses illustrate the Mexican-Spanish influence of the young city and include the "china poblana," a simple gathered skirt and deep-necked cotton chemise which typified the relaxed life of early Los Angeles residents.

Stylish attire of new residents coming from the East coast in 1880 caused Los Angeles women to begin dressing with sophistication and flair.

Garments purchased locally and abroad by the fashion-conscious represent the 1900 to 1925 period.

By the 1930s and 1940s Los Angeles began making its own fashion dictates. Examples of sophistication and simplicity are suit designs by Gilbert Adrian and Irene, and innovative hostess pajamas and beach suit by Addie Masters and Margit Fellgi.

Q. "Can you assist me in evaluating my cut glass treasures?" —Mrs. E. H., San Antonio, Tex.

A. Prices on fine quality cut glass from the Brilliant Period (1880-1915) have been rising higher and faster than a kite on a windy afternoon. Any piece should be carefully examined for a factory trademark, as this definitely enhances its value. Value guide: bowl, pinwheel design, 8-inch diameter, $130; butter pat, Russian pattern, $22; celery dish, hobstars, strawberry, diamond and fan, 12-inches long, $95; decanter, sans from various fields whose expertise enabled them to create net-sukes that qualify as art objects. Is it any wonder collectors are hooked on them? Value guide: warrior figure training horse, circa 1870, $85.

Q. "We stumbled upon a box full of old tokens in the attic." —Mr. and Mrs. T. R., Youngstown, Ohio.

A. Those who trudge after antique tokens sometimes prefer specializing in a particular category, limiting their collections to either advertising, commemorative, patriotic or political campaign types. Throughout the years they have been made of various metals such as copper, brass or pewter.

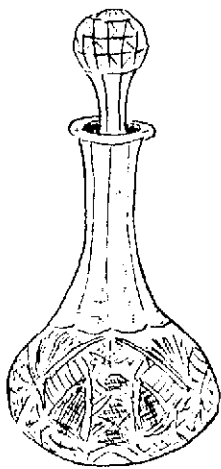

The trade tokens, bes. described as unofficial coins, have been circulated for centuries. Due to their scarcity, Southern tokens are especially prized. Assuming that your tokens are not already spoken for, selling them should be an easy chore. Value guide: advertising, National Cash Register, $5; campaign, Al Smith, $22; trade, "Good For 5 cent Cigar," $3.

Q. "Would our sheet music picturing famous screen personalities of the 20s, 30s and 40s merit collector attention?" —Mary, Lebanon, Pa.

A. Sheet music picturing luminaries of the silver screen fascinates nostalgia antique buffs, and appears destined for stardom within collecting circles. Value guide: "Animal Crackers in My Soup," Shirley Temple, $8; "Blue Lovebird," Alice Faye, $3.50; "Did I Remember," Jean Harlow, $4; "I Loved You Then," Joan Crawford, $4; "Kiss The Boys Goodbye," Mary Martin, $2.50.

The formula

What price beauty?

Over the years, I've seen many pounds and gallons of cosmetics used. And what I paid for all this would amount to a staggering sum. Ah, what price beauty!

Of course in more recent years we've made our own. Having been an observer to this "parade of beauty," I've noticed that face powder is a major part of the arsenal of beauty aids, and it's expensive to buy. So here's a formula you can make up yourself and save a bundle.

You'll need four cups of TALC, one-eighth cup BORIC ACID (from a drugstore), one cup CORNSTARCH, OIL-SOLUBLE DYE and OIL-SOLUBLE PERFUME (both found at drugstores or hardware stores), to suit. Mix the dry ingredients thoroughly and then mix in the dye and perfume. (Note a flour sifter is excellent for mixing, blending, and removing any foreign particles.) Store in glass, plastic or paperboard containers.

Besides the satisfaction you get by making your own products for personal or home care, most formulas are real money-savers that enable you to beat the price of store-bought items.

(Like any chemical product you use at home, you should store this one safely, label it — listing ingredients and noting any cautions — and keep it out of reach of children.)

(Now you can obtain The Formula Book 2, the follow-up to The Formula Book, with all new easy-to-make formulas for personal, home, and pet care, $5.95. And we now have available both Formula books in a handsome gift pack — two oversized paperback books in a durable slip case, ideal for gifts or home reference, $11.90. Please indicate whether you want Formula 1, II or the two-volume gift pack. Write to The Formula Book, P.O. Box 2218, Mission, Kan. 66201.)

The workshop

Take one hard-to-decorate wall, one steam or dry iron, our new jungle wall mural pattern and presto, an instant scene guaranteed to delight young and old alike. The design pictured here was transferred using the iron-on method to an 8-foot-high by 10-foot-wide wall with room to spare on both ends. But if you have a wider wall to cover, you can expand the mural to your needs. The figures are printed separately to make this a truly flexible mural.

After you have Leo the Lion, Gerry the Giraffe and Irving the Impala on your wall, simply paint by numbers using interior latex paint available everywhere.

Our full-size, iron-on pattern includes all the animals pictured here, plus complete instructions on preparing the wall for painting. We've even included an explanation of how to trace the mural onto a wall using carbon paper.

To obtain our new iron-on pattern, Jungle Wall Mural #588, send $3.75 (includes postage and handling) by check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Pres-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 2383 Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

AT WIT'S END

I want to boycott coffee. I really do, but basically I'm weak and cannot endure pain. Last week, I paid more for three pounds of coffee than I paid for a winter coat the first year I was married, but I can't help myself. You cannot imagine the pressure I get from the women in the neighborhood. The other morning I practically ran to the coffee klatch at Lois's house. Just inside the door Lois said, "Want a cup?" She put an empty cup in my hand. "Where's the coffee?" I asked. "I never promised you coffee." "That's not funny, Lois. Do you have any idea what I would give for a cup of coffee? I'd sell my children." "Wouldn't we all." "I'd sell my self-respect." "Braggart." "Lois! I'd sell my bowling trophy!" "Will you get hold of yourself? We've got to Answer: I see little reason for opener to ask for aces with a void. If partner shows one ace, will he know what to bid? Perhaps opener should have gambled six spades. However, the slam requires an even diamond break and will go down almost twice as often as it makes.

Dear Mr. Corn: I hear there's been a recent change in the laws. Is this so and does it affect either the scoring or revoke penalties at rubber bridge? — Update Check, Dayton, Ohio was insufficient. This change did not affect the laws for rubber bridge. The International Code of 1963 still applies to rubber bridge.

Answer: In 1975, a new version of the laws was published to apply specifically to duplicate bridge. Rubber and duplicate bridge differ in many respects and one set of laws

Answer: Only if you're in a desperate hurry and you like to gamble. After three passes, it is very unlikely that your opponents will find the means to interfere too much, so why not describe your hand accurately and allow partner to participate in the final decision?

"I never heard of it," said Carol.

"AND I HOPE you never do," I said. "I saw my mother in the morning without a cup of coffee once and it's the closest to death I ever want to come. She toasted and buttered her hand and put it on my sister's plate. She bumped into a footstool with her head. She felt a draft and it was her eyelashes blinking. When she thought no one was looking, she put her head in the coffee canister and inhaled. My father caught her trying to shave her tongue. It was awful."

"It must have been a terrible thing for a child to see," comforted Carol, "but have courage and it'll all be over soon."

"I know," I whimpered, "but a day without Joe DiMaggio is like a day without sunshine."

You can only be "lousy with courage" for so long. On the way back from school after lunch, I swung the car into a drive-in and yelled, "One cup of coffee please... and will you take a personal check?"

no trump. And how is partner supposed to decide where to play?

Dear Mr. Corn:

In duplicate bridge do players alert their opponents in specific instances? If so, can you clarify? Needs Alarm Clock, Tallahassee, Ala.

Answer: Yes. It all stems from the basic concept that the opponents are entitled to know the meanings of one's bids. In former days, most everyone played a standard system and alerts were not necessary. Now, some pairs use a number of sophisticated treatments which might be unknown to Mr. and Mrs. Average Player.

To overcome the problems involved, certain treatments are identified as alertable bids and when such a bid is made, unless otherwise stipulated by the opponents before play, bidder's partner must alert the opponents.

At that time, the opponents may question the meaning of the bid. This satisfies the requirement of making one's system known while eliminating the need for undue study and memorization beforehand.

The workshop

Take one hard-to-decorate wall, one steam or dry iron, our new jungle wall mural pattern and presto, an instant scene guaranteed to delight young and old alike. The design pictured here was transferred using the iron-on method to an 8-foot-high by 10-foot-wide wall with room to spare on both ends. But if you have a wider wall to cover, you can expand the mural to your needs. The figures are printed separately to make this a truly flexible mural.

steve ellingson

After you have Leo the Lion, Gerry the Giraffe and Irving the Impala on your wall, simply paint by numbers using interior latex paint available everywhere.

Our full-size, iron-on pattern includes all the animals pictured here, plus complete instructions on preparing the wall for painting. We've even included an explanation of how to trace the mural onto a wall using carbon paper.

To obtain our new iron-on pattern, Jungle Wall Mural #588, send $3.75 (includes postage and handling) by check or money order to Steve Ellingson, Independent, Press-Telegram, Pattern Dept., P. O. Box 2333 Van Nuys, Calif. 91409.

AT WIT'S END

Boycott a real grind

I want to boycott coffee. I really do, but basically I'm weak and cannot endure pain. Last week, I paid more for three pounds of coffee than I paid for a winter coat the first year I was married, but I can't help myself. You cannot imagine the pressure I get from the

women in the neighborhood. The other morning I practically ran to the coffee kiosk at Lois's house. Just inside the door Lois said, "Want a cup?" She put an empty cup in my hand. "Where's the coffee?" I asked. "I never promised you coffee." "That's not funny, Lois. Do you have any idea what I would give for a cup of coffee? I'd sell my children." "Wouldn't we all." "I'd sell my self-respect." "Braggart." "Lois! I'd sell my bowling trophy!" "Will you get hold of yourself? We've got to stand firm together or there is no telling how high the price of coffee will go."

"Look," I said regaining my composure. "I never thought I'd admit this to anyone, but I am older than the rest of you and I lived through the Great Coffee Drought of 1942 during the war."

"I never heard of it," said Carol.

"AND I HOPE you never do," I said. "I saw my mother in the morning without a cup of coffee once and it's the closest to death I ever want to come. She toasted and buttered her hand and put it on my sister's plate. She bumped into a footstool with her head. She felt a draft and it was her eyelashes blinking. When she thought no one was looking, she put her head in the coffee canister and inhaled. My father caught her trying to shave her tongue. It was awful."

"It must have been a terrible thing for a child to see," comforted Carol, "but have courage and it'll all be over soon."

"I know," I whimpered, "but a day without Joe DiMaggio is like a day without sunshine."

You can only be "lousy with courage" for so long. On the way back from school after lunch, I swung the car into a drive-in and yelled, "One cup of coffee please. . . and will you take a personal check?"

Aces on bridge

Dear Mr. Corn: We missed an easy slam on this bidding. Do you have a bidding cure?

Chicken, San Antonio, Tex.

Answer: I see little reason for opener to ask for aces with a void. If partner shows one ace, will he know what to bid? Perhaps opener should have gambled six spades. However, the slam requires an even diamond break and will go down almost twice as often as it makes.

Dear Mr. Corn: I hear there's been a recent change in the laws. Is this so and does it affect either the scoring or revoke penalties at rubber bridge? — Update Check, Dayton, Ohio was insufficient. This change did not affect the laws for rubber bridge. The International Code of 1963 still applies to rubber bridge.

Answer: In 1975, a new version of the laws was published to apply specifically to duplicate bridge. Rubber and duplicate bridge differ in many respects and one set of laws

Dear Mr. Corn: With entries no problem, what is the best way to play for all five tricks with this combination? — North A 9 6 3 2, South K J 7 — Lucky Louie, San Francisco Answer: Finesse to the jack. Do not cash the ace first in case East has a singleton queen.

Dear Mr. Corn: Rubber bridge, all vulnerable. Is there any logic to opening with three no trump after three passes on a balanced hand of 16-18 points? — Why Fiddle?, Long Beach, Calif.

Answer: Only if you're in a desperate hurry and you like to gamble. After three passes, it is very unlikely that your opponents will find the means to interfere too much, so why not describe your hand accurately and allow partner to participate in the final decision?

A game may well be on but it might not be three

PEGGY HECKEL
A warm-hearted "people" person

WHEN I WAS A BIT YOUNGER and just starting out as a restaurant columnist, my wife and I never visited bars. We didn't realize that many bars in the Long Beach area had dining rooms. Consequently, we overlooked some darned good luncheons and dinners.

As time passed we learned to enjoy wine or beer with our restaurant meals. Now that we're older, we even appreciate a cocktail before dinner as a way of preparing the taste buds for the delectables to come.

Many years ago, we failed to discover the excellent foods and fresh fruit daiquiris at the Keona bar at 1115 E. Wardlow Road just west of Orange Avenue. Time passed. The Keona changed and so did we. Eventually we discovered that its separate dining room has top-value luncheons and dinners and also features the biggest shrimp cocktails in town. The Keona's $1.25 shrimp cocktail is remarkably generous, containing a bonanza of shrimp. The giant shrimp cocktail, $2.50, comes in a whopper of an ice cream sundae glass. It's magnificent!

The Keona has been owned since the late 1950s by Chuck Heckel and his wife Peggy. Largely through Peggy's efforts, the bar and dining room have become far more attractive in recent years. Peggy has a creative streak a mile wide. She's a designer with an artistic knack for making three-dimensional pictures or displays. For many years the dining room has displayed one of her prize creations, a mermaid doll who appears to be under water because she's inside a large plastic bubble.

Each Christmas, Peggy creates a different Keona display with an original theme. Last month, she patiently assembled a beautiful, large bicentennial flag with Christmas lights. The flag, made from paper flowers, is now on display at the Jane Addams School on Pine Avenue, where the Heckels' grandson, Leon Williams, is a pupil.

Peggy is a "people" person, meaning she is a warm-hearted, affectionate woman who loves to be around people and to do nice things for them. She's the kind who often bakes pies as gifts for friends or acquaintances. She's a terrific cook (but doesn't cook at the Keona.) One of her Keona ideas is the wonderful French dressing for the salads.

The Keona's featured entree, served day and night, every day, is the broil-it-yourself top-sirloin steak. It's a "best buy," only $2.95 for a choice eight-ounce steak with baked potato, salad, bread and butter. The broiling is easy to do and takes only minutes. Also featured are the bullseye steak, $3.75, and Australian lobster (cooked by the Keona chef), $5.75. The special luncheons — Mondays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. — are also "best buys." They're mostly $1.95, such as the Monday special, three big meaty prime rib bones with salad and two vegetables.

RECENTLY, A FULLERTON WOMAN decided to host an elaborate party for 90 guests. She wisely decided to hire some experts to cater the affair, contacting a Long Beach restaurant, The Galley, 4500 E. Los Coyotes Diagonal.

The Fullerton woman has a beautiful home which was the setting for her party. She decided to start with hors d'oeuvres followed by New York strip steak with many accompaniments. While arranging the party with The Galley's chief caterer, Jim Choura, she decided to spend $8 per person for the dinner and $6 per person for a bountiful array of hors d'oeuvres.

She was surprised when Jim suggested that she serve half as many hors d'oeuvres. "But why?" she asked. "I want my friends to be really impressed by them."

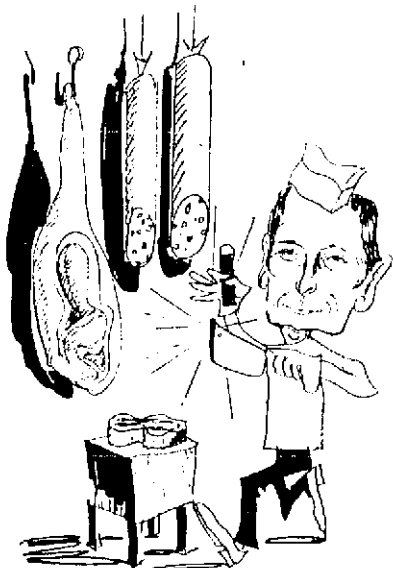

Jim explained that if she served too many hors d'oeuvres her guests would fill up on them and wouldn't have enough appetite left for the main course. "You'd be disappointed," said Jim, "and they'd be disappointed if you had a lot of expensive leftovers. The party wouldn't be truly successful."

The Galley made a smaller profit on the hors d'oeuvres, but the Fullerton woman was a thoroughly satisfied customer because her party, with less food, was a happy success.

Because of such expertise, The Galley restaurant, sandwich shop, delicatessen and party service is one of the most thriving operations in town. Last month, Jim and his staff handled over 400 parties, from small groups to events involving hundreds of guests. The parties ranged from simple affairs that cost $1.50 to $3 per person to fancy linen-and-crystal dinners with a chef, serving ladies and bus boys. The Galley supplies everything from forks to a live band.

Closed Sundays, The Galley is owned by Jim's parents, John and Marie Choura. The staff includes Jim's sister Susie and many employees. The family's expertise with meats goes back many decades. John began his career at age 16 working in his father's Prague Sausage Co. in Chicago. John came to California in 1948. For 20 years he was in the meat business in Lakewood and Long Beach. Jim began his meat-cutting career in his teens. When he was 20, he was assistant meat supervisor for the Mayfair markets; the youngest man ever to hold such a responsible position.

The Chouras opened the serve-yourself Galley in 1970. It's open for breakfast, luncheon and dinner. The meat sandwiches, served with salad and beans, are wonderful. So are the dinners, such as knock-wurst, $1.79; beef shortribs, $2.65, and choice spare ribs, $2.95.

PEGGY HECKEL
A warm-hearted "people" person

WHEN I WAS A BIT YOUNGER and just starting out as a restaurant columnist, my wife and I never visited bars. We didn't realize that many bars in the Long Beach area had dining rooms. Consequently, we overlooked some darned good luncheons and dinners.

As time passed we learned to enjoy wine or beer with our restaurant meals. Now that we're older, we even appreciate a cocktail before dinner as a way of preparing the taste buds for the delectables to come.

Many years ago, we failed to discover the excellent foods and fresh fruit daiquiris at the Keona bar at 1115 E. Wardlow Road just west of Orange Avenue. Time passed. The Keona changed and so did we. Eventually we discovered that its separate dining room has top-value luncheons and dinners and also features the biggest shrimp cocktails in town. The Keona's $1.25 shrimp cocktail is remarkably generous, containing a bonanza of shrimp. The giant shrimp cocktail, $2.50, comes in a whopper of an ice cream sundae glass. It's magnificent!

The Keona has been owned since the late 1950s by Chuck Heckel and his wife Peggy. Largely through Peggy's efforts, the bar and dining room have become far more attractive in recent years. Peggy has a creative streak a mile wide. She's a designer with an artistic knack for making three-dimensional pictures or displays. For many years the dining room has displayed one of her prize creations, a mermaid doll who appears to be under water because she's inside a large plastic bubble.

Each Christmas, Peggy creates a different Keona display with an original theme. Last month, she patiently assembled a beautiful, large bicentennial flag with Christmas lights. The flag, made from paper flowers, is now on display at the Jane Addams School on Pine Avenue, where the Heckels' grandson, Leon Williams, is a pupil.

Peggy is a "people" person, meaning she is a warm-hearted, affectionate woman who loves to be around people and to do nice things for them. She's the kind who often bakes pies as gifts for friends or acquaintances. She's a terrific cook (but doesn't cook at the Keona.) One of her Keona ideas is the wonderful French dressing for the salads.

The Keona's featured entree, served day and night, every day, is the broil-it-yourself top-sirloin steak. It's a "best buy," only $2.95 for a choice eight-ounce steak with baked potato, salad, bread and butter. The broiling is easy to do and takes only minutes. Also featured are the bullseye steak, $3.75, and Australian lobster (cooked by the Keona chef), $5.75. The special luncheons — Mondays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. — are also "best buys." They're mostly $1.95, such as the Monday special, three big meaty prime rib bones with salad and two vegetables.

RECENTLY, A FULLERTON WOMAN decided to host an elaborate party for 90 guests. She wisely decided to hire some experts to cater the affair, contacting a Long Beach restaurant, The Galley, 4500 E. Los Coyotes Diagonal.

The Fullerton woman has a beautiful home which was the setting for her party. She decided to start with hors d'oeuvres followed by New York strip steak with many accompaniments. While arranging the party with The Galley's chief caterer, Jim Choura, she decided to spend $8 per person for the dinner and $6 per person for a bountiful array of hors d'oeuvres.

She was surprised when Jim suggested that she serve half as many hors d'oeuvres. "But why?" she asked. "I want my friends to be really impressed by them."

Jim explained that if she served too many hors d'oeuvres her guests would fill up on them and wouldn't have enough appetite left for the main course. "You'd be disappointed," said Jim, "and they'd be disappointed if you had a lot of expensive leftovers. The party wouldn't be truly successful."

The Galley made a smaller profit on the hors d'oeuvres, but the Fullerton woman was a thoroughly satisfied customer because her party, with less food, was a happy success.

Because of such expertise, The Galley restaurant, sandwich shop, delicatessen and party service is one of the most thriving operations in town. Last month, Jim and his staff handled over 400 parties, from small groups to events involving hundreds of guests. The parties ranged from simple affairs that cost $1.50 to $3 per person to fancy linen-and-crystal dinners with a chef, serving ladies and bus boys. The Galley supplies everything from forks to a live band.

Closed Sundays, The Galley is owned by Jim's parents, John and Marie Choura. The staff includes Jim's sister Susie and many employees. The family's expertise with meats goes back many decades. John began his career at age 16 working in his father's Prague Sausage Co. in Chicago. John came to California in 1948. For 20 years he was in the meat business in Lakewood and Long Beach. Jim began his meat-cutting career in his teens. When he was 20, he was assistant meat supervisor for the Mayfair markets; the youngest man ever to hold such a responsible position.

The Chouras opened the serve-yourself Galley in 1970. It's open for breakfast, luncheon and dinner. The meat sandwiches, served with salad and beans, are wonderful. So are the dinners, such as knock-wurst, $1.79; beef shortribs, $2.65, and choice spareribs, $2.95.

DEAR ABBY

Son's taste in reading shocks mom

abigail van buren

DEAR ABBY: I found a girlie magazine in my 16-year-old son's room, so I confiscated it without saying anything. Should I mention it to him, or let him wonder what happened to it? I'm sure he didn't buy it. It's four months old and looks like it has been passed around quite a bit.

My reasons for hesitating to question him are:

- (1) I wanted to wait until my panicky feelings subsided;
- (2) I wanted to get an outsider's opinion;
- (3) I did not want to make him feel guilty.

I still feel guilty from being lambasted by my mother when I was 9 and she caught me discussing with playmates how cows and horses got pregnant (we lived on a farm). And I am now 50!

How should I handle this with my son? — WORRIED MOM

DEAR MOM: Return the magazine. Even a 16-year-old is entitled to some privacy. And if, after 41 years, you still feel "guilty" for having discussed how cows and horses mate, you should be reminded that most kids that age discuss such things. Your curiosity was normal and natural, and so is your son's. If he becomes preoccupied with "girlie magazines," a talk is in order. If not, get over your unearned guilt, and don't add to his.

DEAR ABBY: Last Sunday my husband and I were at my mother's when my in-laws dropped in unexpectedly on their way home from church. Ed (my husband) was watching a football game on TV in the living room where everyone gathered to talk. Ed's mother told him to turn down the TV.

He turned it down a little and drew his chair up closer to it and continued to watch while the rest of us continued to talk. The noise of the TV made it difficult for us to hear, so finally Ed's mother walked over to the set and turned it off.

With that, Ed stomped out of the house in a huff and took off in his car. What do you think of a 24-year-old man acting like that? — ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: I would say that in this case, rudeness was an inherited trait.

DEAR ABBY: I am a male teacher with no experience as a parent, but I have a suggestion for parents.

I teach third graders, and recently one class project of mine was to have the children make paper placemats. One little girl said she wasn't going to take hers home because her mother would only throw it away. She said her parents never showed appreciation for what she did, so she never tried very hard on the projects. Isn't that a sad way for a 9 year old to feel?

When I did projects in school, my mother taped them to the refrigerator to show off to her friends, even if they weren't the most beautiful. My parents also came to all my band and choir performances. This show of concern made me feel important, wanted and loved — feelings very important to children.

Parents, please take a few minutes to make your child feel like the most important person on the earth, and your child will return that love many times over. — LISTENING TO CHILDREN

DEAR LISTENING: A better comment has never been received or more gladly passed along.

Wanna shuffle off to Buffalo? — Forget it

Associated Press

While Buffalo tries to dig out of the worst snow storm of the winter, that upstate New York city's sports teams have gotten an unexpected weekend off. No teams — college or pro — are able to get into Buffalo and no teams can get out.

Old man winter, paying his respects to the East and Midwest in the past few days in the form of brutal weather, has caused postponement of two National Basketball Association games this weekend between the Buffalo Braves and the Cleveland Cavaliers and tonight's National Hockey League contest between the Kings and Buffalo Sabres.

In addition to Friday night's postponement at Buffalo between the Braves and Cavaliers, today's contest between the same teams at Cleveland was postponed.

Nobody could get in or out of Oxford, Ohio, either, but that didn't prevent Miami University and Ohio University from holding their scheduled Mid-American Conference swim meet.

They did it by phone.

The Miami swimmers swam their times in their own pool in Oxford while their OU counterparts performed at their pool in Athens, Ohio. The separate results were compared by telephone.

Basketball was another story. Somehow, they wouldn't trust scorekeepers with phoning in accurate results. So, many college basketball games were postponed because of the weather: St. Bonaventure at Niagara, St. Louis at Canisius and Fairfield at the University of Buffalo.

The college basketball game between Fordham and Notre Dame at South Bend, Ind., Saturday also was postponed. The Fordham team was reported stranded in Chicago. The teams hope to play today.

Among the other college basketball games postponed were St. Joseph's, Ind., at DePauw in Greencastle, Ind. and the entire Mid-American Conference schedule: Bowling Green at Western Michigan; Central Michigan at Ohio University; Eastern Michigan at Miami of Ohio, and Northern Illinois at Kent State.

Saturday night's Big Ten game between Ohio State and 13th-ranked Minnesota, scheduled for Columbus, Ohio, was switched to Minneapolis after the Ohio school shut down.

Thoroughbred horse racing was canceled at seven tracks Saturday. Closed were Keystone and Penn National in Pennsylvania, Bowie in Maryland, Chicago's Washington Park, Suffolk Downs in Boston, Latonia in Kentucky and Waterford Park in West Virginia.

Meanwhile, one beneficiary of the worst winter in years is the professional golf tour, which has had some of its best television ratings ever.

The tour has been seen from sunny stops in Arizona and California, including this weekend's San Diego Open, and next week moves on to Hawaii.

WINTER RULES? YOU BET!

TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. (AP) — The thermometer read zero when they teed off and never climbed past three above, but that did not deter 22 die-hard golfers from playing nine holes Saturday.

The men, members of the Cone Drive Gear Co. golf league, found all their favorite courses buried under three feet of snow. So they laid out their own 2,500-yard links at the south end of Silver Lake about 10 miles from this northwestern Lower Michigan town.

"Water Skiers Have Right of Way After July 1," read a sign along one fairway. Another read: "All Players Must Wear Shirts."

The men wore snowmobile suits.

They used snow blowers to clear away putting surfaces and ice augers to make the holes — which were marked with day-glo orange bicycle flags.

The par-36 layout included one par-3, one par-5 and seven par 4's.

Bill Sorensen swept medalist honors with a cool 4-over-par 40. His pals awarded Sorensen a free one-year membership in the "Silver Lake Golf & Country Club."

Oh, yes, they played Winter Rules.

Hudson sparks vital 49er win

By JIM McCORMACK
Staff Writer

Larry Hudson scored a season-high 25 points, six in the last two minutes Saturday night to mastermind Long Beach State's 85-83 Pacific Coast Athletic Association victory over San Diego State.

The triumph, witnessed by 6,120 apprehensive Long Beach Arena observers, improved the 49ers' season record to 14-4 and their PCAA credential to 5-0. San Diego State, 6-13 over-all, dropped to 4-2 in league.

"We wanted this one bad," said Hudson. "We wanted to wake up Sunday morning with a 5-0 record and not tied with San Diego at 4-1."

If the 49ers had gotten up this morning with a 4-1 conference record, memories of Saturday's game would have belonged in the nightmare category.

The 49ers played well in the final 10 minutes of the first half and led by 12, 46-34, at intermission.

But they let San Diego get back in the contest with an 8-0 burst to begin the final period, and then twice failed to protect eight-point cushions in the final 10 minutes.

"I don't know what's wrong with us," Hudson admitted. "We lack killer instinct. We've been lackadaisical starting the second half and it's really hurt us."

"It could have killed us," growled 49er coach Dwight Jones, who felt that virtually the only appealing aspect about the night's work was that "it was a win."

Barely.

Hudson tied the score at 74 with a driving basket and Richard Johnson, who was limited to four points, matched that moments later for a 78-76 Long Beach lead.

But Frishman scored four points to offset a Hudson hoop and when freshman Ia Saipaia hit a free throw with 1:12 remaining, San Diego led, 79-78.

Lloyd McMillian put Long Beach ahead for good, 80-79, at 0:43 with a brilliant, driving shot and San Diego called time out at 0:38.

Aztec coach Tim Vezie set up an inbounds play for his brilliant freshman, Percy Gilbert, who had driven the 49ers to distraction with a 19-point effort. The Aztecs broke Gilbert loose on the play, giving him an open-court, one-on-one situation with Hudson.

Gilbert, who was 7 of 12 in the game, went up over Hudson's defense, but his six-footer rimmed the hoop and came out, McMillian controlling the rebound.

"We had what we wanted," sighed Vezie, "and the shot could have gone in, but it didn't."

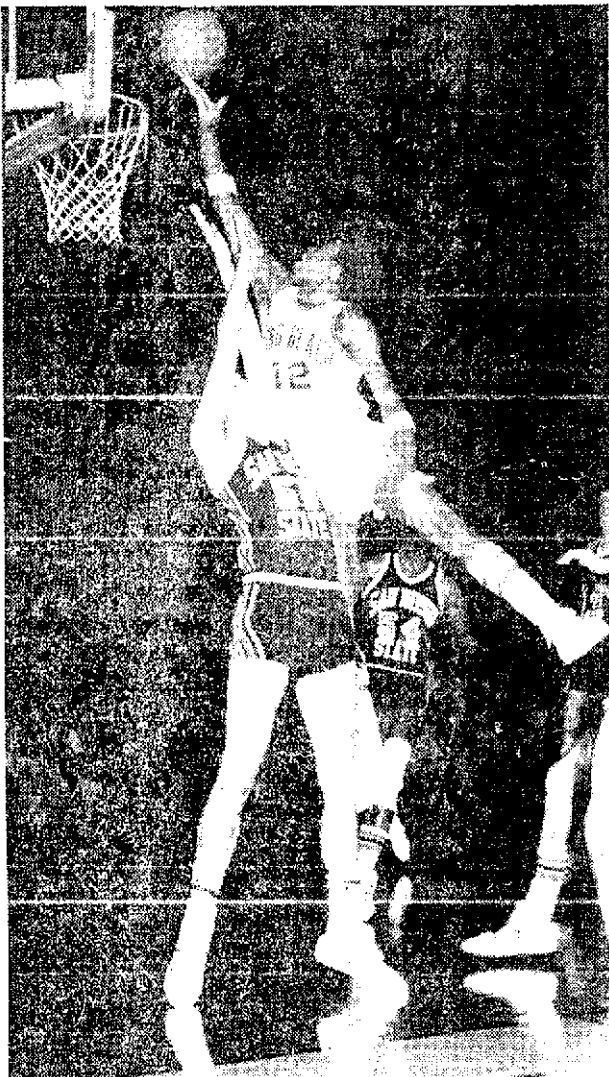

McMillian was fouled as he grabbed the rebound, but missed his first free throw.

Two Aztecs, Frishman and Gilbert, and two 49ers, Michael Wiley and Johnson, went for the rebound, whacking the ball off the glass and into the waiting arms of Hudson, who scored for an 82-79 lead at 0:30.

Sophomore guard Mike Dodd hit two free throws at 0:17, but Hudson hit a well-defensed six-footer with 10 seconds left after Wiley broke a full-court press and passed him the ball.

Wiley added a free throw on Gilbert's fifth foul with no time remaining for the game's final point. It was Wiley's 20th point of the game.

Upstart Jordan shatters No. 1-rated Poly, 61-59

Poly High saw its share of the Moore League lead and ranking as the CIF's No. 1 basketball team absorb a stunning blow Saturday night at Long Beach City College.

Upstart Jordan pulled off one of the league's biggest upsets in years, knocking off the Jackrabbits, 61-59.

Jordan doesn't beat Poly that often in basketball — the Panthers are only 6-31 against the Hares in league games dating back to 1957 — but there was no fluke about Saturday night's effort.

worse than overtime, sinking one of two free throws with 0:29 remaining that accounted for the final score.

Poly didn't lack for opportunities to win the game in a wild final 40 seconds after Campbell's basket, but came up empty handed on shots by Dino Gregory, Manuel Johnson and Ray Whiting.

Whiting's 18-footer from the left side of the key with three seconds showing came after Poly had gained possession at 0:09 following an offensive basket interference call on Jordan center Jeff Barber.

The Panthers finally knew they had the game in hand when on Whiting's shot, the 6-7 sophomore fouled Barber, reaching over his back for the rebound with one second to play.

Barber missed the free throw but by this time Jordan's happy fans could care less, already celebrating the big win.

It was the Panthers' first victory in four Moore contests and broke a drought that coach Bob Cook admitted hadn't seen his team play well the last month.

Watson on record pace at San Diego

By DOUG IVES

SAN DIEGO—That big wave Tom Watson is riding grew a little bigger Saturday and it could crest today with his second successive PGA tour victory.

A streak player, the 27-year-old Watson took apart Torrey Pines South again with a sizzling 5-under-par 67 which lifted him into a two-stroke lead at 200 with one round remaining in the $180,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open.

Only one golfer, Australian Bob Shearer, is within four shots of Watson's record-setting pace and the best he has done in nine tournaments in the U.S., dating back to last summer, was a tie for 25th. Shearer shot 69 for 202.

Under par in every round in winning the Crosby last week, Watson is 16-under in this tournament and needs to lop only one stroke off regulation figures today to shatter the tourney record held by George Archer and J.C. Sneed.

If price is right—bye bye Knox

Rams owner Carroll Rosenbloom said Saturday that he's willing to let coach Chuck Knox go "...if he'd be happier in Detroit," but obliquely accused the Lions of tampering.

Rosenbloom, saying he'd met with Lions owner William Clay Ford Friday, said, "I'm not surprised they're interested in Chuck because he's a fine coach."

"You do have to be a little surprised that they talked to him, though."

Rosenbloom said he and Ford had "an amiable" discussion about Knox after the Lions owner flew into Southern California Friday.

"I told him we'd be available if he wanted to talk more," Rosenbloom added.

"We have a fine relationship with Chuck as a coach and as a friend, but if he feels he'd like to leave and something can be worked out with us, we'd be willing."

FORD reportedly is dangling a $2.5 million contract in front of Knox, and Rosenbloom said he didn't blame the Rams' coach for being interested.

"The money stories that are going around are mind-boggling. I might even go there myself for the figures that are being thrown around," Rosenbloom said with a chuckle.

He disputed published reports that there had been a rift in the Rams' "family," trouble brought on by his dictating to Knox who should be the Rams' quarterback.

"If there's any real problem, I don't know anything about it," Rosenbloom said. "I, of course, discussed the team with Chuck, and if I had any influence on who he used, I'm flattered. But he always used whoever he wanted to."

"I've been in the league for a quarter-century, and I've never told a coach how to do his job."

"If I could coach, I wouldn't have to hire someone else to do it."

A streak player, the 27-year-old Watson took apart Torrey Pines South again with a sizzling 5-under-par 67 which lifted him into a two-stroke lead at 200 with one round remaining in the $180,000 Andy Williams-San Diego Open.

Only one golfer, Australian Bob Shearer, is within four shots of Watson's record-setting pace and the best he has done in nine tournaments in the U.S., dating back to last summer, was a tie for 25th. Shearer shot 69 for 202.

Under par in every round in winning the Crosby last week, Watson is 16-under in this tournament and needs to top only one stroke off regulation figures today to shatter the tourney record held by George Archer and J.C. Snead.

Still savoring only win over Trotters

Klotz no klutz on basketball court despite record

If Red Klotz lives to be a hundred, and some say he already has, he will find no greater thrill than that of several years ago in Martin, Tenn.

"I beat 'em," Red says, still relishing his most recent victory as a basketball coach. "We played one of those games where we didn't do anything wrong."

Except win. In the eyes of the fans, only the Harlem Globetrotters are supposed to win, not their straight men, the New Jersey Reds or Pawtucket Pigeons

"I've got a very fine team, despite being the losingest coach in the world. I don't give ground for anybody."

or Staten Island Stiffs or whatever name they happen to be using at the time.

"The crowd didn't know how to react," Red says. "The announcer said it was the first time in three or four hundred games that the Trotters had lost, and they booed us. If it had been an NBA game they would have cheered, because it was a great game."

NO MATTER. The Reds enjoyed their rare moment in the sun, although they did not come prepared for a celebration.

"The guys grabbed me and picked me up and carried me into the shower," Red recalls. "We didn't have champagne, so they poured orange soda all over me."

Fortunately, the Reds saved Klotz's job by stopping their win streak at one, and by now the losses again stretch into the hundreds, leaving his position secure as they near another date with the legends at the Long Beach Arena Tuesday night.

They remain Klotz's pride.

"I've got a very fine team, regardless of being the losingest coach in the world," he says with a smile for a very old joke. "When players join me the first question is, 'Are we supposed to lose to the Globetrotters?' I tell them to go out there and impress everybody how good you are."

"I've played a lifetime of basketball—35 years or so—and in all that time I've played to my fullest ability. I don't give ground for anybody."

IT'S HARD to believe that a team trying so hard could lose so often, despite its opposition, but Klotz swears it is so.

He makes few concessions to the obvious fact that people pay to see the Globetrotters for the show. That's why the people in Tennessee booed.

"They didn't see the show they came to see," Red says. "The Trotters have to get a lead so they can perform. Meadowlark (Lemont) will not perform unless he has a secure lead, and we aren't about to fall over dead as people think we're doing."

Klotz says that's why Abe Saperstein, the late founder of the Globetrotters, hired him 28 years ago.

"At one time they played local teams. Sometimes it was terrible. Too many times the other players would get insulted in front of their wives and girl friends and want to fight the dribbler. It wasn't bigtime exhibition basketball."

Then Klotz, a former ABL and NBA player, got up a team for a two-week tour with the Trotters. His assignment was to guard Marques Haynes, the "world's greatest dribbler."

"We looked like Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire," Red says, "and Abe was so impressed with the consistency of first-class basketball that he asked me to form my own organization."

SO CAME the Washington Generals, Philadelphia Spas, Baltimore Rockets, Atlantic City something-or-others, Boston Shamrocks and now the New Jersey Reds.

RED KLOTZ
"I won't give ground"

Actually, the Reds have a more tangible connection with Jersey than the Globetrotters do with Harlem. Klotz lives there and coaches them. They aren't named for Red nor his state of residence, but they serve to perpetuate some nostalgia.

"In 1924," he says, "the greatest team in the country was the New Jersey Reds."

Earlier, when Red Auerbach's Washington Generals folded after winning the first NBA title, Klotz thought the nation's capital should continue to be represented, so he adopted the orphaned name.

"The President didn't protest," Red says.

Nor have any of the other cities, despite being allied with the world's losingest team.

"We've never had any protests about representing anybody," Red says. "In most cases, they're pleased."

LOUIS HERMAN KLOTZ, 56, son of Russian Jew immigrants, may be the world's losingest coach but its most successful 5-foot-7 basketball player, the last surviving practitioner of the two-handed set shot.

He still plays a little, and he has not always been associated with losers.

"I was the outstanding high school player in the city of Philadelphia," he says. "Southern High—we dominated basketball in the city."

"As a member of a minority group living in a ghetto, I never could have gone to a university, but I did it through basketball. I went to Villanova and we had outstanding teams there."

He played with two pro champions—the Philadelphia Spas of the ABL in 1941 and the Baltimore Bullets of the NBA in '47-48. He cannot comprehend the contrast in lifestyles of the pros then and now.

"A lot of us got paid by the game—a hundred, hundred fifty a game. For the playoff games I believe we got $1,950 and a sweater."

He no longer has the sweater.

"No, but I have good memories. When I played in the old American League we got paid 10 or 15 bucks a game and a corned beef sandwich, and we were very happy. We loved to play ball."

"You've got to remember," he says, "in the very early days the blacks had not gotten into the thick of basketball yet. When I first started in Philadelphia, it was basically Jewish basketball. The blacks just weren't interested."

When that changed, the Globetrotters were no small influence, not only athletically but socially.

"We broke the barriers," Red says. "When we first went into the South, they had to play a black team with black referees and we had to play a white team with white referees. Gradually, they broke down and let us play each other.

"While there were sit-ins and the brave kids were out in the streets being arrested and harassed, we were doing it quietly in hotels, restaurants."

"Later, we were going behind the Iron Curtain and playing in countries where we didn't even have embassies... where we were hated. While the two governments were fighting each other, people would follow us around by the thousands telling us how they loved us."

CLEARLY, RED KLOTZ and basketball are an undying love affair, second only to his wife, six grown kids and five grandchildren.

"I have a great marriage," he says. "I just kept her barefooted and pregnant. This is gonna be our 33rd or 34th year coming up. I'll have to ask her."

"We've got a beautiful home in Margate right on the ocean next to Atlantic City."

Occasionally, Red finds his way there, content and at peace.

"It's a different life," he says, sound ing not at all like a loser.

BUD TUCKER

Guys in 'joint' will understand

At last dispatch, the owner of the Minnesota Vikings was en route to Tahiti giving no thought to returning to Minneapolis-St. Paul until after the heat is off.

By a similar token, you might expect Mike Walsh to hear a mugging when he returned to Carson City, Nev., after failing to get to the races at Riverside last weekend. Walsh would have to explain to the guys back home that piston trouble prevented his stock car from getting to the post.

You see, the boys back home built the car. They are the inmates of the Nevada State Prison.

"The guys will be upset," Mike Walsh said, "but we'll be back."

HE MEANS, the boys won't be banging the tin cups on the bars or starting a riot in the mess hall or throwing guards from the upper catwalk.

"That's the whole idea behind the race car program," Walsh explained. "It helps make them forget that kind of behavior and realize there are other things in life besides the stuff that got them in trouble."

Mike Walsh became involved in 1973. He was the Nevada state driving champion at the time and the inmates came to him and asked him to drive the car they were constructing in "the joint."

Mike signed on as the driver and later stayed on to run the race car program. He is now also a welding instructor at the prison.

Prison rules prevent inmates from leaving Nevada but enough guys to form a pit crew are permitted to accompany the car when it runs in state. Arrangements had been made for an inmate pit crew to come to Riverside but all that perished when a rumble developed behind the walls. Walsh calls it a "disturbance" but we know it best as a riot.

NEITHER will Mike have a prison crew next month when he runs at Daytona. He will borrow a pit crew, as has been the practice on the road.

Of course, all this is assuming Mike and the car get to Daytona.

"We have a big money problem," Walsh explained. "We depend entirely on donations and getting them is really tough. The reason is most people have the idea the state of Nevada pays all our bills when, in fact, we don't get a dime. The only thing we get from the governor is his blessing."

"We get stuff from manufacturers and some cash gifts, but not nearly enough. At Riverside, we only had one set of rubber and probably wouldn't have made it beyond the first pit stop without help."

Walsh put several thousands of his own money into the car in order to get it ready for Riverside and Daytona. His attractive wife, Sue, seems to understand.

"I think she does," Walsh said. "We worked nights for a week getting ready to come here and Sue would bring McDonald's hamburgers and Kentucky chicken to the stop."

"That kind of stuff is a real treat for the guys in the joint."

AT THIS writing, the joint's car was $4,000, or thereabouts, short of getting to Daytona and a miracle was solicited. Mike Walsh paid his own expenses to Riverside and, at the moment, was broke and so was the race car program.

"But we'll keep it going," Mike said. "It is a worthwhile thing and there is satisfaction in it. Guys come to the joint with no interest in anything and become interested in the car and their lives change completely."

"We send guys out and they work in racing and the people who hire them are pleased and the guys don't come back and this is satisfaction. It costs $20,000 to keep a guy in the joint for a year so if we keep one guy out for one year, we've done something."

"We have two guys working on the car who are in for murder and won't be going out, but I think we give their lives some meaning."

Mike Walsh went back home and to the joint to get on the phone and look for his miracle. You have to hope he found it, not necessarily for the car or the driver but for the entire program.

As Mike said, "We don't have to do very much to be successful."

Dreaming of new stadium, title for Bears

George Halas, 82, still looking ahead

CHICAGO (AP) — George Halas, believing that "nothing is work unless you'd rather be doing something else," turns 82 Wednesday, dreaming of a new stadium and future championships for his beloved Chicago Bears.

Hale and hearty. Halas appears 20 years younger than his age, with clear eyes, sure hands and crisp answers.

"You know I went to Seattle for the Pro Bowl game and what a stadium they have there," he said. "Can't believe they built it for $38 million. At least I think that was the figure."

"I feel great. I eat bran flakes with bananas every morning and make sure I have a lettuce salad at every meal. I ride my stationary bike two miles every morning and two miles every night. That takes care of the circulation and muscle tone. Then I have these three-pound dumbbells," said Halas, gesturing with his arms over his head and away from his chest. "That takes care of the rest of the body."

Halas, co-founder of the National Football League, dominated the game as owner-coach of the Chicago Bears until he won his final championship in 1963. He didn't hesitate when asked when the Bears will win another title.

"Two years will be most acceptable," said Halas. "I have nothing to do with the club now. Jim Pinks gets and signs the players, Jack Pardee coaches them, and now we have Sid Gillman who will be a tremendous asset with his coaching experience on offense. The outlook is beautiful."

And what would he do if he had to do it over again, especially in the lean years after he stepped down as coach?

"I was accused of interfering, but my big mistake was not stepping in when mistakes were made. I should have stepped in when the team was floundering."

Halas said he is optimistic that a collective bargaining agreement will be hammered out between the owners and the players.

"There will be a modified draft," he said. "It will affect the players as much as the owners. They are beginning to see the light and, I must admit, we have changed, too."

When Halas is talking, it is nearly impossible not to go back into the history of professional football and the Chicago Bears.

Halas chuckled about Super Bowl commercials going for something like $250,000 a minute and recalled, "Back in 1951 I was paying television $1,500 a game to televise the Bears in cities like Louisville and Minneapolis. I didn't realize how smart I was, but we just couldn't get pro football publicized in certain areas."

Pro football has been one constant highlight for Halas, who was among the original members who organized the forerunner of the NFL while sitting on automobile runningboards in a Canton, Ohio, auto agency in 1920. But there are some things that stand out.

"That 73-0 win over Washington in the championship game after we had lost to them 7-3 a couple of weeks earlier. It had to be one of the highlights."

"Then there was that winning streak in 1932-33-34. Eighteen

GEORGE HALAS
Still hale and hearty straight league games and 30 straight, including exhibitions until the playoff in that 'rubber shoe' game against the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds.

"WE HAD practiced in the mud the previous day and then a Nor'easter came up and froze the field and we lost 31-13. I don't mind being outcoached, but I hated being outsmarted by an equipment manager who sent out for rubber shoes at halftime. That was the low point of my career."

Halas also recalled the coming of Red Grange as the turning point in professional football.

"I don't care what the players of today do, there has never been a more publicized player than Red Grange. Illinois played at Ohio State in 1925, and the next day we signed Grange. When we announced he would play Thanksgiving Day, people lined the streets four abreast to buy tickets. We were sold out in no time."

"Then we went on tour. We drew 75,000 in New York, 5,000 more than the Army-Navy game drawn the previous day. Then to Florida and New Orleans and the swing to the West Coast. It was unbelievable. At every train stop there were crowds jamming the place just to see Red."

HALAS hesitates when asked who was the greatest Bear of all time.

"Every Bear was an all-America. That's why we have those alumni parties every year. And every year the stories get better and the players become greater. But I'll name you a pretty good backfield."

"How would you like to have Sid Luckman at quarterback with Red Grange, George MacAfee and Gale Sayers as fullbacks? And then have Bronco Nagurski and Bill Osmanski as your fullbacks?"

Halas shakes his head negatively when asked if he thinks professional football has reached the saturation point.

"There is something that will add to the game and I will reveal it when the right time comes. But that's absolutely all I can tell you about it now."

What would George Halas like for a birthday present?

"A Super Bowl ring, but I guess it's too late for that this year."

Sellers: The other apprentice

Young Mark Sellers is off to a fine start in his riding career, but he admits he's envious of another apprentice jockey.

The 17-year-old Sellers, son of former national riding champion John Sellers, is currently the top apprentice in the jockey standings at Santa Anita Park, and recently posted his first stakes victory.

Still, his success is dimmed by that of Steve Cauthen, the 16-year-old whose phenomenal success in the East has made him the toast of the racing world.

"Steve's kind of in a better position than I am," Sellers said. "Not trying to take anything away from him, but he has a very good agent, which is a big factor in race riding. He's riding eight or nine horses a day that are at least 5-1 or better. Most of my horses are 20-1 or 30-1 shots."

"But," added the soft-spoken, articulate young man, "Steve's definitely a good rider."

Sellers will get a chance to ride against Cauthen today, when Cauthen flies in from the East to compete at Santa Anita, where he had one winner in four tries last Sunday.

But Cauthen, with trainer Bobby Frankel lining up his mounts, will generally be on better horses, including defending champion Announcer in the $50,000-added San Marcos Handicap.

John Sellers, admitting he might be a bit prejudiced, says he thinks his son's accomplishments thus far compare favorably with those of Cauthen.

"There are not that many good riders back in the East in the winter," John explained. "Out here, Mark's riding against the best and he's holding his own. But I've hooked up with Steve a couple of times and he's a fine rider."

Mark, who's been competing professionally for eight months, said his father didn't push him into being a jockey, and the elder Sellers was in fact surprised at his son's wishes.

"He was 14 when he told me he wanted to ride, and he hadn't shown much interest before. I was on a horse by the time I could walk, so I figured he wasn't ever going to get interested."

Mark said he already feels right at home on the track, and the veteran riders are teaching him a lot — sometimes at his expense.

"I remember one race when I was back in the pack and I saw a hole open up," Mark recalled. "One of the other riders looked back and saw me coming, then edged over to shut me off."

"But I've done that myself since then," Mark said.

The elder Sellers said he and his son have been in the same race some half-dozen times, with Mark posting the only victory. Friday at Santa Anita, Mark ran third and his father fourth in the sixth race.

"One of these days Mark and I are going to be neck-and-neck coming down the stretch," John said. "That'll be something."

A family affair

Apprentice jockey Mark Sellers, 17, has his weight checked by father Johnny Sellers, former national riding champion. Both are riding at Santa Anita, where Mark is top apprentice in the jockey standings.

"Two years will be most acceptable," said Halas. "I have nothing to do with the club now. Jim Finks gets and signs the players, Jack Pardee coaches them, and now we have Sid Gillman who will be a tremendous asset with his coaching experience on offense. The outlook is beautiful."

And what would he do if he had to do it over again, especially in the lean years after he stepped down as coach?

"I was accused of interfering, but my big mistake was not stepping in when mistakes were made. I should have stepped in when the team was floundering."

Halas said he is optimistic that a collective bargaining agreement will be hammered out between the owners and the players.

"There will be a modified draft," he said. "It will affect the players as much as the owners. They are beginning to see the light and, I must admit, we have changed, too."

When Halas is talking, it is nearly impossible not to go back into the history of professional football and the Chicago Bears.

Halas chuckled about Super Bowl commercials going for something like $250,000 a minute and recalled, "Back in 1951 I was paying television $1,500 a game to televise the Bears in cities like Louisville and Minneapolis. I didn't realize how smart I was, but we just couldn't get pro football publicized in certain areas."

Pro football has been one constant highlight for Halas, who was among the original members who organized the forerunner of the NFL while sitting on automobile runningboards in a Canton, Ohio, auto agency in 1920. But there are some things that stand out.

"That 73-0 win over Washington in the championship game after we had lost to them 7-3 a couple of weeks earlier. It had to be one of the highlights."

"Then there was that winning streak in 1932-33-34. Eighteen straight league games and 30 straight, including exhibitions until the playoff in that 'rubber shoe' game against the New York Giants in the Polo Grounds.

"WE HAD practiced in the mud the previous day and then a Northeast came up and froze the field and we lost 31-13. I don't mind being outcoached, but I hated being outsmarted by an equipment manager who sent out for rubber shoes at halftime. That was the low point of my career."

Halas also recalled the coming of Red Grange as the turning point in professional football.

"I don't care what the players of today do, there has never been a

A family affair

Apprentice jockey Mark Sellers, 17, has his weight checked by father Johnny Sellers, former national riding champion. Both are riding at Santa Anita, where Mark is top apprentice in the jockey standings.

Sellers: The other apprentice

Young Mark Sellers is off to a fine start in his riding career, but he admits he's envious of another apprentice jockey.

The 17-year-old Sellers, son of former national riding champion John Sellers, is currently the top apprentice in the jockey standings at Santa Anita Park, and recently posted his first stakes victory.

Still, his success is dimmed by that of Steve Cauthen, the 16-year-old whose phenomenal success in the East has made him the toast of the racing world.

"Steve's kind of in a better position than I am," Sellers said. "Not trying to take anything away from him, but he has a very good agent, which is a big factor in race riding. He's riding eight or nine horses a day that are at least 5-1 or better. Most of my horses are 20-1 or 30-1 shots."

"But," added the soft-spoken, articulate young man, "Steve's definitely a good rider."

Sellers will get a chance to ride against Cauthen today, when Cauthen flies in from the East to compete at Santa Anita, where he had one winner in four tries last Sunday.

But Cauthen, with trainer Bobby Frankel lining up his mounts, will generally be on better horses, including defending champion Announcer in the $50,000-added San Marcos Handicap.

John Sellers, admitting he might be a bit prejudiced, says he thinks his son's accomplishments thus far compare favorably with those of Cauthen.

"There are not that many good riders back in the East in the winter," John explained. "Out here, Mark's riding against the best and he's holding his own. But I've hooked up with Steve a couple of times and he's a fine rider."

Mark, who's been competing professionally for eight months, said his father didn't push him into being a jockey, and the elder Sellers was in fact surprised at his son's wishes.

"He was 14 when he told me he wanted to ride, and he hadn't shown much interest before. I was on a horse by the time I could walk, so I figured he wasn't ever going to get interested."

Mark said he already feels right at home on the track, and the veteran riders are teaching him a lot — sometimes at his expense.

"I remember one race when I was back in the pack and I saw a hole open up," Mark recalled. "One of the other riders looked back and saw me coming, then edged over to shut me off."

"But I've done that myself since then," Mark said. The elder Sellers said he and his son have been in the same race some half-dozen times, with Mark posting the only victory. Friday at Santa Anita, Mark ran third and his father fourth in the sixth race.

"One of these days Mark and I are going to be neck-and-neck coming down the stretch," John said. "That'll be something."

Kings' Vachon blanks Islanders

BRONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Rogie Vachon recorded his third shutout of the season and Marcel Dionne scored his 30th goal and took over the National Hockey League scoring lead as the Kings rolled to a 4-0 victory over the New York Islanders Saturday night.

The victory enabled the Kings to close to within four points of Pittsburgh in the battle for second place in the Norris Division. Pittsburgh fell to Philadelphia, 5-2.

games, scored a power play goal early in the second period. It came just six seconds after New York's Gerry Hart was penalized and only 49 seconds after Butch Goring gave the Kings a 1-0 lead.

Dionne also picked up an assist, giving him 76 points, one more than Montreal's Guy Lafleur.

Mike Murphy made it 3-0 with another power play tally at 18:05 while New York's Bob Nystrom was serving a five-minute major penalty. All three second-period goals came on rebounds after New York goalie Glenn Resch made spectacular saves.

Tom Williams' 25th goal of the season, also on a power play, closed out the scoring with 23 seconds left.

Cold spell hits girl eagers, too—122-20

MCDONOUGH, Ga. (AP) — The latest cold spell to hit Georgia struck the McDonough Christian High School girls basketball team in another way Friday night.

The girls' squad hosted unbeaten Stratford and were blown out, 122-20.

"I wasn't too happy with the whole thing," said McDonough coach Buzzie Fryer. "He had enough shots to where he could have kept the game reasonable."

Coach Grady Smith of the Stratford Eaglette's, whose club has won 48 consecutive Southeastern Association of Independent School (SEAIS) games, including 18 this season, said he played his first team only 12 minutes.

Tracy Matthews led the winners with 42 points. Smith says he may have a problem next week when Stratford is scheduled to host McDonough Christian.

"I just hope they come down here next week"

Russ outpoint U.S. fighters

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Russian strongman Igor Vysotski pounded out a decision over American heavyweight Jimmy Clark Saturday afternoon to lead the Soviet Union to a decisive 7-4 victory over the U.S. boxing team in the ninth annual competition between the two countries.

The Americans have never beaten the Russians since the competition began in 1969, and Saturday's nationally televised matches marked the second big step for the Soviets toward the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

After a disappointing performance in the Montreal Olympics last summer, the Russians changed coaches and their heavyweight team came back with a victory over the Americans here in November.

VYSOTSKI, a Siberian auto mechanic by trade, ran his record to 117-9. The 23-year-old Vysotski, who once beat world amateur and two-time Olympic champion Teofilo Stevenson of Cuba, sent Clark to the canvas with a hard left hook late in the first round.

Another clean left hook sent Clark, 22, of Coatesville, Pa., to the deck in the second round, but American referee Robert Surkin ruled that Clark slipped.

It was the rubber match between the two fighters. Clark stopped Vysotski on cuts in 1975, but the Russian boxer came back with a victory last year.

There were two controversial decisions during the afternoon and the Russians spotted the American team one point when Valerie Rashkov was unable to leave the Soviet Union and forfeited his match to Erasmos Gonzales of the U.S. Air Force.

THE AMERICAN team got the benefit of a doubt in the early going when Elichi Jumawan of Hawaii was given the nod over Olympic bronze medalist Viktor Rybakov in the 125-pound division. Rybakov scored at will with a versatile left and combinations, but the two American judges apparently felt that Jumawan's counter-punching was more effective.

The crowd, estimated at 2,500, bowed the decision in the 106-pound division when two Russian judges prevailed to give Vasily Plakushchy the decision over American Indian Adrian Dennis.

Tennessee calls UCLA game its biggest ever

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP)—At the University of Tennessee, the fans are hungry. They're buzzing like bees over today's match in Atlanta with traditional college basketball power UCLA.

Several thousand Volunteers fans have journeyed to Atlanta for the match between seventh-ranked Tennessee and eighth-ranked UCLA.

At least one Tennessee professor has suspended his Monday morning class for those students with tickets to the game. The school's pep band made the trip south to the Omni. A dozen Tennessee cheerleaders departed bearing boxes of orange and white pompons.

The game is to be televised nationally (Channel 4, 10:30 a.m.) and the 15,281-seat Omni has been sold out for months.

Tennessee officials expect most of the spectators to be cheering for the Volunteers, who are leading the Southeastern Conference.

Some are calling the contest the biggest in Tennessee history. Coach Ray Mears doesn't necessarily agree, but he conceded Saturday, "It's going to be one heckuva game."

Mears said he expects the tempo of the game to be a major factor in its outcome. He also said he expects UCLA to play a great deal of zone defense to combat the effectiveness of Bernard King and Ernie Grunfeld, the leading scorers in the SEC.

Following Thursday night's win over USC, Bruin coach Gene Bartow said his club would coach in a man-to-man defense with all-America Marques Johnson guarding King and sophomore David Greenwood on Grunfeld.

Among others, Tennessee will be concerned with Johnson, whom Vol aide Stu Aberdeen calls "probably the best basketball player in the country."

The Huskies ran up an 8-0 lead before Washington State was able to score.

Washington's Kim Stewart led all scorers with 21 points, and Mike Neil had 17, scoring 14 in the first half.

Washington State postman Steve Puidokas had 18 points.

The Cougars committed 13 turnovers in the first half, as Washington's guards surprised their opponents with repeated steals.

Lakers...and all that Jazz

Pete Maravich and the New Orleans Jazz come to the Forum tonight at 8, probably hoping that the red-hot Lakers are still celebrating their thrilling come-from-behind win over Philadelphia Friday night.

The Lakers have won 19 of their last 24 games and have a string of 18 consecutive victories at home. The Jazz have been going the other way, having lost 17 of their last 28 games.

Maravich has done his part to keep the Jazz from falling into the Central Division basement. He is averaging a shade under 30 points per game and is well on his way to winning the National Basketball Association scoring title.

NEW ORLEANS is under new leadership in Elgin Baylor, the former Lakers' great. Injuries notably to another former Laker, Gail Goodrich, have kept Baylor from using a full complement of his normal regulars for some time.

Goodrich underwent surgery for a damaged Achilles tendon and is lost for the year. Freddie Boyd has taken his place in the starting lineup.

The Lakers, who trail first-place Portland in the Pacific Division by only one-half game, have been getting superlative play from the reserves of late. The subs have scored 65, 46, 44, 56 and 53 points in the last five games.

Swingman Earl Tatum scored a career-high 23 against the 76ers Friday, including 19 in the final period, to team with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (39 points) in rallying the Lakers from a 12-point third-period deficit.

SHORT SHOTS: In the Philadelphia game, Julius Erving committed nine turnovers and George McGinnis seven. Traveling writers say Dr. J. is a horrible passer and he showed it against the Lakers. Still, he packs 'em in every place he goes. Philadelphia has sold out 20 of its 24 road games. While Tatum was hailed for his great offensive show Friday, his defense was equally impressive. He held Lloyd Free scoreless in the final period and blocked two of his shots. Abdul-Jabbar has shot 50 per cent or better from the field in his last 24 games. Forward Don Ford has hit 17 of his last 30 shots, a notable improvement, but he still doesn't rebound enough. He hit rock bottom Friday, failing to get a rebound in 27 minutes. Forward Cazzie Russell is in a slump, having averaged only nine points in his last five games. Rookie Tom Abernathy has 30 rebounds in the last five games, playing only an average of 21 minutes. Tonight's game begins at 8, an hour later than normal.

Duran chase ends with KO in 13th

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Whirlwind Roberto Duran looked frustrated at times chasing Vilomar Fernandez around the ring Saturday, but said he never had doubts that the knockout which ended his lightweight title fight was coming.

"It didn't bother me that he ran a lot," said the World Boxing Association champion of the dancing tactics of Fernandez. "I knew I'd catch him."

Fernandez took heavy punishment throughout the bout, but never showed signs of buckling until he was hit full force by a left-right combination to the midsection. He was counted out at 2:10 of the 13th round.

"It was a good shot to the body that finished me," said Fernandez. He said it left him groggy and "I couldn't see."

Duran's trainer, 77-year-old Ray Arcel, said, "We had more trouble than we expected. Fernandez is very shifty."

DURAN was never in trouble in scoring his 46th knockout in a career which now shows 55 victories in 56 outings. But despite near-total domination of Fernandez he called him "a valiant fighter, well prepared."

"He has a great future in boxing," added Duran. But unfortunately, the 23-year-old Fernandez is in a division dominated by a man only two years his senior.

The victory was Duran's 10th successive successful title defense. He also knocked out his nine previous challengers.

It was more like practice shooting at a moving target than a fight for most of the bout, with Duran the relentless pursuer and Fernandez apparently satisfied to just survive.

Duran won the title on June 22, 1972 with a 13th-round knockout of Scotland's Ken Buchanan in Madison Square Garden.

His only loss, in a non-title bout, was to Estaban de Jesus, who is recognized as the World Boxing Council champion. Duran avenged that loss with a knockout victory in a rematch.

De Jesus, negotiating with promoter Don King for a rubber match with Duran with their titles at stake, was at ringside Saturday.

'Thanks, I needed that'

Vilomar Fernandez (right), who ran for most of Saturday's world lightweight title fight, lands sharp right to head of champion Roberto Duran. Fernandez' evasive tactics lasted into 13th round before Duran knocked him out.

Muldowney steals show in dragster qualifying

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

Whatever Shirley Muldowney lacks in physical stature, she more than compensates for in spunk and competitive grit.

The 5-2, 105-pound spry of a woman demonstrated that when she emerged from three frantic days of qualifying to nail down the No. 1 spot for today's elimination rounds of the 17th National Hot Rod Association Nationals at Pomona.

Muldowney and her passionate pink dragster prepared by Connie Kalitta stopped the electric speed traps with an elapsed time of 5.854 seconds at 248.61 mph shortly after 11 a.m. Saturday. She then parked the car or the day, switched to street clothes and became a spectator.

ALTHOUGH IT was Shirley's only qualifying attempt of the day and only her fourth pass down the L.A. County Fairgrounds strip since Thursday, it was a barn-burner — shattering the track top speed record of 244.46 mph set by Canadian Gary Beck in 1975.

More than 40 dragsters attempted to surpass Muldowney's time for the remainder of the day, but none of them could.

"Big Daddy" Don Garlits came the closest.

The 44-year-old Floridian, utilizing a new Donovan engine instead of his more familiar Dodge, posted a run of 5.888 seconds at 242.58 mph at 4 p.m. — but it was three hundredths-of-a-second shy of Shirley's front-running pace.

"YEAH, WE were trying to get that No. 1 spot," said Garlits. "But we just couldn't do it. It would have been nice, but it wasn't all that critical. We're in the program and that's what counts."

"I'll tell you, that little lady (Muldowney) has got her act together. She's gonna be tough to beat tomorrow."

Garlits isn't one to toss kudos around lightly — but in Shirley's case they are warranted.

Two weeks ago, she set an all-time speed record of 32.10 mph at Beeline Dragway in Phoenix. It was the climax of a phenomenal eight months of racing in which the 35-year-old former housewife from Mt. Clemens, Mich., clearly established herself as a formidable threat in drag racing's fastest class.

Last June she became the first woman to win a major NHRA top fuel title, collecting the Springnationals at Columbus, Ohio, and in the process set top speed and low ET of the meet — 5.96 and 243.90.

SHE FOLLOWED that by running "in the fives" all day while blitzing her male contemporaries in the Winston World Finals at Ontario.

Off her performance Saturday, she appears capable of repeating her World Finals dominance in today's $104,750 race, the first of nine major NHRA championships for the 1977 season.

With only 16 places open for today's 11 a.m. top fuel eliminations, it was natural that several "heavyweights" would not make the show. Among those who failed to qualify for the finals were defending champion

Richard Tharp and 1974 Winternationals champion Gary Beck.

Tharp, who drives the vaunted Candies and Hughes top fueller, broke the rear axle housing on his new car Friday, replaced it with a spare that night and promptly broke the same unit early Saturday. "We only came out here with two axle housings," said Tharp. "It's one of those freak, million-to-one accidents that never happens — but it did this time."

Beck, originally from Edmonton but now living in Huntington Beach, could do no better than 6.140 in his Keith Black-powered dragster, which makes him third alternate for today's finals. The 1974 world champion and winner of six top fuel championships has now failed to qualify in the last two major NHRA events dating back to the World Finals in October.

AS EXPECTED, Don Prudhomme leads the field of 16 in the funny car class. Prudhomme, who has won 13 of the last 16 major NHRA championships including seven of eight last year, drove his new Plymouth Arrow to an elapsed time of 6.143 seconds and 240.64 mph.

The native of Granada Hills is within reach of his national top speed record of 241.53 mph set two years ago at Ontario when he was campaigning a Chevrolet Monza. "We still really haven't sorted the car out yet," said Prudhomme. "We still have room for improvement."

The Snake has only posted four full-bore runs on the new Arrow — one at Irwindale Raceway and three at Pomona during qualifying. If he does get "everything hooked up" today it appears as if the remaining 15 funny car drivers are going to have to settle among themselves for second place.

A crowd approaching 45,000 is expected to see today's finals, which begin at 11 a.m. with the first round of top fuel eliminations.

10 hard nosed questions to ask before you buy any motor home.

(And some straight answers from Winnebago.)

1. Is this motor home built by an experienced reputable manufacturer?

There's more to building a good motor home than putting a box on top of a truck chassis. Winnebago's experience and know-how have made it the best-selling brand in the U.S. We're also number one in repeat sales.

2. Do you have a good selection of sizes and models to choose from?

Some dealers have to push you into what they've got. But this year, Winnebago offers 6 different models and 18 floor plans. You can buy the motor home that fits your family.

3. Does this company have a program to upgrade vehicle safety?

Winnebago has one. It includes tough crash tests to prove the strength of our rugged L-Series construction. We don't know anyone else who makes such tests.

4. Are parts and service readily available in all sections of the country?

You buy a motor home to go places. But can you get service in Florida as well as California? In Texas, Maine, Minnesota or Washington? Winnebago has some 450 service centers from coast to coast, even in Canada and Alaska. When you're on the road 300 miles from home, it's a mighty comforting thought.

5. Are you buying from a well-established, well-equipped dealer?

Winnebago dealers aren't here today, gone tomorrow outfits after a fast buck. They're experienced RV or automotive dealers, backed by full motor home service facilities and factory training programs.

6. Is there anyone beyond the dealer I can go to for satisfaction or help?

With Winnebago, you have a friend at the factory. Our Customer Relations Department is organized specifically to help you with questions, complaints or any special problems that may arise with your motor home.

7. What about protection after the sale?

No warranty or any other promise is any stronger than the company that stands behind it. The Winnebago Homeowners Plan spells out our limited warranty and many more owner benefits.

that help protect both you and your investment. And we have both the corporate and dealer strength to back it up.

8. What will your motor home be worth five years from now?

In the past few years, dozens of motor home companies have gone out of business and dozens more have sprung up. When the time comes to sell or trade, "orphan" brands take a big beating on price. On the other hand, Winnebago consistently brings top resale dollars.

9. Will I pay more for freight charges here than in other parts of the country?

Not if you buy a Winnebago anywhere in the continental U.S. or Canada. Winnebago's freight charge is only $100 and it's included in the selling price.

10. Does this motor home have a printed sticker price?

If it's a Winnebago it does. You get facts, not fancy talk from a Winnebago dealer. When you make a deal, you'll know the price is right. Make that deal right now and you'll do even better!

Muldowney steals show in dragster qualifying

By ALLEN WOLFE
Staff Writer

Whatever Shirley Muldowney lacks in physical stature, she more than compensates for in spunk and competitive grit.

The 5-2, 105-pound spry of a woman demonstrated that when she emerged from three frantic days of qualifying to nail down the No. 1 spot for today's elimination rounds of the 17th National Hot Rod Association Winternationals at Pomona.

Muldowney and her passionate pink dragster prepared by Connie Kalitta stopped the electric speed traps with an elapsed time of 5.854 seconds at 248.61 mph shortly after 11 a.m. Saturday. She then parked the car for the day, switched to street clothes and became a spectator.

ALTHOUGH IT was Shirley's only qualifying attempt of the day and only her fourth pass down the L.A. County Fairgrounds strip since Thursday, it was a barn-burner — shattering the track top speed record of 244.46 mph set by Canadian Gary Beck in 1975.

More than 40 dragsters attempted to surpass Muldowney's time for the remainder of the day, but none of them could.

"Big Daddy" Don Garlits came the closest. The 44-year-old Floridian, utilizing a new Donovan engine instead of his more familiar Dodge, posted a run of 5.888 seconds at 242.58 mph at 4 p.m. — but it was three hundredths-of-a-second shy of Shirley's front-running pace.

"YEAH, WE were trying to get that No. 1 spot," said Garlits. "But we just couldn't do it. It would have been nice, but it wasn't all that critical. We're in the program and that's what counts."

"I'll tell you, that little lady (Muldowney) has got her act together. She's gonna be tough to beat tomorrow."

Garlits isn't one to toss kudos around lightly — but in Shirley's case they are warranted.

Two weeks ago, she set an all-time speed record of 52.10 mph at Beeline Dragway in Phoenix. It was the climax of a phenomenal eight months of racing in which the 35-year-old former housewife from Mt. Clemens, Mich., clearly established herself as a formidable threat in drag racing's fastest class.

Last June she became the first woman to win a major NHRA top fuel title, collecting the Springnationals at Columbus, Ohio, and in the process set top speed and low ET of the meet — 5.96 and 243.90.

SHE FOLLOWED that by running "in the fives" all day while blitzing her male contemporaries in the Winston World Finals at Ontario.

Off her performance Saturday, she appears capable of repeating her World Finals dominance in today's $304,750 race, the first of nine major NHRA championships for the 1977 season.

With only 16 places open for today's 11 a.m. top fuel eliminations, it was natural that several "heavyweights" would not make the show. Among those who failed to qualify for the finals were defending champion

Richard Sharp and 1974 Winternationals champion Gary Beck.

Sharp, who drives the vaunted Candies and Hughes top fueler, broke the rear axle housing on his new car Friday, replaced it with a spare that night and promptly broke the same unit early Saturday. "We only came out here with two axle housings," said Sharp. "It's one of those freak, million-to-one accidents that never happens — but it did this time."

Beck, originally from Edmonton but now living in Huntington Beach, could do no better than 6.140 in his Keith Black-powered dragster, which makes him third alternate for today's finals. The 1974 world champion and winner of six top fuel championships has now failed to qualify in the last two major NHRA events dating back to the World Finals in October.

AS EXPECTED, Don Prudhomme leads the field of 16 in the funny car class. Prudhomme, who has won 13 of the last 16 major NHRA championships including seven of eight last year, drove his new Plymouth Arrow to an elapsed time of 6.143 seconds and 240.64 mph.

The native of Granada Hills is within reach of his national top speed record of 241.53 mph set two years ago at Ontario when he was campaigning a Chevrolet Monza. "We still really haven't sorted the car out yet," said Prudhomme. "We still have room for improvement."

The Snake has only posted four full-bore runs on the new Arrow — one at Irwindale Raceway and three at Pomona during qualifying. If he does get "everything hooked up" today it appears as if the remaining 15 funny car drivers are going to have to settle among themselves for second place.

A crowd approaching 45,000 is expected to see today's finals, which begin at 11 a.m. with the first round of top fuel eliminations.

Who'll be golf rookie of year? 'Me,' says Jacobsen

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — One month into the 1977 PGA golf tour, 22 of the 27 rookies from last fall's qualifying school have failed to win one cent.

At this rate, there won't be a Rookie of the Year.

But a brash, handsome young man from Oregon, Peter Jacobsen, says he knows who will be the next Jerry Pate, the next rising star in the PGA galaxy.

"It will be me," says the 22-year-old six-footer, who made it through the school on his first try after an impeccable amateur career, during which he won 10 college tournaments while at the University of Oregon.

Jacobsen, a second-team all-America for three years and twice runnerup in the Pacific-8 championships, has a smooth, fluid swing like Pate and, obviously, just as much confidence.

Two weeks into the tour his exuberance was slightly subdued after he twice shot sub-par rounds in Monday qualifying and failed to earn his way into the fields at Phoenix and Tucson. But Jacobsen did qualify at the Crosby, made the cut and finished 42nd, worth $823. That gave him an exemption into the Andy Williams-San Diego Open here and his golf is on the upswing.

He has shot rounds of 70-72-70—212, 4-under par, and could pick up a sizeable check with an under-par round today.

"I honestly feel I can win a tournament my first year," says Jacobsen. Veterans who have seen him drive the ball feel the potential is there. So does super agent Mark McCormick, who has signed him to a three-year contract.

"I never met McCormick until I got a letter from him in Arizona," said Jacobsen. "I liked his offer, knew his reputation and signed."

That McCormick takes 20 per cent off

the top doesn't bother the newlywed Jacobsen. McCormick already has a contract with Ram Golf Co. for the youngster.

"I'm excited about the association," says Peter, who won the Oregon and Northern California Opens prior to bagging his tour card. Jacobsen also played in the Long Beach Queen Mary Open last fall, winning a paycheck, and averaged $1,500 a week later on in an Arizona mini-tour.

Jacobsen says life on the tour is great, although he entertained thoughts of going home after those sub-par Monday qualifying rounds failed to get him into the first two tournaments.

"I thought my career was over before it began," he said, "but the people I talked to said it's harder qualifying on the West Coast than any other part of the tour. Also, I was playing well, so what more could I do?"

Jacobsen has no financial worries. He has eight sponsors who put up $30,000 and a full-time caddy who is a 2-handicapper. His wife, Jan, traveled for three weeks but has returned to Oregon to finish her schooling.

"I only know a few guys on the tour," he says, "but it's no big deal. Some of the younger players make so many excuses it's no fun to be around them. Show me a guy who makes excuses, and I'll show you a loser."

Jacobsen is looking forward to a good pairing. So far, the only quality pros he has played with are veterans Don January and Billy Casper.

"Wow! Is that January smooth," crowed Peter.

"I may not know how good I am until I play with the best," he goes on. "If I keep making cuts I'm sure to draw some of the better players pretty soon."

Jacobsen says he needs more work around the greens.

"I strike it well of the tee, but I'm not sharp chipping and putting," he claims. "I'm not bad, either. I just need more work. Fortunately, my time is my own out here and I can practice any time I want."

Good round or bad, Jacobsen practices every day.

Interviewed on Thursday, Peter was asked if he would go to the Hawaiian Open if he made the cut. His response showed the kind of confidence he has.

"What do you mean if I make the cut?" he snapped. "I'm going to shoot 62 and take the lead. To be rookie of the year, I'll have to make my move soon."

Jacobsen didn't shoot 62. Nobody did. He posted his sub-par round Saturday.

One of his playing partners was veteran Jim Colbert, who has seen a lot of young hotshots come and go. Who is his pick for Rookie of the Year?

You guessed it, Peter Jacobsen.

Blizzard? Sleet? Phooey! Golf tour basking in sun

By BOB GREEN

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gentle breezes rustling the palm trees.

Bikini'd girls sunning themselves beside the pool. A deeply tanned young man, brown forearms emerging from a short-sleeved shirt, producing a satisfying "tick" as his iron shot sends the ball arching gracefully against a deep blue sky before nestling softly on the plush, green grass.

A radio blaring the weather forecast: "Morning mist giving way to clear skies; afternoon temperatures in the lower 70s."

While most of the nation is struggling painfully — shivering, cold and miserable — facing unemployment, closed schools, transportation difficulties, fuel shortages, all the attendant problems and woes of the worst winter of the century, it's "Follow-The-Sun" business as usual for the pro golf tour.

IN FACT, it's better business than usual.

Now four weeks deep into the schedule, the tour has been blessed with better-than-average winter weather in two stops in Arizona, two in California. There were a couple of chilly days in Phoenix. But the rest of it, even at the Crosby — often the site of some of the tour's worst weather — has been bright, sunny skies, mild to warm temperatures, little or no wind.

It seems to be a reverse of the standard procedure — the sun is following the tour instead of the tour following the sun. And that combination — the blizzard conditions of the East and Midwest and the tiny pocket of sunshine that graces the gypsy golfers — has been very, very good for the tour.

The combination has produced some of the largest television audiences ever to watch golf. More than 25 million sets were tuned in to the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am at sunsplashed Pebble Beach last week. A delay in starting time hurt the audience at Phoenix, but there were very large audiences for both Tucson and San Diego.

AND THE sponsors of the telecasts of next week's Hawaiian Open — a major air line — positively are licking their lips at the prospects of their audience.

"Can you imagine?" said a delighted network official. "Those folks in Buffalo, with 13 feet of snow on the ground, and in Chicago and Detroit and New York — all that huge population in the corridor from Washington to Boston — turning on their television sets and seeing the sun on Diamondhead, girls in hula skirts, young men out

SIZZLING WATSON LEADS BY TWO—

But Watson thinks it will take at least a 3-under 69 to win, since the courses here have played easy all week because of ideal weather conditions. Of the 82 who made the cut, 47 broke par Saturday.

Husky Lon Hinkle, who shared the midway lead, fell off the pace with a 1-over 73. He slipped into fifth place at 208 with rookie Keith Ferus and Ben Crenshaw. Texans Bill Rogers and Larry Nelson are tied for third at 205, four off the lead.

San Diegan Gene Littler, Australian David Graham and veteran Jerry McGee posted the low rounds of the day, 68, to deadlock five others at 207, 9-under-par.

"I'm looking forward to tomorrow," said Watson, a freckle-faced Missourian who graduated as a psychology major from Stanford University and has finished seventh, 19th and 12th on the tour the last three years, earning more than $400,000.

The 1975 British Open champion had six birdies and one bogey (only his third in 54 holes) in his Saturday round. He credited an accurate driver for his success.

"IT'S A LOT easier shooting out of the fairways instead of the trees," said Watson, who says a lesson from legendary Byron Nelson last fall helped him learn to take a shorter, firmer swing.

"I have that feeling that it won't end," Watson says of his torrid pace, which has seen him post 11 sub-par rounds out of 15 this year, leading to more than $50,000 in tour winnings. First place today would be worth another $36,000.

Who'll be golf rookie of year? 'Me,' says Jacobsen

By DOUG IVES
Staff Writer

SAN DIEGO — One month into the 1977 PGA golf tour, 22 of the 27 rookies from last fall's qualifying school have failed to win one cent.

At this rate, there won't be a Rookie of the Year.

But a brash, handsome young man from Oregon, Peter Jacobsen, says he knows who will be the next Jerry Pate, the next rising star in the PGA galaxy.

"It will be me," says the 22-year-old six-footer, who made it through the school on his first try after an impeccable amateur career, during which he won 10 college tournaments while at the University of Oregon.

Jacobsen, a second-team all-America for three years and twice runner-up in the Pacific-8 championships, has a smooth, fluid swing like Pate and, obviously, just as much confidence.

Two weeks into the tour his exuberance was slightly subdued after he twice shot sub-par rounds in Monday qualifying and failed to earn his way into the fields at Phoenix and Tucson. But Jacobsen did qualify at the Crosby, made the cut and finished 42nd, worth $623. That gave him an exemption into the Andy Williams-San Diego Open here and his golf is on the upswing.

He has shot rounds of 70-72-70—212, 4-under par, and could pick up a sizeable check with an under-par round today.

"I honestly feel I can win a tournament my first year," says Jacobsen. Veterans who have seen him drive the ball feel the potential is there. So does super agent Mark McCormick, who has signed him to a three-year contract.

"I never met McCormick until I got a letter from him in Arizona," said Jacobsen. "I liked his offer, knew his reputation and signed."

That McCormick takes 20 per cent off

the top doesn't bother the newlywed Jacobsen. McCormick already has a contract with Ram Golf Co. for the youngster.

"I'm excited about the association," says Peter, who won the Oregon and Northern California Opens prior to bagging his tour card. Jacobsen also played in the Long Beach Queen Mary Open last fall, winning a paycheck, and averaged $1,500 a week later on in an Arizona mini-tour.

Jacobsen says life on the tour is great, although he entertained thoughts of going home after those sub-par Monday qualifying rounds failed to get him into the first two tournaments.

"I thought my career was over before it began," he said, "but the people I talked to said it's harder qualifying on the West Coast than any other part of the tour. Also, I was playing well, so what more could I do?"

Jacobsen has no financial worries. He has eight sponsors who put up $30,000 and a full-time caddy who is a 2-handicapper. His wife, Jan, traveled for three weeks but has returned to Oregon to finish her schooling.

"I only know a few guys on the tour," he says, "but it's no big deal. Some of the younger players make so many excuses it's no fun to be around them. Show me a guy who makes excuses, and I'll show you a loser."

Jacobsen is looking forward to a good pairing. So far, the only quality pros he has played with are veterans Don January and Billy Casper.

"Wow! Is that January smooth," crowed Peter.

"I may not know how good I am until I play with the best," he goes on. "If I keep making cuts I'm sure to draw some of the better players pretty soon."

Jacobsen says he needs more work around the greens.

"I strike it well off the tee, but I'm not sharp chipping and putting," he claims. "I'm not bad, either. I just need more work. Fortunately, my time is my own out here and I can practice any time I want."

Good round or bad, Jacobsen practices every day.

Interviewed on Thursday, Peter was asked if he would go to the Hawaiian Open if he made the cut. His response showed the kind of confidence he has.

"What do you mean if I make the cut?" he snapped. "I'm going to shoot 62 and take the lead. To be rookie of the year, I'll have to make my move soon."

Jacobsen didn't shoot 62. Nobody did. He posted his sub-par round Saturday.

One of his playing partners was veteran Jim Colbert, who has seen a lot of young hotshots come and go. Who is his pick for Rookie of the Year?

You guessed it. Peter Jacobsen.

Blizzard? Sleet? Phooey! Golf tour basking in sun

By BOB GREEN

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Gentle breezes rustling the palm trees.

Bikini'd girls sunning themselves beside the pool.

A deeply tanned young man, brown forearms emerging from a short-sleeved shirt, producing a satisfying "tick" as his iron shot sends the ball arching gracefully against a deep blue sky before nestling softly on the plush, green grass.

A radio blaring the weather forecast: "Morning mist giving way to clear skies; afternoon temperatures in the lower 70s."

While most of the nation is struggling painfully — shivering, cold and miserable — facing unemployment, closed schools, transportation difficulties, fuel shortages, all the attendant problems and woes of the worst winter of the century, it's "Follow-The-Sun" business as usual for the pro golf tour.

IN FACT, it's better business than usual.

Now four weeks deep into the schedule, the tour has been blessed with better-than-average winter weather in two stops in Arizona, two in California. There were a couple of chilly days in Phoenix. But the rest of it, even at the Crosby — often the site of some of the tour's worst weather — has been bright, sunny skies, mild to warm temperatures, little or no wind.

It seems to be a reverse of the standard procedure — the sun is following the tour instead of the tour following the sun. And that combination — the blizzard conditions of the East and Midwest and the tiny pocket of sunshine that graces the gypsy golfers — has been very, very good for the tour.

The combination has produced some of the largest television audiences ever to watch golf. More than 25 million sets were tuned in to the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am at sunsplashed Pebble Beach last week. A delay in starting time hurt the audience at Phoenix, but there were very large audiences for both Tucson and San Diego.

AND THE sponsors of the telecasts of next week's Hawaiian Open — a major air line — positively are licking their lips at the prospects of their audience.

"Can you imagine?" said a delighted network official. "Those folks in Buffalo, with 13 feet of snow on the ground, and in Chicago and Detroit and New York — all that huge population in the corridor from Washington to Boston — turning on their television sets and seeing the sun on Diamondhead, girls in hula skirts, young men out there playing the greatest of the outdoor games in gorgeous weather while they're up to here in snow? Can you imagine how many people in Cleveland are gonna say 'to heck with it' and start booking flights?"

"No one has ever proved it, but no one doubts it — that bad, winter weather has a positive effect on the size of the viewing audience for golf telecasts," said an NBC-TV spokesman in New York.

"For one thing, they can't get outside. For another, it's a lot more fun to sit in front of the TV set and watch sports — particularly golf, which is played on the great courses in great weather — than to go outside and freeze your bleep off shoveling snow."

"We don't have concrete figures to show how much bad weather in the East increases the audience. I don't think anybody does. But all the networks agree that bad weather is good for the size of the audience."

"Interest generally is greater because of the eastern weather," agreed an ABC-TV spokesman.

"Another factor is that the golf audience has changed. At one time, a company would sponsor golf in hopes of reaching Dwight Eisenhower. It was a specialized audience. Now it's a general audience. In the winter — and that's the prime time for golf — our figures show it draws a better audience than what the newspapers call the 'major' sports: basketball and hockey."

"WE'VE MADE a major effort toward increasing interest in golf, and we'd like to think that's part of it," said PGA tour commissioner Deane Beman in Washington, D.C., "but we're not naive enough to think that's all of it. The weather has a lot to do with it."

"We know that our largest television audiences are in the winter, from the start of the tour through April, when the East and Midwests snowed in. Then it starts tailing off, when our hardcore audience of golfers can get out and play themselves."

They can't do it now. They're snowbound, chained to their sets by blizzards.

"There's another thing," a network executive said in New York. "A guy is sitting there in Indianapolis with the snow all around and it's below zero and he's facing a fuel shortage and the tube is showing guys playing golf in the sunshine and it's kind of like worrying a sore tooth."

In a way, it's encouraging, too. At least the blizzard-blasted TV audience can confirm that, like Mudville's mythical neighbors of mighty Casey, "somewhere in this favored land, the sun is shining bright."

SIZZLING WATSON LEADS BY TWO—

But Watson thinks it will take at least a 3-under 66 to win, since the courses here have played easy all week because of ideal weather conditions. Of the 82 who made the cut, 47 broke par Saturday.

Husky Lon Hinkle, who shared the midway lead, fell off the pace with a 1-over 73. He slipped into fifth place at 206 with rookie Keith Ferus and Ben Crenshaw. Texans Bill Rogers and Larry Nelson are tied for third at 205, four off the lead.

San Diegan Gene Littler, Australian David Graham and veteran Jerry McGee posted the low rounds of the day, 66, to deadlock five others at 207, 9-under-par.

"I'm looking forward to tomorrow," said Watson, a freckle-faced Missourian who graduated as a psychology major from Stanford University and has finished seventh, 10th and 12th on the tour the last three years, earning more than $400,000.

The 1975 British Open champion had six birdies and one bogey (only his third in 54 holes) in his Saturday round. He credited an accurate driver for his success.

"IT'S A LOT easier shooting out of the fairways instead of the trees," said Watson, who says a lesson from legendary Byron Nelson last fall helped him learn to take a shorter, firmer swing.

"I have that feeling that it won't end," Watson says of his torrid pace, which has seen him post 11 sub-par rounds out of 15 this year, leading to more than $50,000 in four winnings. First place today would be worth another $36,000.

"My form goes in waves, as I think it does for most of the guys out here," he went on. "As long as I keep winning, I'll keep playing. If I don't win in Hawaii next week, I'll skip the Bob Hope Desert Classic. I've played every tournament and I need a rest sometime."

Watson shaved his first stroke off par on the third hole by chipping from in 25 feet, birdied the par-5 sixth with a short chip followed by an 18-inch putt and turned in 33 by two-putting the par-5 ninth hole.

Watson continued to pummel the par-5s (he is 8-under on these holes) on the back, but he had to sink 9 and 12-foot putts to do it. He also birdied the 15th hole with a 10-footer but bogeyed the par-3 16th when he "shanked" a 3-iron.

SHEARER, a 28-year-old who earned his tour card last June after several strong years in Europe and Australia, scratched out a 38 front, then putted his way to a 33 coming in, sinking putts of 15, 6, 10 and 8 feet. The 10-footer was for a par-save on 17, the 8-footer for a bird on 18.

"Those two putts are the difference between me having a happy face or a sad face," said the mustachioed Aussie. "I struggled hard today."

One of the eight Australians on the U.S. circuit, Shearer says he is here to stay.

"It is so magnificent," he says. "Everything about the U.S. tour is classy, and everyone has been so friendly and helpful. In Europe, there is a hassle every week and you really don't have to beat more than a few guys."

"Here, there are 50 or 60 golfers who could win on an given week. I reached a point in my career where I had no place else to go. The U.S. tour is the biggest and the best. I just had to try it."

Trying this tour has given Shearer peace of mind, he says, although you would never know by his finishes. He's never been a contender and won only $4,129 last year.

A crowd of 16,000 watched the action Saturday, many of them trailing hometown favorite Hinkle. But he faded, coming in with a 38.

Japanese spikers tie UCLA series

Japan bounced back from a poor first-night showing against UCLA to even its volleyball exhibition series at one match apiece with a 15-13, 18-16, 15-10 victory over the Bruins Saturday night at Pauley Pavilion.

The final and deciding game in the series is scheduled for Monday night at UC-Santa Barbara. In the match played before a crowd of 6,158 at Pauley Pavilion, Japan trailed in the first game 6-3, but came back to win 15-13 on the spiking of Haruhiko Hanawa.

Helmeted 'Clipper' grabs lead

SCOTTSDALE (AP) — Joe DiMaggio came prepared for the second round of the Sports Golf Classic.

The Hall of Famer showed up on the first tee Saturday wearing a batting helmet reminiscent of his days with teammate Yogi Berra on the New York Yankees.

It was Berra's ninth-hole shot in Friday's play which prompted DiMaggio's caution. The Yankee Clipper had just finished shooting the ninth hole when Berra, playing in the next group, blasted his ball out of the sand trap and 30 yards past the green, where it hit DiMaggio in the head.

"It sounded like I hit a block of wood," said a laughing Berra.

DiMaggio recovered in splendid fashion for Saturday's play, teaming with partner Otto Graham for a share of the lead at 120, along with Joe Namath, Clyde Wright and Bobby Grich-Steve Zabel.

THE tournament, a best-ball affair, is composed of teams of professional football and baseball players.

Wright, a former Angel who now pitches in Japan and still lives in Anaheim, was a last-minute addition. He flew in Wednesday night after Namath's original partner, Yankee catcher Thurman Munson, was snowed in at his Canton, Ohio, home.

"There were more people in Joe's gallery than there were when I was pitching for the Angels," said Wright.

Haas catches Boros for PGA Seniors tie

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP)—A five-foot birdie putt by Fred Haas Jr. on the 17th hole Saturday gave him a third-round, two-under-par 70 for a 211 total and a tie with Julius Boros for the lead in the $50,000 PGA Senior Championship.

Boros, who led Haas by a stroke after Friday's round, bogied the 18th for the second day in a row and wound up with a 71.

That puts two former winners of this classic for men 50-and-over into a duel for today's final round. Boros, 57, won in 1971. Haas, 61, won in 1968.

Club pro Tex Simon, who operates his own course in Benton Harbor, Mich., matched Haas' 70 for the day's low and moved into third at 215.

World Cup skiing

Combined News Services

MEGEVE, France—Austria's 24-year-old veteran Monika Kaserer plowed through a fog bank Saturday to win the giant slalom of the World Cup ski meet, a narrow two-hundredths of a second ahead of Switzerland's World Cup leader Lise-Marie Morerod.

The brunette Austrian giant slalom specialist used a 3-year-old pair of skis "that proved just ideal for the soft snow on the course." She had not won a race in the current season although her repeated placings in the top five have her in sixth place in the unchanged World Cup standings.

"I hope this ends my bad luck streak," she said at the finish. Now in her eighth international racing season, she took first place in the World Cup giant slalom standings in 1974 and won the Alpine combined bronze medal in the 1975 World Championships. Last season she won only two races—both of them giant slaloms.

"I'm delighted with this result," she said. "It gives me that special spirit my morale needed for the rest of the season."

Saturday's 1150-meter race, including a 360-meter drop and 52 gates, had to be postponed for an hour because of fog on the Mont d'Ariavis track. Thick patches of fog still lay across the course when officials finally gave the go ahead. Results:

Monika Kaserer (Austria) 1:34.87, 2. Lise-Marie Morerod (Switzerland) 1:34.89, 3. Annemarie Proell-Moser (Austria) 1:35.06, 4. Vikki Eichenstein (Syracuse, N.Y.) 1:35.25, 5. Regina Sackl (Austria) 1:35.33, 6. Fabienne Serrat (France) 1:35.41, 7. Abby Fisher (South Conway, N.H.) 1:35.78, 8. Becky Dorsey (Wenham, Me.) 1:36.26, 9. Lea Scher (Austria) 1:36.42, 10. Brigitte Totschnig-Habersatter (Austria) 1:36.75.

Junior Americans: 20. Christine Cooper (Sun Valley, Ida.) 1:40.34, 21. Jamie Kurlander (Marble, N.J.) 1:40.43, 22. Susie Preuss (Lakeport, N.H.) 1:39.45, 23. Linda Cochran (Sun Valley, Ida.) 1:42.05, 24. Mary Seaton (Coeck, Me.) 1:42.35, 25. Susie Patterson (Sun Valley, Ida.) 1:43.02.

World Cup point standings after 19 of the 25 events in current season: 1. Lise-Marie Morerod (Switzerland) 214, 2. Annemarie Proell-Moser (Austria) 189, 3. Brigitte Totschnig-Habersatter (Austria) 184, 4. Hannu Wenzel (Lichtenstein) 170, 5. Morio Thoreus (Sapporo, Japan) 122, 6. Monika Kaserer (Austria) 116, 7. Pernie Pelen (France) 92, 8. Brigitte Zurbogen (Switzerland) 78, 9. Nicola Spiss (Austria) 70, 10. Ingeborg Evi Mittermaier (Germany) and 11. Gudrun Gassner (Italy) 57.

MORZINE, France—Switzerland's former Olympic champion Bernhard Russi scored the first time in practice runs for today's World Cup downhill race.

Russi completed the 3,000-meter-long course with a total drop of 885 meters in 1 minute, 55.5 seconds. Next was Austria's newcomer

Harth Weirather (1:51.09) and his compatriot Ulrich Spiess in 1:51.39.

Friday, Austria's Franz Klammer ran the best time on the same course in 1:48.36. World Cup leader Klammer has won each of the five World Cup downhill races held thus far this season and is the outstanding favorite in today's race.

Pro skiing

MONT GABRIEL, Que.—Defending champion Henri Duvillard of France won his sixth race in nine starts in the $40,000 World Pro Ski giant slalom.

Duvillard, 30, earned $5,400, increasing his season's earnings to $29,263, and more than $130,000 in 24 years of pro skiing.

Duvillard, who has already announced his retirement after this year, said after the race he is not trying to break his record for most victories in one season he established last year. Duvillard, who won 15 of 21 races last season, also set a season high in money winnings with $55,900.

Cross country skiing

BURKE MOUNTAIN, Vt.—Shirley Firth, the Canadian who won the women's 7 1/2 kilometers, won the grueling women's 20 kilometers in the final day of the U.S. National cross-country ski championships.

In mens competition, Stan Dunklee won the 50 kilometers, perhaps skiing's most grueling competition, and set himself up as America's next Nordic superstar.

Women: 1. Shirley Firth (Canada) 1:12:02.54, 2. Esther Miller (Canada) 1:13:56.45, 3. Joan Grothueson (Canada) 1:14:24.17, 4. Alison Spencer (Anchorage, Alaska) 1:15:31.21, 5. Joanne Musolf (East Wenatchee, Wash.) 1:16:11.50, 6. Mita Cohn (Bainbridge, Mont.) 1:16:50.75, 7. Terry Rorer (Concord, Mass.) 1:16:59.1, 8. Tina Hosmer (Eastern Division) 1:19:20.55, 9. Ruth Baxter (Aspen, Colo.) 1:20:48.54, 10. Jennifer Caldwell (Putney, Vt.) 1:22:27.07.

Mens: 1. Stan Dunklee (Bradford, Vt.) 1:37:20.40, 2. Tim Caldwell (Putney, Vt.) 1:39:01.67, 3. Doug Peterson (Minneapolis) 1:40:40.2, 4. Hans Skistved (Canada) 1:40:46.15, 5. Lynn Nelson (Boise, Ida.) 1:41:32.20, 6. Craig Ward (U.S.) 1:40:48.56, 7. Randy Korr (Quincy, Me.) 1:43:00.00, 8. Jim McNulty (U.S.) 1:43:53.19, 9. Bert Bullock (Canada) 1:44:15.58, 10. John Spencer (Anchorage, Alaska) 1:44:49.03.

Figure skating

HELSINKI—East Germany's Anneli Poetzsch won the European women's figure skating championship, giving East Germany its second gold medal in the championships.

Poetzsch secured the victory with her free program, which included three triple jumps she cleared with ease. Dagmar Larz of West Germany was second and Italy's Susan Dracini was third.

LBSU cagers open loop season vs. toughest foes

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Within the span of one week, the 49er basketball team will face two of its top conference challengers, Cal State Fullerton, and UCLA. Fullerton will play at LBSU Wednesday with the Bruins back for a rematch Feb. 9. Sandwiched between will be a Feb. 4 game at Cal Poly Pomona.

The Long Beach State-Fullerton contest will be the first of the season between the two. On the other hand, the 49ers will be trying to play catch-up with the Bruins, who out-pointed LBSU a week ago when the 49ers suffered an off-night marked by a lethargic offense.

"UCLA is tough and very, very quick with an outstanding defense," said coach Fran Schaafsma. "Ann Meyers' Olympic experience has seasoned her well in terms of consistency and control."

The Bruins have been starting Beth Moore at guard replacing standout Julie Lewinter, who is now assisting with the junior varsity. Beth is a sophomore and a graduate of Los Alamitos High School where she earned MVP honors.

Comparing Fullerton and UCLA, Fran gives the edge to the Bruins as "much quicker." This year's Fullerton team is basically the same as last year's, sparked by Nancy Dunkle, another member of the silver medal U.S. Olympic team.

The Cal Poly game is non-conference. The 49ers were tipped by Cal Poly at that school's pre-season tournament.

EVEN with three of her top gymnasts out, coach Peggy Stoll's Viking gymnastic team overpowered El Camino and Pierce Colleges Wednesday. LBCC's 110.05 was followed by El Camino with 89.35 and Pierce with 88.02.

World Cup skiing

Combined News Services
MONTREAL, France—Austria's 24-year-old veteran Monika Kaserer plowed through a fog bank Saturday to win the giant slalom of the World Cup ski meet, a narrow two-hundredths of a second ahead of Switzerland's World Cup leader Lise-Marie Morerod.

The brunette Austrian giant slalom specialist said she used a 3-year-old pair of skis "that proved just ideal for the soft snow on the course." She had not won a race in the current season although her repeated placings in the top 10 have her in sixth place in the unchanged World Cup standings.

"I hope this ends my bad luck streak," she said at the finish. Now in her eighth international racing season, she took first place in the World Cup giant slalom standings in 1973 and won the Alpine combined bronze medal in the 1974 World Championships. Last season she won only two races—both of them giant slaloms.

"I'm delighted with this result," she said. "It gives me that special spur to my morale needed for the rest of the season."

Saturday's 150-meter race, including a 30-meter drop and 52 gates, had to be postponed for an hour because of fog on the Mont d'Arbois track. Thick patches of fog still lay across the course when officials finally gave the go ahead. Results:

1. Monika Kaserer (Austria) 1:34.87, 2. Lise-Marie Morerod (Switzerland) 1:34.89, 3. Annemarie Proell-Moser (Austria) 1:35.05, 4. Viki Fleckenstein (Syracuse, N.Y.) 1:35.40, 5. Regina Sackl (Austria) 1:35.53, 6. Fabienne Serrat (France) 1:35.81, 7. Adri Fidler (South Conway, N.H.) 1:36.28, 8. Becky Dorsey (Weeham, Me.) 1:36.29, 9. Liza Sawyer (Austria) 1:36.43, 10. Brigitte Totschnig-Habersatter (Austria) 1:36.78.

Other Americans: 20. Christy Cooper (Sun Valley, Ida.) 1:36.34, 21. Jamie Kurlander (Wachette, N.J.) 1:39.43, 22. Heidi Preuss (Lakeport, N.H.) 1:39.85, 45. Linda Cochran (Crested, Vt.) 1:41.05, 51. Mary Seaton (Cock, Me.) 1:41.95, 57. Susie Patterson (Sun Valley, Ida.) 1:43.02.

World Cup point standings after 18 of the 28 events in current season: 1. Lise-Marie Morerod (Switzerland) 213, 2. Annemarie Proell-Moser (Austria) 189, 3. Brigitte Totschnig-Habersatter (Austria) 178, 4. Hanni Wenzel (Liechtenstein) 171, 5. Marie-Therese Nadig (Switzerland) 122, 6. Monika Kaserer (Austria) 115, 7. Pernie Polen (France) 10, 8. Cornelia Zurbiggen (Switzerland) 78, 9. Nicola Spies (Austria) 61, 10. tie between Eva Mittermaier (Germany) and Claudia Giordani (Italy) 51.

MORZINE, France—Switzerland's former Olympic champion Bernhard Russi scored the best time in practice runs for today's World Ski Cup downhill race.

Russi completed the 3,080-meter-long course with a total drop of 885 meters in 1 minute, 50.80 seconds. Next was Austria's newcomer

Harti Weirather (1:51.09) and his compatriot Ulrich Spies (1:51.39).

Friday, Austria's Franz Klammer ran the best time on the same course in 1:48.81, followed by Weirather in 1:48.96. World Cup leader Klammer has won each of the five World Cup downhill races held thus far this season and is the outstanding favorite in today's race.

Pro skiing

MONT GABRIEL, Que.—Defending champion Henri Duvalard of France won his sixth race in nine starts in the $40,000 World Pro Ski giant slalom.

Duvalard, 30, earned $5,400, increasing his season's earnings to $39,263, and more than $150,000 in 2½ years of pro skiing.

Duvalard, who has already announced his retirement after this year, said after the race he is not trying to break his record for most victories in one season he established last year. Duvalard, who won 15 of 21 races last season, also set a season high in money winnings with $65,500.

Cross country skiing

BURKE MOUNTAIN, Vt.—Shirley Firth, the Canadian who won the women's 7½ kilometers, won the grueling women's 20 kilometers in the final day of the U.S. National cross-country ski championships.

In mens competition, Stan Dunklee won the 50 kilometers, perhaps skiing's most grueling competition, and set himself up as America's next Nordic superstar.

Women: 1. Shirley Firth (Canada) 1:12:02.54, 2. Esther Miller (Canada) 1:13:50.45, 3. Joan Grothuesen (Canada) 1:14:34.17, 4. Alison Spencer (Anchorage, Alaska) 1:15:15.21, 5. Joanne Musolf (East Wenatchee, Wash.) 1:16:11.50, 6. Miti Cain (Bazeman, Mont.) 1:16:50.79, 7. Terry Porter (Concord, Mass.) 1:17:49.31, 8. Trina Hosmer (Eastern Day-care) 1:18:20.51, 9. Ruth Baxter (Aspen, Colo.) 1:19:45.54, 10. Jennifer Caldwell (Puney, Vt.) 1:22:27.07.

Men: 1. Stan Dunklee (Burke Mountain, Vt.) 2:37:29.86, 2. Tim Caldwell (Puney, Vt.) 2:39:01.87, 3. Doug Peterson (Minneapolis) 2:41:40.82, 4. Jona Skingstad (Canada) 2:45:06.45, 5. Lyle Nelson (Boise, Ida.) 2:47:32.20, 6. Craig Ward (U.S.) 2:50:45.56, 7. Randy Kerr (Auburn, Me.) 2:53:03.00, 8. Joe McNulty (U.S.) 2:53:19.94, 9. Bert Bullock (Canada) 2:54:15.85, 10. John Spencer (Anchorage, Alaska) 2:54:54.93.

Figure skating

HELSINKI—East Germany's Annet Poetzsch won the European women's figure skating championship, giving East Germany its second gold medal in the championships.

Poetzsch secured the victory with her free program, which included three triple jumps she cleared with ease. Dagmar Lurz of West Germany was second and Italy's Susan Driono was third.

LBSU cagers open loop season vs. toughest foes

By ELAINE RISINGER
Staff Writer

Within the span of one week, the 49er basketball team will face two of its top conference challengers, Cal State Fullerton, and UCLA. Fullerton will play at LBSU Wednesday with the Bruins back for a rematch Feb. 9. Sandwiched between will be a Feb. 4 game at Cal Poly Pomona.

The Long Beach State-Fullerton contest will be the first of the season between the two. On the other hand, the 49ers will be trying to play catch-up with the Bruins, who outpointed LBSU a week ago when the 49ers suffered an off-night marked by a lethargic offense.

"UCLA is tough and very, very quick with an outstanding defense," said coach Fran Schaafsma. "Ann Meyers' Olympic experience has seasoned her well in terms of consistency and control."

The Bruins have been starting Beth Moore at guard replacing standout Julie Lewinter, who is now assisting with the junior varsity. Beth is a sophomore and a graduate of Los Alamitos High School where she earned MVP honors.

Comparing Fullerton and UCLA, Fran gives the edge to the Bruins as "much quicker." This year's Fullerton team is basically the same as last year's, sparked by Nancy Dunkle, another member of the silver medal U. S. Olympic team.

The Cal Poly game is non-conference. The 49ers were tipped by Cal Poly at that school's pre-season tournament.

EVEN with three of her top gymnasts out, coach Peggy Stoll's Viking gymnastic team overpowered El Camino and Pierce Colleges Wednesday. LBCC's 110.05 was followed by El Camino with 89.35 and Pierce with 88.02.

Leading the scoring for Long Beach City College was Jean Teissere, who was first in beam, floor exercise and vaulting. She missed winning in uneven parallel bars by one-tenth of a point after a point and one-half was deducted from her score.

One of the bars popped out in the middle of Jean's routine. "She was throwing a beautiful routine at the time," Peggy said. "She is superb and getting better."

A big plus for the Vikings was Susie Rapp, who was competing for the first time on the beam since her surgery. Susie followed Jean's first place 8.5 score with 7.45. Third place was nailed down by Anna Cooks with 7.35. "Anna is coming along beautifully," added Peggy. The former Wilson

WOMEN IN SPORTS

High School student now competes as a class 1 gymnast in floor and beam and is "very close in the vault."

Moving ahead "incredibly" was Cheryl Uptain, whose beam routine was "by far the best she has ever thrown." She went from low sixes at previous events to 7.25.

LBCC will compete Feb. 4 at Orange Coast College.

AT last week's award banquet for the LBCC basketball team, eight players were recognized for their contributions.

Toni Bell, who was in double figures every game of the season, was selected offensive player of the year. She averaged 19.7 points per game and shot 51 per cent from the floor.

The free-throw championship went to Joan McLean, who was 81 per cent from the line. Her 15.6 point average ranked second behind Toni.

Rhonda Henderson was tabbed defensive player and most inspirational player of the year, and Eleanor Fields was praised as the most improved player. Coach Donna Prindle described Eleanor as "invaluable in coming off the bench to play super defense."

Honored on the JV squad were Leslie Gilpin, defensive player of the year; Virginia Lozano, who led in free throws with 89 per cent; Fredericka Robert, most improved with 6.5 rebounds and two steals per game, and Dawn Wiley, most inspirational. Dawn averaged four rebounds and three assists per game.

COMINGFORTH WINS DERBY

Comingforth, winner of last month's Golden State Futurity, made it a clean sweep of the winter's two richest events Saturday night at Los Alamitos when she sprinted to a three-quarter-length victory over Etta Chick in the $131,000 El Primero Del Ano Derby, the nation's first hundred-grander of the year.

Ridden by veteran jockey Johnny Cox, Comingforth had little trouble posting her fourth consecutive victory of the winter season, even though she slipped slightly at the start. She recovered quickly and was in command the last 300 yards of the 400-yard event.

The Azure Te filly, who closed out her summer campaign by running seventh to Real Wind in the rich All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, N.M., took the $131,000 Golden State Futurity last month and Saturday night added the winner's share of $58,950 to her growing bank account.

She now has won nine of 16 lifetime starts and has earnings of $197,196, assuring herself of top 3-year-old honors for the winter season.

Purchased for $30,000 in the All-American Yearling Sale, Comingforth raced the Derby in a sizzling 19.87 seconds, the second-fastest winter Derby clocking in history.

Only Mito Wise Dancer's time of 19.83 last January was faster than that recorded by Comingforth. Under the direction of trainer Roger Fagan, Comingforth was sent off as the 3-2 favorite by the more than 10,000 fans in attendance, despite the fact that she was only the second-fastest qualifier out of last week's trials.

She returned $5, $3.20 and $2.80.

COMINGFORTH WINS DERBY

Comingforth, winner of last month's Golden State Futurity, made it a clean sweep of the winter's two richest events Saturday night at Los Alamitos when she sprinted to a three-quarter-length victory over Etta Chick in the $131,000 El Primero Del Ano Derby, the nation's first hundred-grander of the year.

Ridden by veteran jockey Johnny Cox, Comingforth had little trouble posting her fourth consecutive victory of the winter season, even though she slipped slightly at the start. She recovered quickly and was in command the last 300 yards of the 400-yard event.

The Azure Te filly, who closed out her summer campaign by running seventh to Real Wind in the rich All-American Futurity at Ruidoso Downs, N.M., took the $486,000 Golden State Futurity last month and Saturday night added the winner's share of $58,950 to her growing bank account.

She now has won nine of 16 lifetime starts and has earnings of $197,196, assuring herself of top 3-year-old honors for the winter season.

Purchased for $30,000 in the All-American Yearling Sale, Comingforth raced the Derby in a sizzling 19.87 seconds, the second-fastest winter Derby clocking in history.

Only Mito Wise Dancer's time of 19.83 last January was faster than that recorded by Comingforth.

Under the direction of trainer Roger Fagan, Comingforth was sent off as the 3-2 favorite by the more than 10,000 fans in attendance, despite the fact that she was only the second-fastest qualifier out of last week's trials. She returned $5, $3.20 and $2.80.

Lobsters costly in market, court

The present price of lobster tails in the fish markets—if you can find any—might have caused more poaching than is normal, but the fines that violators have to pay should be enough to discourage anybody from trying to steal from legal commercial traps.

More and more people are discovering that they can't get away with stealing from those traps, and they are donating large sums of money to the Department of Fish and Game.

For instance, three Laguna Niguel residents were convicted of robbing a lobster trap off Laguna Beach. It was a simple case for the DFG wardens who had the three men under surveillance at the time of the theft. When apprehended as they came ashore with four lobsters, they were not only surprised at being caught, but they had the lobsters that previously had been marked by the DFG wardens.

One diver paid $250 and was placed on one year's probation; a second paid $50, plus $15 added penalty, and his expensive diving gear was confiscated. He also was placed on probation for one year. The third man paid $65.

In another case, a father-son team, both commercial fishermen from San Pedro, were convicted of taking five gurneybags filled with lobsters without a lobster permit. The son, 34, was fined $250 and placed on probation for two years; the father, 70, was fined $80 and also placed on probation for two years. The lobsters were given to a charitable institution.

TWO LONG BEACH MEN were involved in still another case. DFG wardens arrested them as they returned to shore in a commercially-registered swordfish boat. They had two lobster traps and 41 lobster tails, all taken illegally and out of season. Thirty-five of the 41 tails came from undersized lobsters. Each man paid $625 in fines.

The sad thing about all of this is that men will keep trying to evade the law. Eventually, there won't be any lobsters left. Robert Kaneen, manager of the DFG's marine resources region with headquarters in Long Beach, says that the state's lobster population has declined 80 per cent in the last 20 years, primarily because of illegal activities, particularly the taking of undersized lobsters.

Kaneen also had this to say: Lobsters, like all state wildlife resources, belong to all of the people of California. Anybody who takes lobsters or other wildlife of land or sea illegally is stealing something that belongs to all of us. The courts recognize this and generally levy fines and other penalties befitting the offense.

Unfortunately, some people feel the rewards, economic or otherwise, outweigh the risks of being caught and heavily fined. Our records show a steady stream of lobster violations, including one case in which the wardens recovered nearly 5,000 undersized lobsters.

THE DFG HAS a court case pending in which a minimum of $128,710 in civil damages is being sought from John Mark Emirzian, Santa Ana, a former commercial fisherman, and possibly as many as 20 John Does who may be listed later, for taking and possessing 2,871 undersized lobsters in March of 1974.

In the suit, the DFG claims that the monetary value to the people of California of each and every undersized lobster taken illegally is no less than $10, and furthermore, the DFG reserves the right to prove a greater amount of damage at the trial.

The bare minimum of damage incurred by the people by the illegal take of 2,871 lobsters was set at $28,710. In addition, the DFG asks $100,000 in exemplary damages, and reserves the right to increase that amount when the full extent of the injury is ascertained at the trial.

The lobsters were in the possession of Emirzian. The DFG alleges that either he or other possible defendants had taken the lobsters in the full knowledge that such action was in violation of state law. Marine biologists estimate that as many as 200,000 undersized lobsters are taken each year. It takes as long as 10 years for a lobster to reach the minimum legal size of 3 1/4 inches in body shell length, which means a measurement from the eyesocket to the start of the tail.

OUTDOOR MINIS—The U.S. Coast Guard Auxiliary is presenting an accelerated class in boating skills and seamanship at the South Gate Adult School, 3351 Firestone Blvd., beginning at 7 p.m. Tuesday. The class will continue on Thursdays and Tuesdays at the same hour until completion. At the conclusion of the course, graduating students will be taken on a cruise by Flotilla 36, USCGA, with a raftup and lunch to follow.

The 12th anniversary of Treasure Trails, an event for drivers of off-the-road vehicles, will be held at Salton's West Shores next Saturday and Sunday. Merchants of the Salton Sea Beach area are providing numerous prizes for the contest.

The 1977 Rent-a-Canoe Directory is off the press and there are 900 listings in 46 states where Grumman boats may be rented for various kinds of canoe trips. Anybody wanting a copy should write Rent-a-Canoe, Grumman Boats, Marathon, N.Y. 13803. The directory is free and there are California locations.

Sheldons', Inc., has published a 1977 Fisherman's Guide, with fishing tips, pictures, stories, Mepps lures award information and a Field & Stream entry blank. Several Californians, who won in 1976, are pictured in the guide. It's free if you write to Sheldons', Inc., P.O. Box 508, Ashigo, Wis. 54409 and mention this column.

The Douglas Trap and Skeet Association will have its monthly shoot at Winchester West next Sunday, starting at 9 a.m. January winners were Mickey Davidson, Walter Colman, Logan Crowe, Bill Caprine, Julie Thorn and Bob Jensen.

Royal Derby II heads San Marcos 'Cap today

Fogelson and Whittingham's Royal Derby II, winner of Oak Tree's Henry P. Russell Handicap in November, will carry topweight of 124 pounds when he heads a field of 11 in today's 1 1/4-mile main event on the turf at Santa Anita Park, the $58,150 San Marcos Handicap.

After missing by a neck to King Pellinore in the Oak Tree Invitational, which was run in world-record time of 1:57 1/2, Royal Derby II came back to win the Russell 'Cap on the grass at today's distance while shouldering 125 pounds.

In his seasonal debut on Jan. 16, he closed well to finish fourth behind Top Crowd in a 1 1/4-mile allowance race.

His regular rider, Hall of Famer Bill Shoemaker, again will be aboard.

Second in the weights at 123 pounds is Sir Charles Clure's Anne's Pretender, a Kentucky-bred stakes winner from England. In his U.S. Debut on Jan. 15 the 5-year-old son of Pretense missed by a head in a turf sprint after being sidelined for three months.

Winner of the Brigadier Gerard Stakes in England last season, he will be ridden by Angel Cordero.

Sixteen-year-old apprentice Steve Cauthen, who won two races Saturday at Aqueduct, including a division of the $105,650 Affectionately Handicap, returns to Santa Anita for the second week in a row today.

One of Cauthen's mounts will be Elmendorf's Announcer, another top handicapper whose workouts since the fall Oak Tree meeting are promising for his spot in the San Marcos.

Completing the lineup are Teddy's Courage (116, Marco Castaneda); Copper Mel (114, Jerry Lambert); Duveen (117, Sandy Hawley); White Fir (111, Mark Sellers); Victorian Prince (119, Fernando Toro); Silver Sabre (119, Laffit Pincay); Gallivanter (113, Don Pierce); and Top Crowd (118, Frank Olivares).

Distant Land and Crumbs, who each raced at Santa Anita Saturday, were overnight scratches.

TORO THREADED the largely overlooked Uniformity out of the pack and into the lead in the stretch, then the longshot held off Distant Land to win Saturday's feature, the $57,500 San Pasqual Handicap, before a crowd of 35,475.

Uniformity, who won the San Carlos Handicap at seven furlongs on Jan. 16, carried 117 pounds in the mile and 1/16 race for older horses and covered the distance in 1:41, three-fifths off the track record. The winner returned $17.20, $8.40 and $7.

Distant Land, three-quarters of a length back, paid

$4.20 and $3.60, and the show payoff on Pisistrato was $6.80.

Toro kept Uniformity, a Florida-bred horse trained by W.L. Proctor, close to the pace all the way, then urged his mount through an open spot along the rail in the stretch.

"The trainer told me the secret is get him to relax," said Toro, "and once he did it was only a question of finding a place to run. When the hole first opened at the top of the stretch, he hesitated until he got up in there, then he took off."

Ancient Title, the 2-1 favorite in the field of eight, finished fifth, behind B.J. Ridder's Messenger Of Song, whose rider, Lambert, lodged a claim of foul against

RACE ROUNDUP

LOUISIANA DOWNS—A 13-year-old horse, one of the oldest thoroughbred mares racing in the U.S., proved she can still hold her own. Vain Lass pulled ahead in the stretch to win by a head in a $2,500 claiming race at Louisiana Downs. She paid $12.20 to win. The race, covering a mile and 70 yards, was the mare's 33rd career victory. Vain Lass, owned by Vern Goodrich, has won 20 races at a distance of 1 1/4-mile or more. Her last victory was Nov. 16, 1975 in a distance race at Louisiana Downs. Her last race before Saturday was Dec. 15 at Bay Meadows. Goodrich said Vain Lass usually takes a while to get accustomed to a new track. "I thought she would be a little short today," he said. "But she is one dead game mare."

AQUEDUCT—Shy Dawn ($8.00) and Illiterate ($7.20) each found room along the rail and went on to win divisions of the $105,650 Affectionately Handicap for fillies and mares. Shy Dawn, boosting her 1977 record to 3-for-3 under jockey Daryl Montoya, scored by a nose over Double Quester in 1:49 1/2 for the mile and 1/16. Illiterate, with apprentice Steve Cauthen riding, called by 1 1/2-lengths over Quintas Vicki. Cauthen finished the day with two winners, three seconds and two thirds in nine mounts. For the week, he had 47 mounts and won with 11, placed with 10 and showed with 11. Since coming to New York on Nov. 30, he has won with 85 of 330 mounts and also has 55 seconds and 44 thirds.

HONG KONG—English jockey Lester Pigott riding the English mount Glenmalin won the $50,000 Hong Kong Jockeys' Invitation Cup at the Royal Hong Kong Jockey Club. Five-time Kentucky Derby winner Bill Hartack was second aboard Australia's Natural Vigour.

GULFSTREAM—Heavily-favored Buena Shore faded to fourth and Yamanin ($14.00) closed with a rush to win the $63,100 Sprint Championship Handicap. Ridden by Bill Gaudin, the winner clocked 1:22 1/5 for the seven furlongs while scoring by two lengths over Full Out.

NEW ORLEANS—Shannon's Goal ($15.60) led all the way and held off a late challenge by Port Eads to win the $15,000 Iherve Handicap. Ridden by Angelo Trostair, the winner clocked 1:11 1/2 for the six furlongs.

SUFFOLK—Snowed out.

Bedtime is a ho-ho-whole lot of fun with your own Little Sprout Sleeping Bag.

You'll sleep as snug as the Little Green Sprout in this warm, cuddly sleeping bag from the Jolly Green Giant. It's washable, made of quilted cotton with 1 1/2 lbs. of synthetic polyester fill, and covered with colorful pictures of the Sprout inside and out.

Zip it up and you've got a 32" x 68" sleeping bag. Or use it unzipped as a 64" x 68" comforter. Either way it's bound to keep you cozy all night long.

To get your very own Sprout Sleeping Bag, just send the Giant $8.95 and two ingredient panels from any Green Giant canned or frozen products. Order today. It's a jolly green dream come true. Ho, ho!

YOU'VE FINISHED YOUR BREAKFAST--RIGHT, JEFFY?

YES, GRANDMA.

I'LL BET YOU HAD SOME CEREAL AND ORANGE JUICE, THEN YOU HAD AN EGG, AND CHOCOLATE MILK--THEN SOME TOAST WITH STRAWBERRY JAM...

MOMMY! HOW DID GRANDMA KNOW WHAT I HAD FOR BREAKFAST?

OFFICIAL RULES

1. On an official entry blank, or a plain 3"x5" piece of paper, match the symbols in the C.U.P. award by placing the letter C, U, or P next to the correct description. Then, insert your name, address and zip code on your entry and attach it with the C.U.P. award symbol from any package of Brawny, Aurora, Northern or Gala, or the words "Cleaning Up Pollution" award, hand printed on a plain 3"x5" piece of paper.
2. Enter as often as you wish, but each entry must be mailed separately to: C.U.P. Award Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 2424, Westbury, New York 11591. Entries must be received by April 30, 1977.
3. Winners will be selected in random drawings from among those entries with the symbols matching correctly. In the event there are not enough correct answers, remaining prizes will be awarded by random drawing among the balance of entries. Drawings will be conducted by National Judging Institute, Inc., an independent judging organization, whose decisions are final. All prizes will be awarded. Only one prize to a family. Liability for taxes is the responsibility of the winners. Prizes are non-transferable and not redeemable for cash. Winners may be asked to execute affidavit of eligibility and release.

4. Sweepstakes open to residents of California, Oregon, Washington, Nevada, Wyoming, Idaho, Colorado, Montana, Utah, Arizona, except employees and their families of the American Can Company, its advertising agencies, National Judging Institute, Inc. and Rick Shanleyman Associates. This offer is subject to all Federal, State and local laws and void where prohibited or restricted.
5. For a list of major winners, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Cleaning Up Pollution" Award & Winners List, P.O. Box 2454, Westbury, New York 11591. NO PURCHASE NECESSARY.

Ask About Them...There Is One To Suit Your Needs

When he grows up, will the air be clean?

Will the water be pure?

We're working to make sure it is.

Over 4 million dollars was spent to install the most-advanced air and water pollution control equipment in the world in our Oregon mill.

And we were the first leading paper products in America to be awarded the official Oregon "Cleaning Up Pollution" award. This "Cleaning Up Pollution" award has been presented to us every year, since it was initiated in 1972.

Our Halsey Oregon Mill has earned the right to display this symbol on every package of paper towels, tissues and napkins we make.

Just as we care about the quality of all our products, this symbol proves we also care about the quality of our environment.

Brawny,[®] Aurora,[®] Northern[®] and Gala[®]

The paper products that care about the future of the West.

THE OFFICIAL OREGON "CLEANING UP POLLUTION" AWARD

This coveted award was initiated in 1972 by the Department of Environmental Quality to honor companies who protect Oregon's natural resources. We are proud to be the first leading paper products in America authorized to bear this symbol on our packages. It has been presented to us for "outstanding environmental effort above and beyond basic requirements." We thank the Oregon Environmental Commission for this important award, and restate our pledge to protect the quality of our environment.

$3 off Heavy-duty PLUS shocks

This Ad Effective Sun., Mon., Jan. 30, 31 and Tues., Feb. 1

Limited warranty on Heavy-duty PLUS shock absorber for as long as you own the vehicle. If Heavy-duty PLUS shock absorber fails while the original purchaser owns the car, it will be replaced upon return, free of charge, or the purchase price will be refunded. If the defective shock absorber was installed by Sears, we will install the new shock absorber with no charge for labor. If the defective shock absorber was not installed by Sears, installation of the replacement shock absorber is not included under this warranty. This warranty does not cover shock absorbers installed on vehicles used for commercial purposes.

Warranted for as long as you own your car! Large 1 3/16-in. piston provides greater fluid capacity and better ride control than shocks on most standard new cars. Wiper ring seal helps eliminate leakage to keep out dust and water for long shock life. Sizes for most American-made cars, many imports, pickups and vans. Fast low-cost installation available.

TELEVISION LOG OF THE INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM

Mary Hartman's Sgt. Foley is now Lanigan's Rabbi

By BOB MARTIN, TV-Radio Editor

Fans of "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" who have been wondering what became of Fernwood's most romantic cop, Sgt. Dennis Foley, are advised to tune in NBC's "Lanigan's Rabbi" from 9:30 to 11 tonight on Channel 4.

They won't find the frisky Foley, but at least they'll know what the actor who portrayed him on TV last season is up to these days.

Bruce Solomon is the name, and he stars with Art Carney in "Lanigan's Rabbi," which is making its bow as one of the rotating segments of "NBC Sunday Mystery Movie," replacing "Quincy," which has gone weekly and will air on Friday nights, starting this week.

Solomon plays Rabbi David Small, a mystery buff who loves to help small-town Police Chief Paul Lanigan (Carney) solve murders and other crimes.

From sensual sergeant to cerebral rabbi — it's quite a switch for the 33-year-old actor.

Solomon has no complaints. Indeed, he is delighted to be starring in a series on a major network and to be working with as famous a performer as Carney.

Four episodes are planned this season, and Bruce has high hopes that the show will return in the fall.

A two-hour pilot movie titled "Lanigan's Rabbi" aired on NBC last June, with Carney as Lanigan and Stuart Margolin as Rabbi Small. Margolin is a regular on NBC's "The Rockford Files," as Angel. Janis Paige and Janet Margolin (no relation to Stuart) played the wives of Lanigan and the rabbi, respectively, in the movie, and they continue in those roles in the series.

The film and the series are based on mystery novels by Harry Kemelman.

As Sgt. Foley, Solomon pursued the married Mary Hartman (Louise Lasser) throughout the first season of the nationally syndicated comedy series, and also had romantic flings with Mary's younger sister, Kathy, and Grandpa Larkin's ex-lover, Roberta — sometimes all three in the same day.

Bruce says he did about 80 episodes ("MH, MH" airs five nights a week) and points out, a bit shyly, that he received more fan mail than anyone else on the series.

"Norman Lear wanted me to sign a five-year contract, either to continue as

Sgt. Foley or for a new series he's producing, called "All That Glitters," said Solomon, "but I didn't do it. They hadn't quite decided about what to do with the Foley part in the second season."

Added the blue-eyed, curly-haired actor: "I prefer acting in something with more of a game plan. You never knew how 'Mary Hartman' would be going."

The series made him a star, at least among the people who watched "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" in its first season. "It was very popular," Bruce pointed out. "People recognize me on the streets of New York, Chicago and other places."

SOLOMON struck me as a young man who can't quite believe that he has achieved his long-time dream of being a successful actor. I wouldn't be surprised if he pinches himself once in awhile and asks, "Is this really happening to me?"

He is enjoying his success to the utmost. He is a jovial fellow, and smiled or laughed much of the time during the interview, which was conducted as we ate lunch at one of the several tables set up on the parking lot of the M&M Market on the corner of Moorpark Street and Coldwater Canyon Avenue in North Hollywood.

A scene for "Lanigan's Rabbi" was being shot inside the market that day, and catering trucks served the east and crew during the lunch break. Solomon wasn't in the scene at the market, but was to be involved in a scene at a nearby temple after lunch.

Before being cast in "MH, MH," Bruce had done only a few small parts on television in such series as "Tenasly," "Barney Miller," "Harry O" and "Streets of San Francisco."

"They were 'character' type roles," he said. "Before 'Hartman,' directors saw me as sort of a comic character, not as a leading man type."

The boyish charm and bedroom eyes of Sgt. Dennis Foley changed that.

"Are you sexy as the rabbi?" I inquired.

Before Bruce had time to answer, the young woman publicist dining with us under the sun spoke up and said: "Yes — he definitely is."

BRUCE SOLOMON ... stars in 'Lanigan's Rabbi' series

BRUCE SAID there's a light touch to his role and also Carney's.

"'Lanigan's Rabbi' isn't a rough, violent crime drama — it's a gentle show," he said. "It's a 'puzzle' mystery. The rabbi is very bright, and he likes to put the pieces together."

As to Carney, the young actor terms Art "a genius in his field."

Is he easy to work with?

"He's a dream. He's so playful. He looks upon his work as important, but not serious, if you get what I mean. A lot of people are too serious. They can make it rough on others."

How about Louise Lasser?

"I found her easy to work with — but not everyone did. I'm easygoing myself. She's a great actress. It was a thrill to work with her."

Bruce decided as a schoolboy that he wanted to be an actor. He was born in New York's Bronx, and, after he was 6, took turns living in Miami and New York (his parents were divorced). He graduated from the University of Miami, with a major in speech therapy, and taught speech therapy in Florida. Later he earned a master's degree at Wayne State University, and he taught acting and stage voice at the University of California at Berkeley in 1970-71, while working toward a Ph.D.

He left Berkeley before achieving that advanced degree, however, to pursue an acting career — first with the Firehouse Theatre in San Francisco, followed by a tour with the Barbed Wire Theatre as the only non-ex-convict in a play called "The Cage."

After a small part in the movie "The Candidate" and some TV commercials in San Francisco, he came to Hollywood a few years ago, joined an acting class and started getting some TV roles.

Now Bruce, who is divorced, is riding high in his chosen profession ("I turned down two Broadway roles this year"). He doubts he'll ever get that Ph.D.

"I've always wanted to act," he said. "Teaching was just something to do until I got the chance."

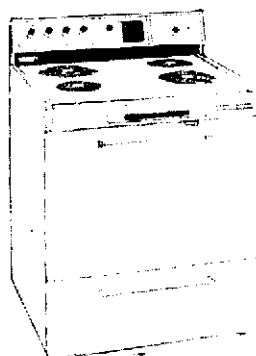

He considers lover-boy Foley and Rabbi Small similar in one way: "They both love what they're doing." You can say that about Bruce Solomon, too.

'Bandstand' to mark 25th anniversary

By TOM JORY
NEW YORK (AP) — Remember Dick Clark's first guest star the day "American Bandstand" went national? It's a long time back — 20 years and more than 8,300 live performances ago.

The date was Monday, Aug. 5, 1957, hot and sticky in Philadelphia. And it was Billy Williams singing "I'm Gonna Sit Right Down and Write Myself a Letter."

"It was an innovation, it was an atrocity, it was terrible, it was great, it was a window on the youth world, it was called everything in the world. Mostly, it was called awful," Clark remembers two decades later.

"Most adults didn't like kids to begin with, or mistrusted them, and the music was so bizarre it scared the hell out of them."

BUT WITHIN days of that first coast-to-coast telecast on ABC "American Bandstand" was an American institution. Then, it was 90 minutes a day, five days a week, live. Today, "American Bandstand" is on once a week, on Saturdays, taped.

Clark, now 47, has assembled more than 100 of the industry's big names for a two-hour special on ABC Friday night Clark calls "American Bandstand's 25th Anniversary" — it was telecast locally for five years before the network hookup — "a study of 25 years of popular music and some of the other things that went on."

Clark was a boyish-looking radio disc jockey in Philadelphia when he took over the rock 'n' roll "Bandstand" in July 1956. The show, broadcast live from WFIL-TV, was "phenomenally successful," he recalls. "We had 67 per cent of the audience in Philadelphia. We were on a limited network then, in Pennsylvania."

ABC BOUGHT the idea the next summer, and, says Clark, "I was very confident we would succeed. I was pretty sure it would catch on, though I had no idea it would last 25 years."

"American Bandstand" from coast to coast made an instant national figure of its host. "I rebel against that, 'Gee, weren't you lucky,'" says Clark, "because I'd worked nine years already. I was 26 or 27 years old, because I'd worked since I was 17 to be in Philadelphia."

"We were looking at some old films yesterday and someone was commenting, 'Gee, you were good then.' Dammit, I'd been working nine years by then. I knew what to do."

AT ITS HIGH point, "American Bandstand" had an audience of 20 million a week and it was a trend-setter for the country's teen-agers.

DICK CLARK presents "American Bandstand's 25th Anniversary" special from 9 to 11 p.m. Friday on Ch. 7. Numerous stars of the music world appear live and on clips from the past quarter-century.

"I mean, everything kids wore in Philadelphia they wore all over the United States," Clark remembers. "It was a very naive world, but there was a great deal of preplanning and knowledge of the audience that went into it. Tuning in on what their world was about and is about is the job."

"I'm 47 years old, and people say, 'How the hell do you know what's going on?' It's a whole different world. Well, it isn't. It's like a doctor or a lawyer or any other professional. You read your papers, you go to places where you got to go, you see the films they see, you listen to the music."

"The real stars were the kids who danced on the show," says Clark. "And they became so well known they drew 15,000 pieces of mail a week. That's what it was all about."

KIDS CHANGED, styles changed, music changed but the audience — at least its makeup — stayed the same.

"This show is unique in a lot of ways," says Clark, "but it's unique in that the audience composition in 1952 is within one or two percentage points of exactly the same composition it is in 1977."

"That means 25 per cent of the people who watch it are subteens, 25 per cent are teens, 50 per cent are 18 to 35 with a heavy push toward women."

Clark has had his ups and downs over the years. There was the payola scandal of 1959-60 — Clark appeared before a congressional committee but was never indicted — and he saw two marriages break up. Music changed and so did "American Bandstand."

"AND I DIDN'T like what was going on in the youth world in the late '60s. Kids who grew up in that era I don't think can ever look back and say, 'Gee, those were the good old days.' It was a very unhappy period. I said, 'I hope they wake up.' And they did."

Clark says he devotes 10 percent of his time today to "Bandstand" and "The $20,000 Pyramid," the ABC game show he emcees. Clark's own production company takes up the rest of his time.

"The faultless formulas of television, the ones that last, are so simple," he says. "I guess that's the reason they last. You couldn't sell 'Bandstand' today."

"I am absolutely convinced it was more fun then, it was more earthy, it had an essence. Today, it's very sterile. We've got to the point of perfection where you can watch and the damn thing has no heart."

THERE'S MAGIC in the list of stars for the anniversary show. Chubby Checker, and Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons, were among the dozens who took part in filming the special several weeks ago. And Clark has pulled clips of Fabian, Paul Anka, Frankie Avalon, Brenda Lee, the Everly Brothers and many, many "others" from his files.

'Tales of Unexpected' Quinn Martin's latest

Associated Press

Producer Quinn Martin, long noted for tough cop shows, doesn't see his new anthology series as a departure but as a return to his origins.

His new show, his fourth on the air, is "Quinn Martin's Tales of the Unexpected," which premieres on NBC at 10 p.m. Wednesday. (Channel 4 locally).

"It's back to Square 1," he said. "The first show I ever wrote for was 'Four Star Playhouse.' The first show I ever produced was 'The Jane Wyman Show.' The second I produced was 'Desilu Playhouse,' from which emerged 'The Untouchables.'"

IT WAS "The Untouchables" which stamped Martin with an image for two-fisted series. Such as "The Fugitive," "Dan August," "Cannon," "Man-hunter" and the current "Streets of San Francisco," "Barnaby Jones" and "Most Wanted."

"Quinn Martin's Tales of the Unexpected" — it's not often that you see a producer's name on a show — is an anthology series of terror and suspense. It came about after NBC's research computers spit out his name as the producer best known to the public.

"NBC came to me and asked, 'How do we package your name?'" he said. "I said I didn't want to do another cop show. I said I'd always wanted to do my version of Hitchcock."

MARTIN SAID "I think television in general has to renovate itself and get into departures. We can't keep giving the public the same thing."

"We tend to drive people away from television. We did it with the Westerns. We're going to do it with the cop shows. I've got the last successful definitive cop show I think we'll see in 'Most Wanted.'"

In his office at Samuel Goldwyn Studios in Hollywood, Martin sat behind a huge desk piled high with scripts. Scripts from his current series and scripts for numerous pilots and new projects he is juggling.

He said he couldn't estimate how many shows

he's working on. "You just keep the pot brewing," he said. "There are no more seasons. You submit all the time. You write all the time."

'Tales of Unexpected' Quinn Martin's latest

Associated Press

Producer Quinn Martin, long noted for tough cop shows, doesn't see his new anthology series as a departure but as a return to his origins.

His new show, his fourth on the air, is "Quinn Martin's Tales of the Unexpected," which premieres on NBC at 10 p.m. Wednesday. (Channel 4 locally).

"It's back to Square 1," he said. "The first show I ever wrote for was 'Four Star Playhouse.' The first show I ever produced was 'The Jane Wyman Show.' The second I produced was 'Desilu Playhouse,' from which emerged 'The Untouchables.'"

IT WAS "The Untouchables" which stamped Martin with an image for two-fisted series. Such as "The Fugitive," "Dan August," "Cannon," "Man-

hunter" and the current "Streets of San Francisco," "Barnaby Jones" and "Most Wanted."

"Quinn Martin's Tales of the Unexpected" — it's not often that you see a producer's name on a show — is an anthology series of terror and suspense. It came about after NBC's research computers spit out his name as the producer best known to the public.

"NBC came to me and asked, 'How do we package your name?'" he said. "I said I didn't want to do another copy show. I said I'd always wanted to do my version of Hitchcock."

MARTIN SAID "I think television in general has to renovate itself and get into departures. We can't keep giving the public the same thing."

"We tend to drive people away from television. We did it with the Western. We're going to do it with the cop shows. I've got the last successful definitive cop show I think we'll see in 'Most Wanted'."

In his office at Samuel Goldwyn Studios in Hollywood, Martin sat behind a huge desk piled high with scripts. Scripts from his current series and scripts for numerous pilots and new projects he is juggling.

He said he couldn't estimate how many shows

he's working on. "You just keep the pot brewing," he said. "There are no more seasons. You submit all the time. You write all the time."

We're Having a Quiet Little Sale.

You'll really save if you select a beautiful Blue Haven pool or health spa now—during these winter months. We want to keep our construction crews busy during this slow season so we're making very special offers on very special Blue Haven pools and health spas.

And besides the savings, our top men will be free to oversee all installation . . . assuring you the highest Blue Haven construction standards.

Call us now. Let's talk about saving you money. But shh! Keep this news to yourself. If too many people hear about it, our slow season may end up as fast as our fast season. You can imagine how we'd feel if that happened!

We're #1. And it hurts.

It doesn't care who it hurts, either. Arthritis is our nation's #1 crippler.

It can hit anyone, anywhere. Hands, legs, backs, hips, shoulders. If there's a place that can hurt, it can be ravaged by arthritis.

The only common denominator is pain. And right now, there's no cure.

Not too much is even known about arthritis, but all this week reporter Ann Martin will tell you everything we do know about it. How to spot it; where to get help, how to avoid its crippling pain when possible.

Be watching at 6 on Channel 7 for the Eyewitness Closeup, "Arthritis." Then pray you don't get it.

We're #1. And it hurts.

It doesn't care who it hurts, either. Arthritis is our nation's #1crippler. It can hit anyone, anywhere. Hands, legs, backs, hips, shoulders. If there's a place that can hurt, it can be ravaged by arthritis. The only common denominator is pain. And right now, there's no cure. Not too much is even known about arthritis, but all this week reporter Ann Martin will tell you everything we do know about it. How to spot it, where to get help, how to avoid its crippling pain when possible.

Be watching at 6 on Channel 7 for the Eyewitness Closeup, "Arthritis." Then pray you don't get it.

SPECIAL

MOVIE (4), 8:00 p.m. —
 "The Adventures of Frontier Freemont." Unsatisfied with his life as a farmer, surveyor and tinsmith in Ohio in the 1830s, Jacob Freemont sets out to become a mountain man, facing the multiple challenges of life in the wilderness and dangerous frontiersmen miles from civilization. Dan Haggerty and Denver Pyle star.

MOVIE (2), 9:00 p.m. —
 "Cage Without A Key." Trapped in a web of circumstance and coincidence, Valerie Smith, an earnest, likeable teenager, finds herself living a nightmare. Stars Susan Dey, Michael Brandon, Jonelle Allen. (Due to mature theme, viewer discretion advised.)

TALES OF THE UNEXPECTED: (4), 10:00 p.m. —
 "The Final Chapter." When investigative reporter Frank Harris has himself committed to death row under an assumed name to probe the psychological effects of the death penalty, he is shocked to discover that his jailer is a man whose reputation he has destroyed years before. Roy Thinnes and Ned Beatty star. PREMIERE.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

GOD'S LAW AND CAPITAL PUNISHMENT #2

Last week we discussed what the Old Testament's teaching was concerning this subject. This week, we want to look at what the New Testament teaches. I would point out that this is not an exhaustive study of this subject as it is taught in the Bible. However, I would be willing to defend what I believe on the subject both publically and privately.

In the New Testament we note that Paul said in 1 Tim. 1:8-9 that law is for the lawless. When Pilate said to Jesus, "Knowest thou not that I have power to release you and power to crucify you?" Jesus said, "Thou wouldest have no power against me except it were given you from above" (John 19:10-11). In Acts chapter 25:11, Paul, when he stood before Festus, said, "If I have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die." He recognized that there were crimes worthy of death, and if he had committed one of these, he would not refuse to die.

God Uses Civil Authorities To Punish

In Romans 12:19, 13:1-4 we read, "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there are no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the powers? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: For he is a minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid: for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil."

Notice the words that I have emphasized in the above passages of scripture. In the first verse we see that vengeance belongs to God. How is he going to execute His vengeance? Well, in the last verse we see that God uses civil government to punish and bring revenge on the evil doer, as the sword was a symbol of death in verse 4. How then, could one use the Bible to oppose capital punishment. I contend that he could not, successfully.

THE BIBLE Says

J. T. SMITH

GOD'S LAW AND CAPITAL PUNISHMENT #2

Last week we discussed what the Old Testament's teaching was concerning this subject. This week, we want to look at what the New Testament teaches. I would point out that this is not an exhaustive study of this subject as it is taught in the Bible. However, I would be willing to defend what I believe on the subject both publically and privately.

In the New Testament we note that Paul said in 1 Tim. 1:6-9 that law is for the lawless. When Pilate said to Jesus, "Knowest thou not that I have power to release you and power to crucify you?" Jesus said, "Thou wouldest have no power against me except it were given you from above" (John 19:10-11). In Acts chapter 25:11, Paul, when he stood before Festus, said, "If I have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die." He recognized that there were crimes worthy of death, and if he had committed one of these, he would not refuse to die.

God Uses Civil Authorities To Punish

In Romans 12:19, 13:1-4 we read, "Dearly beloved, avenge not yourselves, but rather give place unto wrath: for it is written, Vengeance is mine; I will repay, saith the Lord. Let every soul be subject unto the higher powers. For there are no power but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power, resisteth the ordinance of God: and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the powers? do that which is good, and thou shall have praise of the same: For he is a minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil."

Notice the words that I have emphasized in the above passages of scripture. In the first verse we see that vengeance belongs to God. How is he going to execute His vengeance? Well, in the last verse we see that God uses civil government to punish and bring revenge on the evil doer, as the sword was a symbol of death in verse 4. How then, could one use the Bible to oppose capital punishment. I contend that he could not, successfully.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Want informed opinion? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. Now that Henry Kissinger is no longer Secretary of State, can we find out the true story of the wiretaps he was instrumental in having placed on his colleagues and friends?—E. D., Bethesda, Md.

A. Kissinger, of course, is ashamed of the wiretapping episodes, which took place from 1969 to 1971. He has said repeatedly that he regretted ever having been part of them. In 1969, however, he was "a new boy" in the Nixon Administration and was currying favor with Nixon. He was fearful of John Ehrlichman and Bob Halde- man, and so he adopted the Nixonian phobias and suspicions of the time.

Among the names he provided to the FBI for wire- tapping and surveillance purposes were those of sev- eral men he had hired for the staff of the National Security Council, including Morton Halperin, Helmut Sonnenfeldt, Daniel Davidson, Winston Lord, Rich- ard Moose, Richard Schneider and Anthony Lake. Others included Lt. Gen. Robert Pursley, a military assistant to Melvin Laird, Nixon's Defense Secretary; William Safire, a Nixon speechwriter; William H. Sullivan, former U.S. Ambassador to Laos; Henry Brandon, Washington correspondent for the Sunday Times of London, and Hedrick Smith of The New York Times. Wiretaps on Marvin Kalb of CBS, William Beecher, then of The New York Times, and John Sears, a Nixon campaign aide, were ordered by John Mitchell.

The wiretaps were fruitless. None of the men wire- tapped revealed national security secrets. Recently a federal judge ordered Richard Nixon, John Mitchell and Bob Haldeman to pay damages (the amount not yet ascertained at this writing) to Morton Halperin and his family for having maintained wiretaps on their conversations.

A book which describes the wiretapping episodes in detail is The American Police State by David Wise (published by Random House).

Q. The present version of "King Kong" cost approxi- mately $23 million to make. My understanding is that producer Dino De Laurentiis and Paramount Pictures have to give Universal Studios 11 percent of their profits. Why is that?—Maurice Blitzstein, Chicago.

A. Because Universal agreed to cancel its own "King Kong" production plans.

Q. In 1975 Eli Black, who was head of United Brands Co., leaped to his death from the 44th floor of the Pan American Building in New York City. Has the true story of Black's management and corporate raid- ing ever been told?—M.P., New Rochelle, N.Y.

A. For the inside story of Eli Black and United Brands, read "An American Company" by Thomas McCann. It gives a sad, sorry and full account of what Black and United Fruit, the world's largest producer and seller of bananas, did to Central America. United Fruit is a division of United Brands, was involved with the CIA in mounting a secret invasion of Guatemala and a lot of other shocking and unsavory deeds.

Q. Amy Carter, 9, is the first child of a U.S. President to attend a public school in 70 years. What is the racial breakdown of the Stevens School little Amy at- tends in Washington, D.C.?—Joan Manley, New York City.

A. About 60 percent of the students are black, about 30 percent were born abroad and are the offspring of diplomats and other foreigners.

9-YEAR-OLD DAUGHTER AMY WITH THE FIRST LADY

Q. I have been told that Jack Nicholson is rapidly becoming the richest actor in the motion picture business, that he is now worth $50 million. How much did he earn from "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest"?—Arlene Mae Watkins, Philadelphia.

A. Nicholson earns a minimum of $1 million per film plus a hefty percentage of the film's gross. He gets 15 percent of "Cuckoo's" gross, which should bring him about $15 million. The richest actor in the mo- tion picture business is Bob Hope, whose fortune is estimated at above $100 million. But such actors as Steve McQueen, Paul Newman, Robert Redford, Marlon Brando and Jack Nicholson are rapidly ap- proaching Hope's record.

TIM LEE CARTER

LAWRENCE P. McDONALD

Q. How many medical doctors ran for national office in last year's election? How did they make out? What office did Dr. Benjamin Spock run for?—Jack Mc- Millan, Orlando, Fla.

A. Dr. Benjamin Spock ran for Vice President of the U.S. on the People's Party ticket. He lost. Twenty-five other MD's ran for national office, and 23 lost. The two victorious physicians are members of the House of Representatives: Dr. Tim Lee Carter (R., Ky.), who won his seventh term; and Dr. Lawrence P. McDona- ld (D., Ga.), a Marietta urologist and member of the John Birch Society, who was returned for a sec- ond term.

Q. I would like to know if "Robinson Crusoe," the classic by Daniel Defoe, was based on a true-life story. Thank you.—Owen Johnson, Watertown, N.Y.

A. "Robinson Crusoe" is based on the real-life ad- ventures of Alexander Selkirk, a Scottish navigator who cast himself away on the Chilean island of Juan Fernandez for 52 months. He was rescued by Capt. Woodes Rogers in 1709 and written up by the cap- tain in "Cruising Voyage Round the World" in 1712.

Q. Indira Gandhi, Prime Minister of India, claims she is bringing "guided democracy" to her coun- try. Is "guided democ- racy" a new synonym for dictatorship?—Jean Tay- lor, Winston-Salem, N.C.

A. India is drowning in a sea of overpopulation. In- dira Gandhi has become a despot—some people say "a benevolent despot"—in an effort to keep her country afloat. Democracy in India may well be a thing of the past. "Guided democracy," of course, is no synonym for dictatorship.

Marlene Dietrich At 75-

The World's Most Glamorous Great-Grandmother

by Lloyd Shearer

The old gal still has what it takes: Marlene Dietrich at a recent one-woman performance projects the glamour and mystery associated with her legendary career.

PARIS, FRANCE.

Marlene Dietrich—aged 72 according to herself and aged 75 according to the municipal authorities in Berlin, who insist she was born on Dec. 27, 1901—is hard at work here on her memoirs.

She is writing an as-yet-untitled autobiography in her four-room apartment on the Avenue Montaigne.

The New York publishing house of G.P. Putnam's Sons, a subsidiary of the giant show business corporation MCA, has paid the actress a $200,000 advance and says the book will not be released until 1978 "because Miss Dietrich is writing every word of it herself."

Other publishers have made similar claims about autobiographies, only to have them rescued, restructured and rewritten in the end by professional writers.

Miss Dietrich has bewitched many writers in her lengthy life—two in particular, Ernest Hemingway and Erich Maria Remarque—but she has outlived them all. She has become a legend of her century, recognized now as The World's Most Glamorous Great-Grandmother, a title she despises.

Marlene Dietrich is the mother of Maria Riva, 51 (wife of set and toy designer William Riva), the grandmother of John Michael Riva, 29; John Peter Riva, 25; John Paul Riva, 18, and John David Riva, 15, and the great-grandmother of John Matthew Riva, born in London a few weeks ago to John Peter and Sandra Riva.

Her progeny love and admire her—she has been most generous to all of them—but they respect her privacy and steadfastly refuse to discuss her, especially with reporters, a breed she accuses of "specializing in asking me idiotic questions."

Newsmen who called upon her here recently were told: "If you want to ask me any questions, you should write me a letter, and I may answer."

Where the press is concerned, that's Dietrich at her mildest. Three Januarys ago, when CBS paid her upward of $250,000 to telecast her TV debut previously taped before a London audience, the network flew in a flock of reporters to publicize the program. Dietrich's reaction: "They must have been the dumbest people in America. I have never heard such stupid questions."

Dietrich classifies most questions concerning her age, looks, family or the men in her life as "moronic," "idiotic" or "stupid."

"Age! Age!" she once exclaimed. "Why is it only me they ask?" On another occasion, a young woman reporter shifted her conversational gears to the subject of plastic surgery. Suddenly and scornfully Dietrich lifted her hair, demanded that the reporter examine her hair- and ear-lines for the slightest trace of surgery. The reporter found none.

Legs Dietrich as the sultry, heartless cabaret singer in "The Blue Angel," a German film directed by von Sternberg that set her on road to stardom and world renown.

Legs Dietrich as the sultry, heartless cabaret singer in "The Blue Angel," a German film directed by von Sternberg that set her on road-to-stardom and world renown.

Marlene Dietrich with French actor Jean Gabin in 1942. He was the great love of her life and their liaison endured from 1940 to 1946. She's writing an autobiography and it may tell about all the famous men who loved her.

Presumably, Dietrich has suffered from a weakness or dysfunction of the middle ear which causes her to lose her balance. She has been falling off stages for years—in 1936 in Denham Studio in England, in 1973 from a revolving stage in Washington and in 1975 from Her Majesty's Theatre in Sydney, Australia, in which fall she broke her left leg. Reportedly, she keeps a wheelchair in both her Paris and New York apartments and has been known to use one at airports. When she does, however, she makes certain no photographers are within focusing range.

Holds on to image

In short, Marlene Dietrich is a lovely old lady who seeks to preserve the public image of glamour tinged with mystery that has surrounded her for decades.

She was born in Berlin to Louis Dietrich, a police lieutenant and former army officer, and his wife, Josephine (Felsing) Dietrich, daughter of a watchmaker. Phony biographies, conjured up by studio publicists and reinforced by her own flair for the fictional, hold that Dietrich was discovered by the late film director Josef von Sternberg, who cast her opposite Emil Jannings in The Blue Angel.

The truth is somewhat different. She studied acting under Berthold Held, who worked for Max Reinhardt. She was one of his two private pupils and none too promising. She also studied the violin at the Music Conservatory in Weimar, subsequently obtained bit parts in plays and films and was auditioned in 1923 by Rudolf Sieber, a casting director at the old UFA film studios in Berlin. Sieber got her an extra's job and also fell in love with her.

Next he cast her as a monocled flirt in The Tragedy of Love with Emil Jannings. Rudy Sieber and Marlene Dietrich were wed May 13, 1924. The next year she gave birth to their only child, Maria.

Five years later Josef von Sternberg, who had come to Berlin from Hollywood to direct The Blue Angel, caught Dietrich in a musical play, Zwei Kravatten (Two Neckties). She projected the necessary amorality and sexuality he was searching for in an actress to play the cold-hearted role of Lola-Lola opposite Emil Jannings.

Von Sternberg went backstage to talk to Dietrich, but she tried to dissuade him from hiring her. She generated hauteur but seemed to lack inner confidence. In any event, von Sternberg signed her and simultaneously shot German and English versions of The Blue Angel in six weeks. In Berlin the picture was a smash hit, and on March 31, 1930, Dietrich boarded the S.S. Bremen, bound for New York.

In Hollywood, Paramount Pictures advised her to say nothing of her husband and daughter and to give her age as 18. Soon the actress, lonely and unhappy, found herself caught up in the Hollywood gossipmongery.

A suit and flight

When von Sternberg's wife Rita sued her for alienation of affections and von Sternberg for divorce, Dietrich fled Hollywood and returned to Germany. When next she journeyed to Hollywood, Dietrich made certain her husband and daughter accompanied her.

As she starred in more films for Paramount—Morocco, Dishonored, Song of Songs, The Scarlet Empress, The Devil Is a Woman and Desire—Hollywood whispered about her and Maurice Chevalier, Brian Aherne, John Gilbert. Later, other men were mentioned: Ernest Hemingway, Erich Maria Remarque, James Stewart—and French actor Jean Gabin, who was probably the great love of her life.

On the walls of Dietrich's apartment here hang portraits of three men: Jean Gabin, Ernest Hemingway and Alexander Fleming, one of the discoverers of penicillin.

Gabin's 'Prussian'

The Gabin-Dietrich wartime liaison is an affair of which only Dietrich knows the entire truth. Gabin, who died last year, was deeply in love with Dietrich and she, presumably, with him. But in 1946, after wasting their talents in a French flop, Martin Roumagnac (retitled The Room Upstairs for American audiences), the couple separated. A few weeks later Gabin married Dominique, a Lanvin model, then announced that he would never mention Dietrich's name again or speak of their 1940-46 period of togetherness. On occasion—if he had to—he later referred to her as "The Prussian," but never saw her again. What had she said or done to him?

Perhaps Dietrich will write the true story of Gabin and also of her husband, Rudolf Sieber, who took a mistress named Tamara and raised chickens in the San Fernando Valley for 30-odd years. Like Gabin, Sieber died last year. Death had earlier claimed von Sternberg and Remarque, another pair who tugged at Dietrich's heart and stimulated her brain.

In 75 years Marlene Dietrich has traveled the world, engraved her name on the tablet of the Hollywood greats. She has loved deeply and been deeply loved in return. She has lived long and well, and if her pen captures only the highlights of her rich and full life, then surely her memoirs should prove a bargain whatever the price.

1941: Marlene with husband Rudolf Sieber, who died last year. They stayed married 52 years despite her other love affairs.

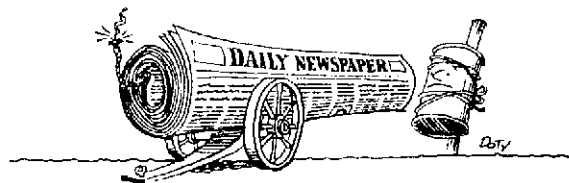

With her daughter Maria Riva—also an actress—in 1954. Marlene enjoys her four grown grandsons and baby great-grandson.

Sharks revisited. Some time ago, we ran a column about certain shark-like newsmen who snap at the oil industry without too much regard for the facts. Later, we praised the conscientious newshounds who take time to do a professional job and report on our industry fairly (even if not always to our liking). Unfortunately, irresponsible reporting seems to be on the rise again.

Second offense. In our first column on press sharks, we cast a barbed hook at a $2.5 billion inaccuracy of columnist Jack Anderson. Now he's back jawing at the industry in general, and at Mobil in particular. In a column claiming that Washington is eager to give the oil industry its way, Anderson cited several "examples" of how federal regulators granted oil companies special waivers of existing rules. But examination of the "examples" reveals that one agency—the Federal Trade Commission—refused to grant the favor the industry was supposed to have sought, while spokesmen for two other government departments are quoted as denying his charges. So where are the "favors"? And where is the industry's vaunted "clout"? It's a figment of Mr. Anderson's typewriter.

Wrong about us. In the same column, Anderson wrote: "Mobil tried to get the Interstate Commerce Commission to lift the profit ceiling quietly on offshore oil pipeline operations. . . the ICC refused to deal with Mobil on the QT and directed the company to go through regular, open channels." To which we say, nonsense. Mr. Anderson apparently got his hands on a one-year-old letter we wrote to ICC Chairman George Stafford in which we did not ask for any special treatment. Rather we pointed out that the low rate of return the ICC regularly allows for pipelines was unrealistic for some offshore lines which serve a particular field and become useless as the field is depleted. We tried to draw attention to the danger that traditional low rates of return would jeopardize future pipeline construction. Contrary to Mr. Anderson's charge, the ICC thanked us for bringing this matter to its attention. Besides, it's hardly clandestine to write the truth to a public official. Please, Mr. A.—stop snapping at the wind.

Muddled water. Syndicated columnist Harnet Van Horne recently wrote about the "contrived" oil shortage of 1974, blamed it vaguely on the "oil cartel," and then went on to suggest federal curbs on the oil companies. Come on, Ms. Van Horne, if by "cartel" you mean the producing countries that raised prices in 1973 and 1974, we can't argue. But how would stepping down the U.S. companies weaken the grip of these producing nations? Even Senator Church's Subcommittee on Multinational Corporations noted that oil companies helped soften the effects of the 1973-74 embargo and production cutbacks by redistributing global supplies. And if you meant that the "cartel" was comprised of oil companies, you're just plain wrong.

Jungle journey. Voracious ants. Electric eels. Crocodiles. Jaguars. Disease-carrying insects. All of these obstacles had to be overcome when Alexander von Humboldt, the "father of geography," traveled the length of Venezuela's treacherous Orinoco River in 1800. His story, filmed on location, is the next episode of Ten Who Dared, the "Mobil Showcase" documentary series on great explorers. Check your local TV listings for the time and station.

What Hospitals Are Doing To Meet Women's Special Needs

by Lawrence Galton

In a small community hospital in Tennessee, a woman is in labor, her child overdue. Quietly, nurses place two wires in the birth canal—one to measure the mother's contractions, the other, attached to the fetal scalp, to measure the unborn baby's pulse. The wires lead to an electronic monitor which is hooked up by telephone to Vanderbilt University Hospital 50 miles away in Nashville. There, special nurses watch a running record of the unborn baby's condition. Spotting a change, they summon a specialist physician who quickly determines that the baby is beginning to strangle—the umbilical cord is pinching off blood. Within minutes, the small hospital is alerted, and without delay a somewhat blue but healthy infant is delivered by cesarean.

- Of the more than 12 million women who use the Pill, a small number develop thromboembolism, a potentially deadly blood clot. Every Pill user would be greatly relieved if it were possible to determine which women are at risk. At New York University Medical Center, Dr. Stanford Wessler has found a promising blood test that measures for an ant clotting blood factor, Antithrombin III. With the test, doctors can now pick out those at risk and advise them to discontinue the Pill or, if they continue on it, give them medication to reduce the chance of dangerous clotting.

- The Pap smear test is invaluable in screening for gynecological cancer. But the only way to verify an abnormal Pap smear has been to perform a biopsy, an operative procedure with a 10 to 12 percent rate of hemorrhaging or other complications. Colposcopy, a new technique that uses an instrument with three-dimensional magnifying lenses for direct examination of tissues, greatly reduces the need for biopsy and accompanying hospitalization. Colposcopy can be done as an outpatient procedure, and in a matter of minutes the patient can return home. Today, a network of hospital clinics using colposcopy is being established across the country, thanks in large part to the work of Dr. Adolf Staff of the Medical College of Wisconsin, Milwaukee, who has trained 600 physicians in its use.

Today, in more and more hospitals, the special needs of women are receiving more attention than ever before.

"To a large extent, health care means women's care," says John Alexander McMahon, president of the American Hospital Association. "The number of females discharged from hospitals each year exceeds males by over six million."

Recent surveys by the association have been establishing what women want and need most, and hospitals have responded with a whole series of innovations, many of them dramatic.

PREGNANCY AND BIRTH: At Saint John's Hospital and Health Center, Santa Monica, Cal., when difficulties arise late in pregnancy, an oxytocin challenge test is used. By vein, a mother receives oxytocin, a drug similar to a body chemical, in quantities sufficient to produce contractions but not full labor. Simultaneously, an external monitor records the fetus' heart rate and the uterine contractions.

Says Dr. James Moran of Saint John's: "It's one of the most valuable obstetrical tools I've seen. We know right away whether the baby is healthy and if he will survive a full-term delivery. When mild contractions are started via oxytocin and the fetus develops an abnormal heart-rate pattern, the attending physician can make a decision to deliver the baby right away or perform a cesarean section. When this happens, we save the life of a baby."

At Long Island Jewish Hospital-Hillside Medical Center, fetal monitoring begins as soon as a pregnant woman is admitted to the labor room. If the unborn baby's heart shows a pattern of faltering or irregularity, a tiny drop of blood is drawn from the fetal scalp and tested. Increased acidity in the blood indicates that the baby is not getting adequate oxygen, a condition that could produce brain damage or neurological problems such as cerebral palsy. Speedy delivery is essential and is under way in less than five minutes. The combination of fetal monitoring and scalp blood testing is seen as a major step toward assuring newborns a maximum chance for healthy, normal lives.

Marlene Dietrich with French actor Jean Gabin in 1942. He was the great love of her life and their liaison endured from 1940 to 1946. She's writing an autobiography and it may tell about all the famous men who loved her.

Presumably, Dietrich has suffered from a weakness or dysfunction of the middle ear which causes her to lose her balance. She has been falling off stages for years—in 1936 in Denham Studio in England, in 1973 from a revolving stage in Washington and in 1975 from Her Majesty's Theatre in Sydney, Australia, in which fall she broke her left leg. Reportedly, she keeps a wheelchair in both her Paris and New York apartments and has been known to use one at airports. When she does, however, she makes certain no photographers are within focusing range.

Holds on to image

In short, Marlene Dietrich is a lovely old lady who seeks to preserve the public image of glamour tinged with mystery that has surrounded her for decades.

She was born in Berlin to Louis Dietrich, a police lieutenant and former army officer, and his wife, Josephine (Felsing) Dietrich, daughter of a watchmaker. Phony biographies, conjured up by studio publicists and reinforced by her own flair for the fictional, hold that Dietrich was discovered by the late film director Josef von Sternberg, who cast her opposite Emil Jannings in The Blue Angel.

The truth is somewhat different. She studied acting under Berthold Held, who worked for Max Reinhardt. She was one of his two private pupils and none too promising. She also studied the violin at the Music Conservatory in Weimar, subsequently obtained bit parts in plays and films and was auditioned in 1923 by Rudolf Sieber, a casting director at the old UFA film studios in Berlin. Sieber got her an extra's job and also fell in love with her.

Next he cast her as a monocled flirt in The Tragedy of Love with Emil Jannings. Rudy Sieber and Marlene Dietrich were wed May 13, 1924. The next year she gave birth to their only child, Maria.

Five years later Josef von Sternberg, who had come to Berlin from Hollywood to direct The Blue Angel, caught Dietrich in a musical play, Zwei Kravatten (Two Neckties). Fetal monitoring at Long Island Jewish—Hillside Medical Center. Nurse checks sensors on Cathy Vitek's abdomen as husband Robert watches graph recording uterine contractions and fetal heartbeat.

Throughout the country, special high-risk pregnancy clinics are beginning to appear. Many factors determine whether a pregnancy is high risk. Some may arise during the course of pregnancy; others, such as high blood pressure, diabetes or kidney disease, are brought to the pregnancy.

At Saint Francis Hospital in Hartford, Conn., a high-risk patient is admitted for a thorough one-day review of her pregnancy. Her blood pressure is monitored repeatedly; blood, urine and metabolic studies are performed; fetal growth and development are checked by passing a beam of sound through the mother's abdomen. Test results are phoned to her doctor that night.

According to Dr. John M. Gibbons Jr., director of the Saint Francis Department of Obstetrics, most women followed closely in the High-Risk Clinic have given birth to healthy babies.

CARE FOR THE NEWBORN: All told, there are now 2145 nurseries for premature babies in U. S. hospitals, reducing infant mortality by a third of what it was 15 years ago. New postnatal techniques—for both prematures and full-term infants—promise to cut the mortality rate further.

Some premature infants experience apneic spells, during which their breathing stops briefly. At Stanford Medical Center, Palo Alto, Cal., placing the babies in gently vibrating waterbeds has been found to greatly reduce apneic episodes.

Respiratory distress syndrome, or hyaline membrane disease, which afflicts some premature babies from birth, makes it almost impossible for them to breathe adequately and proves fatal to about 50 percent of those afflicted. A new treatment in which the infant's blood is exchanged for fresh adult blood, pioneered at the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, is now saving 86 percent of afflicted children.

Many prematures with respiratory distress also have a congenital heart defect, patent ductus arteriosus, previously corrected by open-chest surgery. Now, at the University of California Medical Center, San Diego, Dr. William F. Friedman and colleagues have found that a single dose of indomethacin, a drug often used for arthritis, overcomes the defect within 24 hours, with no need for surgery.

Full-term babies, too, may have problems. Some cannot live without mother's milk; for them, formulas are totally inadequate. Yet some mothers are unable to produce milk for their sick infants. At the Wilmington, Del., Medical Center, a Mother's Milk Bank collects extra milk from volunteer nursing mothers, processes it, and ships it anywhere in the country if prescribed by a physician.

BUG SALE!

Unmatchable savings during our first pre-season sale ever! This offer expires March 31, and quantities may be limited.

AQUABUG!

Now you can own an authentic 11 pound AquaBug, the best-selling ultralight outboard in the world, for only $149.95! That's significantly less than the cost of outboards that sort of look like an authentic AquaBug... but aren't. Yet not one of them runs more powerfully, trolls better, weighs less, runs quieter, burns less fuel, or is guaranteed as well as an AquaBug. An AquaBug is now $125 less expensive than Evinrude and Johnson's 24 pound, 2 hp motor!

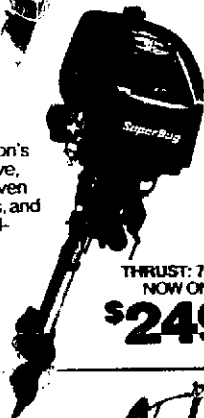

THRUST: 35 LBS.
NOW ONLY

$149⁹⁵

SUPERBUG!

SuperBugs for only $249.95! This 18 pound outboard runs as powerfully as Evinrude and Johnson's 32 pound, 4 hp motor, has features they don't have, and is an astonishing $165 less expensive. (It's even lighter and less expensive than their 2 hp motors, and is twice as fast!) It easily handles 2000 pound sailboats up to 21 feet long. All our motors are guaranteed for a full year.

THRUST: 70 LBS.
NOW ONLY

$249⁹⁵

BIKEBUG!

The BikeBug engine bolts in minutes to any bike you own, from 10 speeders to adult tricycles, and creates a motorized bike that still pedals beautifully when you want to. The BikeBug and your bike are equal or superior to motorized bikes that cost up to $800! Completely automatic from choke to transmission, it starts itself, and even turns itself off during a sudden stop. It goes 16 MPH, governor on, to 24 MPH, governor off, and gets up to 300 MPG. It's only $199.95, and is guaranteed for a full year... motorized bikes costing four times as much are guaranteed for only 90 days!

HOSPITALS CONTINUED

SIMPLE STERILIZATION: Many women would prefer a simple, safe, permanent method of sterilization that would eliminate need for the Pill or other contraception. Now a tiny spring clip to tie off the fallopian tubes can be inserted, under local anesthesia, through an abdominal incision as small as a fingernail. Developed at the University of North Carolina by Dr. J. F. Hulka, the clip has been used successfully by more than 1000 women and is now going into use in hospitals.

Reports Dr. George Huggins of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, one of the institutions using it: "For women who are seeking a permanent method of birth control, this technique is both safe and reliable. A woman can return to her family and her normal activities within 24 hours after surgery."

The clip may have another important value. Animal studies show that, when desired, it can be removed and fertility restored.

INFERTILITY: Two areas of concern for many women are inability to conceive

—a problem for about 10 percent—and menstrual disturbances. Hospitals are beginning to set up special clinics to help women with such problems.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., the State University Hospital has both an Infertility Clinic and a Menstrual Disorders Clinic.

Infertility can be glandular in origin, or it can result from nonhormonal problems such as pelvic infections and disorders of the uterus, ovaries or fallopian tubes. The Infertility Clinic deals with the nonhormonal difficulties, using medical and surgical techniques to overcome them.

The Menstrual Disorders Clinic deals with problems—including infertility—related to glandular dysfunctions. There, many women, unable to conceive for years because of inability to ovulate, have achieved pregnancy.

The clinic has also had success in helping women with problems of excessive bleeding, absence of periods, painful periods, excessive hair growth, persistent milk production, and hypogonadism, with its failure to develop sexual characteristics such as breasts.

CANCER: Efforts to detect cancer in women in earlier, curable stages are being intensified by many hospitals.

Dr. Anneliese F. Korner of Stanford Medical Center inspects premature baby placed on vibrating waterbed to prevent apneic spells (temporary cessation of breathing).

Friedman and colleagues have found that a single dose of indomethacin, a drug often used for arthritis, overcomes the defect within 24 hours, with no need for surgery.

Full-term babies, too, may have problems. Some cannot live without mother's milk; for them, formulas are totally inadequate. Yet some mothers are unable to produce milk for their sick infants. At the Wilmington, Del., Medical Center, a Mother's Milk Bank collects extra milk from volunteer nursing mothers, processes it, and ships it anywhere in the country if prescribed by a physician.

BUG SALE!

Unmatchable savings during our first pre-season sale ever! This offer expires March 31, and quantities may be limited.

AQUABUG!

Now you can own an authentic 11 pound AquaBug, the best-selling ultralight outboard in the world, for only $149.95! That's significantly less than the cost of outboards that sort of look like an authentic AquaBug... but aren't. Yet not one of them runs more powerfully, trolls better, weighs less, runs quieter, burns less fuel, or is guaranteed as well as an AquaBug. An AquaBug is now $125 less expensive than Evinrude and Johnson's 24 pound, 2 hp motor!

THRUST: 35 LBS.
NOW ONLY

$149⁹⁵

SUPERBUG!

SuperBugs for only $249.95! This 18 pound outboard runs as powerfully as Evinrude and Johnson's 32 pound, 4 hp motor, has features they don't have, and is an astonishing $165 less expensive. (It's even lighter and less expensive than their 2 hp motors, and is twice as fast!) It easily handles 2000 pound sailboats up to 21 feet long. All our motors are guaranteed for a full year.

THRUST: 70 LBS.
NOW ONLY

$249⁹⁵

BIKEBUG!

The BikeBug engine bolts in minutes to any bike you own, from 10 speeders to adult tricycles, and creates a motorized bike that still pedals beautifully when you want to. The BikeBug and your bike are equal or superior to motorized bikes that cost up to $800! Completely automatic from choke to transmission, it starts itself, and even turns itself off during a sudden stop. It goes 16 MPH, governor on, to 24 MPH, governor off, and gets up to 300 MPG. It's only $199.95, and is guaranteed for a full year... motorized bikes costing four times as much are guaranteed for only 90 days!

11 LBS. ONLY

SIMPLE STERILIZATION: Many women would prefer a simple, safe, permanent method of sterilization that would eliminate need for the Pill or other contraception. Now a tiny spring clip to tie off the fallopian tubes can be inserted, under local anesthesia, through an abdominal incision as small as a fingernail. Developed at the University of North Carolina by Dr. J. F. Hulka, the clip has been used successfully by more than 1000 women and is now going into use in hospitals.

Reports Dr. George Huggins of the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania, one of the institutions using it: "For women who are seeking a permanent method of birth control, this technique is both safe and reliable. A woman can return to her family and her normal activities within 24 hours after surgery."

The clip may have another important value. Animal studies show that, when desired, it can be removed and fertility restored.

INFERTILITY: Two areas of concern for many women are inability to conceive

—a problem for about 10 percent—and menstrual disturbances. Hospitals are beginning to set up special clinics to help women with such problems.

In Brooklyn, N. Y., the State University Hospital has both an Infertility Clinic and a Menstrual Disorders Clinic.

Infertility can be glandular in origin, or it can result from nonhormonal problems such as pelvic infections and disorders of the uterus, ovaries or fallopian tubes. The Infertility Clinic deals with the nonhormonal difficulties, using medical and surgical techniques to overcome them.

The Menstrual Disorders Clinic deals with problems—including infertility—related to glandular dysfunctions. There, many women, unable to conceive for years because of inability to ovulate, have achieved pregnancy.

The clinic has also had success in helping women with problems of excessive bleeding, absence of periods, painful periods, excessive hair growth, persistent milk production, and hypogonadism, with its failure to develop sexual characteristics such as breasts.

CANCER: Efforts to detect cancer in women in earlier, curable stages are being intensified by many hospitals.

Dr. Anneliese F. Kerner of Stanford Medical Center inspects premature baby placed on vibrating waterbed to prevent apneic spells (temporary cessation of breathing).

Relatives of heart attack patients get vital information in conferences with staff at Mercy Hospital, Rockville Centre, N.Y.

In the Washington, D.C., area, Georgetown University Medical Center now operates a free breast cancer screening center which screens 10,000 women a year using multiple techniques including physical examination, zero-mammography (soft-tissue X-ray) and thermography (measuring skin temperature).

Because of a shortage of trained cytologists to check Pap smears for abnormalities, the University of Chicago Hospital is performing this service for other hospitals through a system that transmits smear data via telephone to a TV diagnosis monitor.

Hospitals now use the colposcopy technique for the daughters of women who received the drug DES (diethylstilbestrol) years ago during pregnancy in the hope it would avert miscarriage.

Many of those daughters, now young women, have developed cervical and vaginal abnormalities, which they fear presage cancer. But this is not necessarily so. What is needed, authorities believe, is not treatment but regular checks, in which colposcopy can help.

At Boston's Beth Israel Hospital doctors have hooked up a color TV camera to the colposcope. They realized that, despite the reassurances they gave, their young women patients couldn't help but imagine the worst. Now, able to see exactly what their doctors see, they have confidence.

NEED FOR INFORMATION: One of their most pressing needs, many women report, is for complete and helpful information when they or their loved ones are patients.

More than 3000 hospitals are now conducting health education programs for patients with such disorders as heart failure, high blood pressure, stroke, diabetes and hemophilia.

Mercy Hospital in Rockville Centre, N. Y., is one of the first in the U. S. to develop a Family Conference Group for relatives of heart patients. Once a week, families meet with and question nurses and psychiatric specialists on how best to live with and help a heart patient.

Many hospitals now have special education programs for children, both before and after admission for medical or surgical reasons.

Hospitals today are also undertaking to help women cope with rape emotionally and overcome embarrassment in reporting it. Throughout the country, hospital-based rape crisis centers and rape hotlines are springing up. They provide psychological counseling as well as medical help.

"The physical and psychological health of the American woman," says the Hospital Association's McMahon, "is an ever-growing concern for hospitals." To no small extent, this may be due to women themselves and their drive to be better served and better informed.

A GENUINE GOLD PIECE
THE SIZE OF A U.S. QUARTER

The Official Gold Inaugural Medal of the Presidential Collectors Society

Now you can own this limited edition gold piece, honoring America's newest president. Once sold out, it will never be offered again. Therefore, this commemorative could become a valuable collectors' item, as well as a cherished keepsake of this important event in our nation's history.

Generously sized, it is the same diameter as a United States quarter dollar. A strikingly beautiful gold piece, with proof-like mirror finish, minted in genuine 10K gold. The obverse side features a portrait of President Carter, reproduced from a sculptured bust commissioned by the Presidential Collectors Society, as their exclusive design.

Attractively packaged in a clear presentation case, this medallion is set in rich velvet, inscribed in 24K gold print.

In honor of this momentous day, the first gold medallion to be struck from the dies will be presented to President Carter as his keepsake of the most important occasion in his life.

Because this gold piece is produced as a limited edition, only one person in a thousand will have the opportunity to own one. Therefore, we must limit orders to 3 per person. We suggest that you order early so that you won't be disappointed.

- Genuine 10K gold...not "gold filled" or "gold plated".
- Included with each medallion is a serial numbered Certificate of Authenticity.
- Sold on a 30 day money back guarantee.

For faster delivery on BankAmericard, Master Charge or American Express orders, you may phone in your order to our toll-free WATS line (all states except Calif.): 1-800-423-2608.

chicken FOR COMPANY

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

Chicken is so versatile that there seems no end to the delightful ways it can be prepared. Chicken Chablis with Green Noodles is a case in point. It is fine enough for a company dinner, with unforgettable flavor. As a bonus, the leftover broth and unused chicken skin and bones provide the base for a flavorful soup or stew.

For a gala dinner, begin with cranberry juice cocktail. Accompany the chicken with candied carrots and an endive salad with blue cheese dressing. For dessert, serve chocolate ice cream with crushed peanut brittle.

chicken chablis with GREEN NOODLES

- 2 frying chickens, cut up
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 3 tablespoons flour
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon salt
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon paprika
- 1 tablespoon minced dried onion
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon dried sweet bell peppers
- 1 tablespoon dried parsley
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon Tabasco
- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

- $\frac{1}{2}$ teaspoon celery salt
- $\frac{1}{4}$ teaspoon powdered oregano
- 1 cup chablis
- 1 cup light cream
- 1 pound mushrooms
- 1 package (10 ounces) frozen baby green lima beans, cooked
- Cooked green noodles

Simmer chicken until tender in enough water to cover. Reserve one cup broth; strain. Remove skin and bones from meaty portions; leave meat in fairly large pieces.

Melt butter; blend in flour, salt and paprika. Add next seven ingredients; mix well. Combine reserved chicken broth and chablis; add. Cook and stir over low heat until sauce is smooth and thickened. Cool. Stir in cream.

Sauté mushroom caps in additional butter or margarine until tender and golden brown. Combine mushrooms, sauce, lima beans and chicken. Serve over hot green noodles. Makes eight servings.

MIGRATION TRENDS

Projections by the National Planning Association reveal a continuing shift of this nation's population to the South and the West.

Between now and 1990, Florida, Arizona and Nevada are expected to experience population increases of more than 50%. The Southwest is projected as the premier growth region of the country.

The fastest-growing metropolitan areas are Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., with an expected population increase of 70%; Tampa, Fla., and Phoenix, Ariz., with anticipated increases of 40% or more; and Anaheim and San Diego, Cal., with projected population increases of about 33%.

By 1990 the largest metropolitan areas in the country will be these:

City	Population
New York	9,650,300
Chicago	7,446,700
Los Angeles	7,172,600
Philadelphia	5,007,100
Detroit	4,549,400

TOYOTA MADE IN U.S. BY '78

Toyota Sales plans to start producing automobiles in the U.S. around 1978. That's when the company expects its annual exports to the U.S. to exceed 500,000 vehicles. Sadazo Yamamoto, vice president of Toyota Sales, says that 500,000 units is probably the permissible ceiling for Toyota's car exports to the U.S.

"If the American demand for our cars goes beyond that number," he explains, "we will have to begin producing them in the U.S. to avoid U.S. criticism and subsequent import restrictions."

Toyota estimates its 1976 exports to the U.S. at 400,000 units.

THE ANGEL TRADE

The baby business, known as "the angel trade," is booming in Italy.

According to one Italian magazine, 100,000 newborn infants are exported to the U.S. annually. Italian authorities, while acknowledging that the trade probably exists, say 100,000 is a gross exaggeration and deny any wholesale export of Italian infants to the U.S.

"The angel trade" seems to be centered in southern Italy, where the price for a newborn ranges between $1250 and $2000, boys bringing more than girls.

In a recent TV program on the baby trade in Italy, a judge and a psychologist defended the women who sell their babies. They pointed out that these women are not "inhuman mothers," but women already bearing an overload of too-large families.

Mothers who sell their children frequently rationalize by saying, "It is much better for the child. He will have a good home." As for the childless couples who purchase the babies, such people are not regarded as "evil" in Italy.

Italy's adoption laws are generous, but they are so involved -- and the adoption process is so lengthy -- that childless couples choose "the other way," which is comparatively easy.

Not too long ago, a Salerno midwife told the mother that her infant had been born dead. She then sold the child. When the mother learned the truth, the midwife fled to avoid imprisonment.

SOUTH KOREA MAJOR BUILDER

Last year South Korea secured building contracts valued at almost $3 billion. At this moment some 28 South Korean companies have about 20,000 Koreans working in the Middle East, building in Saudi Arabia, Iran, Bahrain and the other Persian Gulf states.

The South Koreans are diligent workers and widely admired in the Middle East, where much of the native labor force is either too unskilled or too lazy to fill the available construction jobs.

EARTHQUAKE VICTIMS RECEIVE AID AT MAKESHIFT HOSPITAL IN TANGSHAN, CHINA

A CHINESE CITY'S PRIVATE AGONY

Tangshan, the industrial city 50 miles east of Peking that was flattened by an earthquake last July 28, was flattened again by another quake on Nov. 13, 1976.

The Chinese refuse to reveal the extent of the catastrophe (although they keep accurate casualty figures), but possibly as many as 500,000 were killed in the two quakes.

Why do the Chinese refuse to reveal the extent of their losses--to tell the world how many people, factories, schools and communes were reduced to rubble? Why do they persistently refuse offers of help from the United Nations, the Red Cross, the World Health Organization, and other countries?

The answer is that they are a proud and self-reliant people who want the world to know they are capable of coping alone with the tragedies of nature.

THE ANGEL TRADE

The baby business, known as "the angel trade," is booming in Italy.

According to one Italian magazine, 100,000 newborn infants are exported to the U.S. annually. Italian authorities, while acknowledging that the trade probably exists, say 100,000 is a gross exaggeration and deny any wholesale export of Italian infants to the U.S.

"The angel trade" seems to be centered in southern Italy, where the price for a newborn ranges between $1250 and $2000, boys bringing more than girls.

In a recent TV program on the baby trade in Italy, a judge and a psychologist defended the women who sell their babies. They pointed out that these women are not "inhuman mothers," but women already bearing an overload of too-large families.

Mothers who sell their children frequently rationalize by saying, "It is much better for the child. He will have a good home." As for the childless couples who purchase the babies, such people are not regarded as "evil" in Italy.

Italy's adoption laws are generous, but they are so involved -- and the adoption process is so lengthy -- that childless couples choose "the other way," which is comparatively easy.

Not too long ago, a Salerno midwife told the mother that her infant had been born dead. She then sold the child. When the mother learned the truth, the midwife fled to avoid imprisonment.

SOUTH KOREA MAJOR BUILDER Last year South Korea secured building contracts valued at almost $3 billion. At this moment some 28 South Korean companies have about 20,000 Koreans working in the Middle East, building in Saudi Arabia, Iran, Bahrain and the other Persian Gulf states.

The South Koreans are diligent workers and widely admired in the Middle East, where much of the native labor force is either too unskilled or too lazy to fill the available construction jobs.

EARTHQUAKE VICTIMS RECEIVE AID AT MAKESWIFT HOSPITAL IN TAINESHAM, CHINA

A CHINESE CITY'S PRIVATE AGONY

Tangshan, the industrial city 50 miles east of Peking that was flattened by an earthquake last July 28, was flattened again by another quake on Nov. 13, 1976.

The Chinese refuse to reveal the extent of the catastrophe (although they keep accurate casualty figures), but possibly as many as 500,000 were killed in the two quakes.

Why do the Chinese refuse to reveal the extent of their losses--to tell the world how many people, factories, schools and communes were reduced to rubble? Why do they persistently refuse offers of help from the United Nations, the Red Cross, the World Health Organization, and other countries?

The answer is that they are a proud and self-reliant people who want the world to know they are capable of coping alone with the tragedies of nature.

ISRAELI BOMBER

The arms race has a new contestant--Israel. Israel has entered the fighter-bomber market. Full-page advertisements are being run in specialty journals praising the KFIR-C2 bomber made by Israel Aircraft Industries, Ltd.

Developed from France's Mirage jet, this KFIR-C2 is a "beautiful union of form and thrust," providing "proven handling in all angles of attack" and offering a "high degree of cockpit comfort," says the Israeli brochure.

The Israeli model costs $4.5 million, compared to the American Phantom at $10 million. Prospective buyers include Austria, Mexico and Singapore.

COVER JACKET OF "THE RUSSIAN VERSION OF THE SECOND WORLD WAR"

SOVIET BRAIN-WASHING

Have you ever wondered what Soviet schoolteachers tell their students about World War II?

A Soviet textbook, "The Russian Version of the Second World War," was recently published in London.

It contains some surprising and creative versions of history. Russian children are told, for example, that the Soviet Union was "the only state to make an energetic effort to restrain the Fascist aggressors," that the British escaped from Dunkirk only because Hitler

"forbade his generals to annihilate the English," and that Montgomery's victory at El Alamein was not the result of British gallantry but was made possible only by the transfer of German troops from the African to the Russian front.

The textbook concludes that as a result of the Soviet triumph in World War II, "the whole world became convinced of the durability and great life force inherent in the Socialist system."

It is difficult to believe how thoroughly brainwashed Soviet children are and have been for decades.

NORTH KOREA BROKE?

Last month North Korean diplomats were involved in a Scandinavia-wide black market ring. They were accused of smuggling liquor, cigarettes, and drugs into Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland.

Denmark, Norway and Finland promptly expelled the diplomats, and North Korea's ambassador to Sweden and his staff secretly left Stockholm in haste.

What were the North Koreans up to? Are they all crooks? And why did they choose the Scandinavian countries as operation bases?

Danish Foreign Minister Knud Andersen believes he has an answer. Andersen says that the North Koreans "hardly acted for personal gain." He suggests that they were trying to raise money for their Communist homeland, which is rapidly going broke.

Politiken, one of Denmark's major newspapers, says that Kim Il Sung, the North Korean Communist leader, "either sent us the students who flunked the exams in his spy school, or he considers Denmark a kind of Disneyland where anybody can do as he pleases so long as he is protected by diplomatic immunity."

Before the North Koreans began their wholesale smuggling operation throughout Scandinavia, the North Korean mission in Egypt turned its Cairo office into a smuggling center, using black market profits to finance diplomatic and propaganda activities.

SECRET SERVICE CROWS

There was a time when the Secret Service was best known in this country for apprehending counterfeitters.

Since the assassination of John F. Kennedy in 1963, however, it has expanded from approximately 450 to 1650 agents, its annual budget booming from $5.8 to $115 million.

During Presidential campaign years, 60% of the Secret Service agents are assigned to protection duty. In non-campaign years, 60% are assigned to criminal cases.

According to Jack Warner, Secret Service spokesman, "Henry Kissinger was the first U.S. Secretary of State assigned Secret Service protection. Others, like Dean Rusk, were protected by State Department security agents. State Department security men also protected Nancy Kissinger. Why Henry Kissinger preferred Secret Service agents to State Department security men, you'll have to ask him."

There has been some talk that Kissinger would like continued Secret Service protection cum limousine for a considerable period of time--say, at least a year (at an estimated cost of $1.5 million). At this writing, Congress has not yet passed the necessary legislation.

Reportedly, Kissinger is fearful of assassination--either by his enemies or, it is quipped, by his former employees.

Before President Kennedy was killed, only the President and his family, the Vice President and the President-elect were eligible for Secret Service protection. ISRAELI BOMBER The arms race has a new contestant--Israel. Israel has entered the fighter-bomber market. Full-page advertisements are being run in specialty journals praising the KFIR-C2 bomber made by Israel Aircraft Industries, Ltd.

Developed from France's Mirage jet, this KFIR-C2 is a "beautiful union of form and thrust," providing "proven handling in all angles of attack" and offering a "high degree of cockpit comfort," says the Israeli brochure.

The Israeli model costs $4.5 million, compared to the American Phantom at $10 million. Prospective buyers include Austria, Mexico and Singapore.

COVER JACKET OF "THE RUSSIAN VERSION OF THE SECOND WORLD WAR"

SOVIET BRAIN-WASHING

Have you ever wondered what Soviet schoolteachers tell their students about World War II?

A Soviet textbook, "The Russian Version of the Second World War," was recently published in London.

It contains some surprising and creative versions of history. Russian children are told, for example, that the Soviet Union was "the only state to make an energetic effort to restrain the Fascist aggressors," that the British escaped from Dunkirk only because Hitler

"forbade his generals to annihilate the English," and that Montgomery's victory at El Alamein was not the result of British gallantry but was made possible only by the transfer of German troops from the African to the Russian front.

The textbook concludes that as a result of the Soviet triumph in World War II, "the whole world became convinced of the durability and great life force inherent in the Socialist system."

It is difficult to believe how thoroughly brainwashed Soviet children are and have been for decades.

NORTH KOREA BROKE?

Last month North Korean diplomats were involved in a Scandinavia-wide black market ring. They were accused of smuggling liquor, cigarettes, and drugs into Denmark, Sweden, Norway and Finland.

Denmark, Norway and Finland promptly expelled the diplomats, and North Korea's ambassador to Sweden and his staff secretly left Stockholm in haste.

What were the North Koreans up to? Are they all crooks? And why did they choose the Scandinavian countries as operation bases?

Danish Foreign Minister Knud Andersen believes he has an answer. Andersen says that the North Koreans "hardly acted for personal gain." He suggests that they were trying to raise money for their Communist homeland, which is rapidly going broke.

Politiken, one of Denmark's major newspapers, says that Kim Il Sung, the North Korean Communist leader, "either sent us the students who flunked the exams in his spy school, or he considers Denmark a kind of Disneyland where anybody can do as he pleases so long as he is protected by diplomatic immunity."

Before the North Koreans began their wholesale smuggling operation throughout Scandinavia, the North Korean mission in Egypt turned its Cairo office into a smuggling center, using black market profits to finance diplomatic and propaganda activities.

SECRET SERVICE CROWS

There was a time when the Secret Service was best known in this country for apprehending counterfeiters.

Since the assassination of John F. Kennedy in 1963, however, it has expanded from approximately 450 to 1650 agents, its annual budget booming from $5.8 to $115 million.

During Presidential campaign years, 60% of the Secret Service agents are assigned to protection duty. In non-campaign years, 60% are assigned to criminal cases.

According to Jack Warner, Secret Service spokesman, "Henry Kissinger was the first U.S. Secretary of State assigned Secret Service protection. Others, like Dean Rusk, were protected by State Department security agents. State Department security men also protected Nancy Kissinger. Why Henry Kissinger preferred Secret Service agents to State Department security men, you'll have to ask him."

There has been some talk that Kissinger would like continued Secret Service protection cum limousine for a considerable period of time--say, at least a year (at an estimated cost of $1.5 million). At this writing, Congress has not yet passed the necessary legislation.

Reportedly, Kissinger is fearful of assassination--either by his enemies or; it is quipped, by his former employees.

Before President Kennedy was killed, only the President and his family, the Vice President and the President-elect were eligible for Secret Service protection. After Kennedy was murdered in Dallas, protection was extended to former Presidents, their wives or widows and minor children. In 1966, after Sen. Robert Kennedy was gunned down in Los Angeles, Presidential and Vice Presidential candidates were also accorded Secret Service protection. Six years ago, visiting dignitaries were added to the list of the guarded.

Royal Glint was the victor at Santa Anita last year. Later, despite prior indications of a sore leg, the legal drug Lasix helped him race in Detroit, where he shattered an ankle and eventually had to be killed.

Drugged Horses Are Racing to Death

by Bill Surface

At Suffolk Downs in Boston, a spirited, dark-bay horse named Royal Glint suddenly collapsed during a race last year. Blood gushed so profusely from his nostrils that veterinarians feared he would choke to death before being lifted into an ambulance. Royal Glint recovered but in his next race bore to the right—an indication that a leg was hurting.

Was, then, the horse retired or rested for several months? No, just 10 days later he was injected with Lasix, a potent dehydrating drug that usually stops hemorrhaging, and entered in the Detroit Race Course's $100,000 Michigan Mile. Appearing even frisky, Royal Glint charged ahead of the eight other horses. Then an ankle shattered so severely that he later had to be killed.

Royal Glint is only one of at least 1400 ailing horses across the country that needed to be destroyed last year after being given drugs to help them race. These drugs are not the illegal stimulants that—if detected in a horse's urine, saliva or blood—cost its owner any money won and the trainer a possible suspension. They are other types of drugs that have been redefined as "permissive medicine" and recently legalized in 20 states.

Rules have been changed to the extent that even the controversial Butazolidin ("Bute"), which caused Dancer's Image to forfeit its purse as the 1968 Kentucky Derby winner, is now legal and commonly used. "Racing horses on these drugs may be legal," says Leroy J. Ellis, veteran manager of Pennsylvania's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (SPCA), "but the way horses die because of Bute alone is more inhumane than many illegal acts of cruelty that are prosecuted."

Drugs mask illness

How such medicines are used legally to force lame or ill horses to race—not merely to treat them—is what angers humanitarians. Horses injected with Bute have enough pain reduced in sore, arthritic or inflamed legs to seem unaware when their bones have cracked. Even badly limping horses race smoothly with the new Motrin and other high-speed "Super Butes," then limp again about five hours later.

Worse yet, a sick but drug-filled horse may try harder than if healthy. Horses that cough blood but still break decades-old speed records after they've been given Lasix vividly underscore the Cornell Veterinary College's findings: This drug "may significantly increase" the heartbeat enough to fire up a horse.

Trainers' claims that these drugs seldom cause horses to overextend themselves are contradicted by the dramatic rise in irreparable injuries. In the season after drugs were legalized, known deaths of horses more than doubled at tracks nationwide. Take just Waterford Park in Chester, W. Va.: 46 horses broke down so pitifully in races that they had to be killed immediately with an overdose of anesthesia, 92 more bled from nostrils, and countless others suffered "obstructive phlebitis." During an 18-month period at Keystone Race Track near Philadelphia, at least 80 "medicated" horses were known to have been destroyed after races—a rate four times higher than during the pre-drug period.

A sadder fate awaits the much greater number that manage to limp off the track in distress. Also, far more horses prove to be lame only after they have cooled or the medication wears off. F. L. Dantzer, chief investigator for The Humane Society of the United States, found that hopelessly crippled horses are often channeled for $60 to $70 each to "killer buyers" who then keep them alive long enough (even during 20-hour truck rides) to resell to Canadian pet-food slaughterhouses for $240. "The drugged, lame horse that struggles off the track is the least lucky," says Dantzer. "His nightmare can last another three or four days."

Recycling old horses

Worse yet, "medicines" are used to drain an extra dollar from mediocre or aged horses up to 14 years old—the equivalent to humans of about 60. Such a horse costs as much to board ($1000 a month) as one training for major stakes and, if it needs months to recuperate, is an expensive liability to an indifferent owner. Heavily medicated, the horse competes in lower-class races until it collapses and the track's veterinarian must destroy it. Meanwhile, the horse often wins third- and fourth-place purses. If not, one trainer typically reasons, "you at least get rid of a feed bill."

Even more striking abuses were revealed after a horsemen's group demanded "immediate action to institute a permissive medication rule" at tracks in New York. Instead, New York's Racing and Wagering Board assigned a member, Joseph H. Boyd Jr., and then its secretary, Polly Weber, to determine what no other state had really done before altering its rules: How do drugs affect horses and racing's integrity? Their trips to 20 tracks and laboratories show that certain drugs undermine the honesty of even stake races involving healthy horses that seldom need medicine. For example, they found that only 2 percent of all horses bled from their nostrils but at some tracks about 65 percent receive Lasix to ostensibly curb this ailment. "Lasix also masks, or washes away, all traces of illegal drugs," says Boyd. "So some trainers also give their horses the worst kind of narcotic stimulants and usually get away with it."

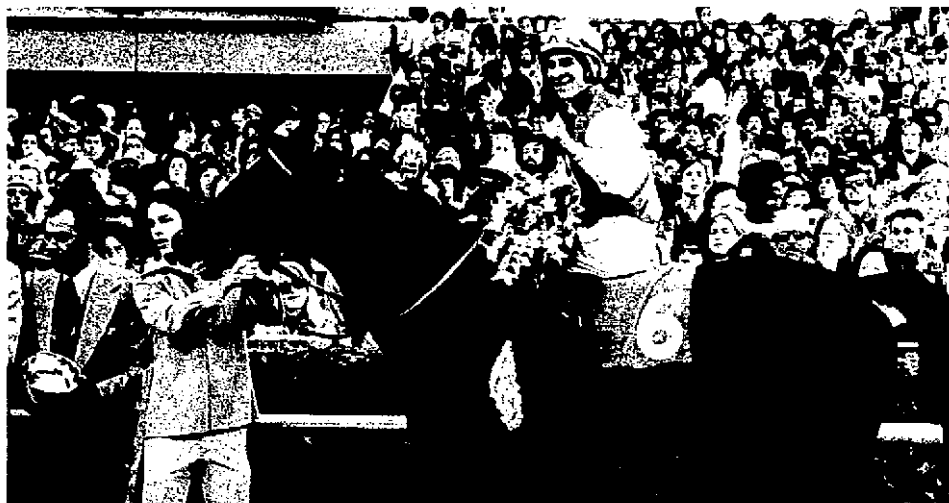

'Try anything'

Legal drugs indeed promote illegal ones. Boyd even encountered a group of private racing veterinarians meeting to discuss which new medicines and amounts appear undetectable. And some trainers, knowing that their competitors use drugs, obtain the latest ones in Canada and Europe to gain an edge. "The more states allow certain medicines without really studying the consequences," says Boyd, "the wider the door opens for those trainers who will try anything."

Abuses are far more widespread at many quarter-horse tracks, where the short (and usually close) races often are decided by the split second either gained or lost in leaving the starting gate. At one track, a doctor sold (for $100) vials containing enough stimulating morphine "to zing a horse out of the gate fast." At another, a veterinary association's past president told Boyd, at least 50 percent of all horses in a famous race now require prohibited Novocain-type drugs—plus their usual dose of Bute—to deaden the pain of chipped bones. Trainers have little fear of being penalized. The winning horse's saliva and urine are simply poured out, or tested at a laboratory unable to identify illegal drugs. The excuse: "If we kept out the 'medicated' horses, there wouldn't be enough for a big race."

In some Western states, doses of drugs are so immense that even an obsolescently equipped laboratory still detects 15 types of powerful illegal stimulants such as cocaine, morphine and methadone. "That 24 seconds of speed isn't always caused by a spirited quarter horse," says Weber. "It's often one with an incredible dose of drugs."

Royal Glint was the victor at Santa Anita last year. Later, despite prior indications of a sore leg, the legal drug Lasix helped him race in Detroit, where he shattered an ankle and eventually had to be killed.

Even badly limping horses race smoothly with the new Motrin and other high-speed "Super Butes," then limp again about five hours later.

Worse yet, a sick but drug-filled horse may try harder than if healthy. Horses that cough blood but still break decades-old speed records after they've been given Lasix vividly underscore the Cornell Veterinary College's findings: This drug "may significantly increase" the heartbeat enough to fire up a horse.

Trainers' claims that these drugs seldom cause horses to overextend themselves are contradicted by the dramatic rise in irreparable injuries. In the season after drugs were legalized, known deaths of horses more than doubled at tracks nationwide. Take just Waterford Park in Chester, W. Va.: 46 horses broke down so pitifully in races that they had to be killed immediately with an overdose of anesthesia, 92 more bled from nostrils, and countless others suffered "obstructive phlebitis." During an 18-month period at Keystone Race Track near Philadelphia, at least 80 "medicated" horses were known to have been destroyed after races—a rate four times higher than during the pre-drug period.

A sadder fate awaits the much greater number that manage to limp off the track in distress. Also, far more horses prove to be lame only after they have cooled or the medication wears off. F. L. Dantzer, chief investigator for The Humane Society of the United States, found that hopelessly crippled horses are often channeled for $60 to $70 each to "killer buyers" who then keep them alive long enough (even during 20-hour truck rides) to resell to Canadian pet-food slaughterhouses for $240. "The drugged, lame horse that struggles off the track is the least lucky," says Dantzer. "His nightmare can last another three or four days."

Recycling old horses

Worse yet, "medicines" are used to drain an extra dollar from mediocre or aged horses up to 14 years old—the equivalent to humans of about 60. Such a horse costs as much to board ($1000 a month) as one training for major stakes and, if it needs months to recuperate, is an expensive liability to an indifferent owner. Heavily medicated, the horse competes in lower-class races until it collapses and the track's veterinarian must destroy it. Meanwhile, the horse often wins third- and fourth-place purses. If not, one trainer typically reasons, "you at least get rid of a feed bill."

Even more striking abuses were revealed after a horsemen's group demanded "immediate action to institute a permissive medication rule" at tracks in New York. Instead, New York's Racing and Wagering Board assigned a member, Joseph H. Boyd Jr., and then its secretary, Polly Weber, to determine what no other state had really done before altering its rules: How do drugs affect horses and racing's integrity? Their trips to 20 tracks and laboratories show that certain drugs undermine the honesty of even stake races involving healthy horses that seldom need medicine. For example, they found that only 2 percent of all horses bled from their nostrils but at some tracks about 65 percent receive Lasix to ostensibly curb this ailment. "Lasix also masks, or washes away, all traces of illegal drugs," says Boyd. "So some trainers also give their horses the worst kind of narcotic stimulants and usually get away with it."

'Try anything'

Legal drugs indeed promote illegal ones. Boyd even encountered a group of private racing veterinarians meeting to discuss which new medicines and amounts appear undetectable. And some trainers, knowing that their competitors use drugs, obtain the latest ones in Canada and Europe to gain an edge. "The more states allow certain medicines without really studying the consequences," says Boyd, "the wider the door opens for those trainers who will try anything."

Abuses are far more widespread at many quarter-horse tracks, where the short (and usually close) races often are decided by the split second either gained or lost in leaving the starting gate. At one track, a doctor sold (for $100) vials containing enough stimulating morphine "to zing a horse out of the gate fast." At another, a veterinary association's past president told Boyd, at least 50 percent of all horses in a famous race now require prohibited Novocain-type drugs—plus their usual dose of Bute—to deaden the pain of chipped bones. Trainers have little fear of being penalized. The winning horse's saliva and urine are simply poured out, or tested at a laboratory unable to identify illegal drugs. The excuse: "If we kept out the 'medicated' horses, there wouldn't be enough for a big race."

In some Western states, doses of drugs are so immense that even an obsolescently equipped laboratory still detects 15 types of powerful illegal stimulants such as cocaine, morphine and methadone. "That 24 seconds of speed isn't always caused by a spirited quarter horse," says Weber. "It's often one with an incredible dose of drugs."

The use of drugs is widespread at some quarter-horse tracks, say experts. Stimulants help "zing a horse out of the gate fast" to gain a critical edge in a race.

HORSES CONTINUED

State racing boards have impressively worded restrictions on the amount and time that certain drugs may be used. But such safeguards seldom work. California's state veterinarians theoretically inspect all horses just before they are saddled for any signs of unsoundness or excessive medication. But at one track near San Francisco, Weber reports, "I couldn't find anyone in an official capacity who even looked at the horses." Similarly, at some tracks in Maryland, Boyd noticed: "Nobody even looked at the detailed forms that a trainer and his vet must fill out to medicate a horse for a race."

It seldom matters if either a veterinarian or chemist tries to verify a trainer's report. Most state laboratories lack the modern equipment to detect the amount or type of newer drugs injected into horses. Some states are simply removing all limits on the amount of Bute that may be used.

Several state racing commissions now admit to "second thoughts" about having legalized drugs before learning the side effects. Economics, however, trap them. The extremely rapid growth of racing, through new tracks and established ones that have lengthened their seasons, creates a shortage of horses—and a need for horses that can race more often. Many lesser tracks could barely operate (or would be boycotted by well-organized trainers) unless sore or aged horses were "medicated." Thus, financially pressed states are reluctant to again ban drugs and lower tax revenues. Racetracks are, by far, many states' largest corporate taxpayers.

Yet breeders of higher-class thoroughbreds, who oppose the use of any drugs, warn: "If states continue to kill off horses at the current rate, they'll eventually kill the goose that lays the golden egg."

Reform lags

Such voices have produced few changes. Only New Jersey has since amended its rules and now limits Lasix to horses that actually hemorrhage. Around Philadelphia, protests mounted for months over the number of Bute-filled horses collapsing at Keystone Race Track. Even unsound, arthritic horses from New York—which still prohibits all drugs—were shipped there. The Pennsylvania Horse Racing Commission has finally banned Bute temporarily while a medical center studies its effects.

Many horse lovers share the opinion of Leroy Ellis of the Pennsylvania SPCA: "Bute takes the sport out of the sport of kings."

"My husband laughed when I came home with Bantron. He said a person has to quit smoking on their own will power. Now he isn't laughing anymore."

This is from Mrs. Lori Helminger (right) of Anna, Ohio, a two pack a day smoker for over twenty years. With the help of Bantron® Smoking Deterrent Tablets she quit for good in just six days. In actual clinical tests of Bantron among smokers who wanted to quit, more than 4 out of 5 did so easily and pleasantly in 5 to 7 days. Bantron is not habit forming and does not affect your taste in any way. It works by acting as a substitute for the nicotine in your system. Try Bantron. Thousands of people all over the world have quit with its help. You can get a 7 day supply at your drug store now—enough to do the job.

Better Job Prospects

College and university graduates of the Class of '77 will have brighter job prospects than last year's seniors.

According to a survey of 185 corporations prepared by Frank Endicott, former placement director for Northwestern University, the companies plan to hire 16 percent more college graduates.

Starting salaries will be increased 4-7 percent, and graduates in business administration, accounting and engineering will be strongest in demand. Engineering graduates with a bachelor's degree will be offered approximately $1200 a month, accountants $1000, business administrators $880 and graduates in liberal arts about $860.

Endicott's survey was completed in November, 1976, at which time 63 percent of the corporations surveyed expected to do better business this year than in 1976.

Child Victims

No one knows exactly how many children in the U.S. are kidnapped each year. A general figure is 25,000, and in a majority of these cases the culprit is the child's father or mother—the parent who failed to obtain custody in a divorce.

Because judges differ in awarding custody, the losing parent frequently flies the child to another judicial seat and seeks a different ruling.

Private detectives, of course, gain most from this unhappy set of circumstances. They generally receive from $5000 to $10,000 for locating a kidnapped child.

NEWLYWEDS POSE FOR WEDDING ALBUM AT HEIAN SHRINE IN KYOTO, JAPAN

Price of Marriage

An average of $12,800 (4 million yen) is needed for a young Japanese couple to marry, a survey by the Tokai Bank in Japan reveals.

The survey covers 630 housewives in Tokyo, Osaka and Nagoya whose sons or daughters recently married. About 75 percent of the expenses ($9000) is borne by the couple's parents. The average wedding costs 830,000 yen, the honeymoon 360,000 yen. Furniture costs 1,180,000 yen, and engagement gifts cost 450,000 yen. About 1,090,000 yen is required for other household expenses. The parents of the bride and groom spend 1,500,000 each on the marriage—so, at least, the bank survey claims.

my favorite jokes

by claire windsor

EDITOR'S NOTE: In the interest of accuracy, Claire Windsor tells her audience: "Sometimes a friend will come back from a show or nightclub and I'll ask, 'Who'd you see? They'll say, 'I saw that comic, what's-his-name.' So, tomorrow, if someone asks you who you saw, please don't say, 'I saw that girl, what's-her-name.' Remember to tell them, 'I saw that woman, what's-her-name.'"

Much of Claire's comedy comes out of her family life. The mother of two, she laments, "My daughter's on the phone so much I think the phone company's going to bronze her ears. And my son, he's into hard rock. You know where they got the term 'hard rock'? After five minutes you feel like hitting him with a hard rock. The decibel level is so high that my son's bedroom has been refused permission to land at Kennedy Airport."

Claire has performed at top clubs and hotels on the East Coast and at resort areas such as New York's Catskill Mountains.

Here she is, talking about subjects large and small:

Did you ever have your car stolen? That's a strange feeling. First, you do not immediately believe your car was stolen. You figure maybe it rolled down the street or around the corner. Now, I'm supposed to be smart, but when my car was stolen I did something very weird. I called my husband and asked him if he had taken both cars to work.

So you report the stolen car to the police. In New York City the police are fussy. They asked me who recommended them.

Sometimes I feel like a totally inadequate mother; it's the biggest booking in my life, and I've loused it up. For example, my 8-year-old son sucks his thumb. I know I should send him to a psychoanalyst, but a psychoanalyst would only tell him it's my fault. So I told him it's my fault and saved the money.

They say that women live longer than men. I think it just seems longer!

According to psychology, if you dream about oranges, that's a symbol for women and you're really dreaming about sex. If you dream about celery stalks, that's a symbol for men and you're really dreaming about sex. But what happens when you dream about sex? Does that mean you're hungry?

Why is the Defense Department so worried? We have more than 8500 deliverable nuclear warheads, which makes us very safe—so long as we don't ask the U.S. Post Office to deliver them.

My husband has this great insurance policy. I can't read insurance policies, but from what I can figure out, if something happens to him, it happens to me, too.

Mornings can be strange times for wives. At 7 a.m. my husband will ask, "What's for dinner so I won't eat it for lunch?" And I say, "I'll open the freezer—whatever falls out, that's dinner." And we have a deal. If nothing falls out—we eat out.

One automobile company finally invented the perfect safety car. All the doors lock automatically so that the driver can't get in.

Food prices are so high that the supermarket sounds like a church. You walk down the aisles mumbling, "Oh, my God!"

Sometimes I feel sorry for the Queen of England because she misses out on some of the simple pleasures in life, like never receiving a letter addressed "Occupant."

Every family has one member—the voice of doom. She's the kind who says good morning and right away it isn't. You've been on a diet for a week, she says you look better since you put on weight. Someday she's going to bite her tongue and die of poisoning.

According to my horoscope, I was born on the wrong day.

"Do you think we should go?"

it's TO laugh installation.

Save on a wide assortment of decorative fabrics in hundreds of beautiful colors. And, there's more than that: labor, lining, even installation. Just wait until you've seen the choice: antique satins, sheers, open weaves, textures, prints, damasks and jacquards. Plan an elegant window treatment or a simple tailored look to add that custom decorator touch to any room in your home.

Come in today and visit our Decorating Studio in most larger JCPenney stores or call for a free home appointment.

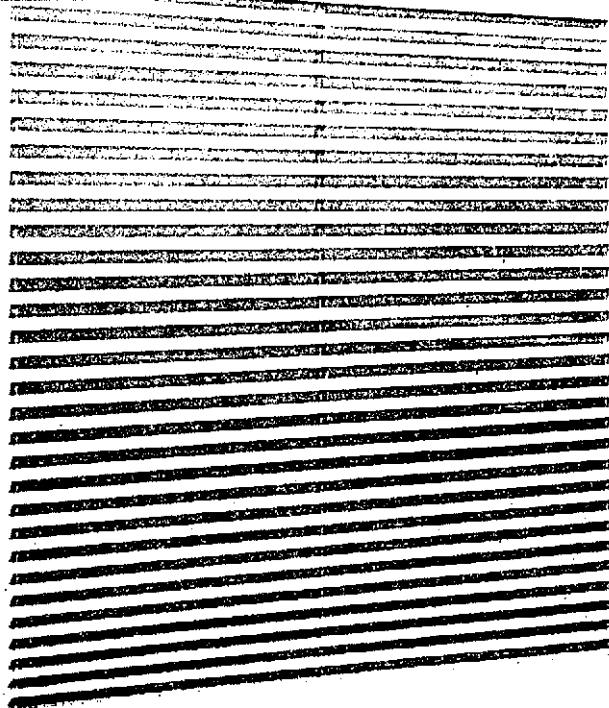

All custom draperies are fabricated in our own company workrooms and not by outside contractors.

Save 25% on our beautiful new accordion-fold
sunscreen shades.

As practical as blinds with the elegant grace of sheer panels. Lowered, the horizontal accordion folds create the delicate beauty of sheer tailored panels with the added convenience of an outer film of silvery reflective material that keeps out the harsh glare and heat of the sun but lets in the view. Raised, the shades pull so tightly to the head rail you almost forget they're there. It's new, it's practical and at these tremendous savings, you can't afford to wait. Great color selection.

If you qualify, you can enlist for one of hundreds of exciting Army jobs. Or you can choose the initial area or unit you'd like to serve in, near home in the continental United States or someplace new. Your choice will be guaranteed in writing before you enlist.

In today's Army, you earn good money while learning a skill to make even more money.

If you're looking for a good job, and a good starting salary, today's Army can help you. In fact, the Army has more good jobs to fill than anybody. Hundreds of good jobs. And we'll give you the training and the experience you need for the job you select. All of which is pretty hard to beat, especially when you get an attractive starting salary and a jump in pay after just six months in the Army.

Look over the stamps on this page, representing 40 Army career categories. Pick your first three choices, detach, moisten and place the stamps on the postage-paid card and mail it to us.

We'll send you all the details. There's no obligation.

The job you learn in the Army is a skill that stays with you.

You'll find that the job you learn in the Army has a lot of "staying" power. And it gives you options you probably didn't have before. You can use your skill to build a career in the Army.

And, we think you'll discover another important fact. The Army's job-training courses are probably the best around. They're taught by excellent instructors, in good schools, on the most up-to-date equipment. You'll have a job that could cost you a lot of money to learn in civilian life.

Remember, you're also paid good money while you learn. And after six months, while you're learning your skill, you get a nice raise. After that, further raises and promotions will come as you earn them. And, of course, the Army takes care of your meals, clothing, housing, medical and dental care, plus a lot of other benefits, such as a 30 day vacation paid every year. Send back the card today and get all the facts.

Join the people who've joined the Army.

Get ahead now. Stay ahead for a lifetime.

You'll enjoy a good starting salary in the Army, with most of it clear, since the Army takes care of the majority of your living expenses. But if you're like a lot of young people we've talked to, "money isn't everything." You want to know you're equipped to handle whatever comes your way. And that's what the Army can do for you. It provides job training and experience in a skill you can use throughout your life. And in addition, the Army can help you develop a greater sense of confidence and responsibility. You really get to know yourself, and your abilities, in the Army. And that is an education all by itself.

Scott has always made paper products to meet your family's needs. Now we're even making Scott Paper Money to help your family make ends meet!

The paper products that care about the future of the West.

When he grows up, will the air be clean?

Will the water be pure?

We're working to make sure it is.

Over 4 million dollars was spent to install the most-advanced air and water pollution control equipment in the world in our Oregon mill.

And we were the first leading paper products in America to be awarded the official Oregon "Cleaning Up Pollution" award. This "Cleaning Up Pollution" award has been presented to us every year, since it was initiated in 1972.

Our Halsey Oregon Mill has earned the right to display this symbol on every package of paper towels, tissues and napkins we make.

Just as we care about the quality of all our products, this symbol proves we also care about the quality of our environment.

Brawny,* Aurora,* Northern* and Gala*

The paper products that care about the future of the West.

THE OFFICIAL OREGON "CLEANING UP POLLUTION" AWARD

This coveted award was initiated in 1972 by the Department of Environmental Quality to honor companies who protect Oregon's natural resources. We are proud to be the first leading paper products in America authorized to bear this symbol on our packages. It has been presented to us for "outstanding environmental effort above and beyond basic requirements." We thank the Oregon Environmental Commission for this important award, and restate our pledge to protect the quality of our environment.

The job you learn in the Army is a skill that stays with you.

You'll find that the job you learn in the Army has a lot of "staying" power. And it gives you options you probably didn't have before. You can use your skill to build a career in the Army.

And, we think you'll discover another important fact. The Army's job-training courses are probably the best around. They're taught by excellent instructors, in good schools, on the most up-to-date equipment. You'll have a job that could cost you a lot of money to learn in civilian life.

Remember, you're also paid good money while you learn. And after six months, while you're learning your skill, you get a nice raise. After that, further raises and promotions will come as you earn them. And, of course, the Army takes care of your meals, clothing, housing, medical and dental care, plus a lot of other benefits, such as a 30 day vacation paid every year. Send back the card today and get all the facts.

Join the people who've joined the Army.

Get ahead now.
Stay ahead for a lifetime.

You'll enjoy a good starting salary in the Army, with most of it clear, since the Army takes care of the majority of your living expenses. But if you're like a lot of young people we've talked to, "money isn't everything." You want to know you're equipped to handle whatever comes your way. And that's what the Army can do for you. It provides job training and experience in a skill you can use throughout your life. And in addition, the Army can help you develop a greater sense of confidence and responsibility. You really get to know yourself, and your abilities, in the Army. And that is an education all by itself.

Important message from Art Linkletter

Dear Friend,

Now, you can protect your family with one of the finest values in supplemental hospital protection -- National Home protection. National Home pays out over 50,000,000 dollars every year to families like yours under our group and individual insurance plans.

These days, that's important. Especially when more and more people are going to the hospital every year. If you're one of them where will you and your family turn?

You and I both know that hospital-medical prices are moving by leaps and bounds to price-tags few of us can afford. They've already doubled since 1968 and show no signs of slowing down.

That's why National Home wants your protection to serve you in as many ways as possible . . . to provide the protection you need these days for your family and your future.

So take a moment now and learn about all the benefits of one of the most popular insurance plans of this type in America. Then send in the Enrollment Form on the back page with your reduced first month premium.

Your policy will arrive in the mail. If you don't feel completely happy and secure with your protection after you receive it, you can send it back within 10 days for a complete refund . . . and there's no further obligation on your part.

Sincerely,

Art Linkletter

Member, Board of Directors, and has a financial interest
in the Company

* American Hospital Association

YOU'RE PROTECTED WITH ALL THESE FEATURES . . . AND MORE.

YOU RECEIVE—up to $1,500.00 a month—$50.00 a day for every covered hospital stay.

FIRST DAY PROTECTION—Cash benefits add up from the very first day. There are no deductibles or waiting periods . . . and no limit to the total amount you can receive.

YOU SPEND IT—Benefits are paid direct to you. You decide what medical bills to pay.

PAYS BENEFITS—regardless of any other plan you have, including Medicare and Workmen's Compensation.

RENEWAL AND RATE CHANGE PROVISIONS—Once you have enrolled in this plan from National Home Life Assurance Company, your policy is guaranteed renewable. Your rate can be increased individually only if there is a rate increase on all our policies of this class in your state. It cannot be increased because of how much or how often you receive benefits from us—or because of advanced age. We will issue you only one policy of this class.

DON'T BE CAUGHT SHORT!

Many group insurance plans like Blue Cross or the one you have at work may not pay all the bills. That's why millions of Americans today have some form of additional protection, to give them the benefits they need when they're laid up. Ask anyone you know who's been in the hospital lately how tough it can be to make ends meet.

Many medical plans don't pay for a whole list of things. Outside specialists. Transfusions. Special nurses. Surgery. Medicines. Special equipment. A private room. Ambulance. And much more.

That's why everyone from 16-74 should have this National Home protection.

THE NATIONAL HOME HOSPITAL PLAN

FIRST DAY PROTECTION PAYS BENEFITS OF

$1,500.00 A MONTH ($50.00 A DAY)

Hospital Benefits $1,500.00 a month ($50.00 a day) cash benefits when you are hospitalized . . . for each covered illness or accident starting the very first day in the hospital, and continuing for as long as you stay, no matter how long that may be.

If you are 65 or over, you also receive full benefits of $1,500.00 a month ($50.00 a day) for as long as you are hospitalized . . . even for life! Unless you request otherwise, these benefits are paid directly to you and regardless of Medicare or any other company's coverage you may already have.

Increased Hospital Accident Benefits $6,000.00 a month ($200.00 a day)

$3,000.00 a month ($100.00 a day) for you—and $3,000.00 a month ($100.00 a day) for your spouse . . . when a covered accident hospitalizes both covered husband and wife at the same time. Yes, you collect at the rate of $6,000.00 a month ($200.00 a day) in all (regardless of age) while you both are hospitalized as a result of injury no matter how long that may be.

Important Feature

All cash benefits are not taxable, according to Internal Revenue Service rulings.

Accidental Loss Benefits $2,500.00 or $5,000.00 for complete accidental loss of limbs or eyesight. If you suffer complete loss of a hand or foot or the sight of an eye within 90 days of the covered accident, you receive $2,500.00 or $5,000.00 for the loss of two limbs or the sight of both eyes.

Nurse at Home Benefits

$12.00 or $18.00 per shift for a nurse at home if your doctor recommends you hire one within five days following a covered hospital confinement. Benefits are payable at the rate of $18.00 per shift for a Registered Nurse or $12.00 per shift for a Licensed Vocational Nurse (both up to 3 shifts per day), continuing up to one year.

We Also Pay All Your Premiums that come due after you, the policyowner, have been confined for a covered hospitalization beyond 8 weeks in a row. We pay the premium for your entire family plus your monthly benefits until you leave the hospital. And, we pay them for life if necessary . . .

Newborn children from birth to 31 days are covered from the first day of hospitalization for illness.

Dear Friend,

Now, you can protect your family with one of the finest values in supplemental hospital protection -- National Home protection. National Home pays out over 50,000,000 dollars every year to families like yours under our group and individual insurance plans.

These days, that's important. Especially when more and more people are going to the hospital every year. If you're one of them where will you and your family turn?

You and I both know that hospital-medical prices are moving by leaps and bounds to price-tags few of us can afford. They've already doubled since 1968 and show no signs of slowing down.

That's why National Home wants your protection to serve you in as many ways as possible . . . to provide the protection you need these days for your family and your future.

So take a moment now and learn about all the benefits of one of the most popular insurance plans of this type in America. Then send in the Enrollment Form on the back page with your reduced first month premium.

Your policy will arrive in the mail. If you don't feel completely happy and secure with your protection after you receive it, you can send it back within 10 days for a complete refund . . . and there's no further obligation on your part.

Sincerely,

Member, Board of Directors, and has a financial interest
in the Company

* American Hospital Association

YOU'RE PROTECTED WITH ALL THESE FEATURES . . . AND MORE.

up to $1,500.00 a month—
$50.00 a day for every covered hospital stay.

Cash benefits add up from the very first day. There are no deductibles or waiting periods . . . and no limit to the total amount you can receive.

Benefits are paid direct to you. You decide what medical bills to pay.

regardless of any other plan you have, including Medicare and Workmen's Compensation.

Once you have enrolled in this plan from National Home Life Assurance Company, your policy is guaranteed renewable. Your rate can be increased individually only if there is a rate increase on all our policies of this class in your state. It cannot be increased because of how much or how often you receive benefits from us—or because of advanced age. We will issue you only one policy of this class.

DON'T BE CAUGHT SHORT!

Many group insurance plans like Blue Cross or the one you have at work may not pay all the bills. That's why millions of Americans today have some form of additional protection, to give them the benefits they need when they're laid up. Ask anyone you know who's been in the hospital lately how tough it can be to make ends meet.

Many medical plans don't pay for a whole list of things. Outside specialists. Transfusions. Special nurses. Surgery. Medicines. Special equipment. A private room. Ambulance. And much more.

Those who were born from 1934 should have their National Home plan.

Children & Maternity	$14.75	$ 8.85

NOTE: The benefits you collect and the premium you pay depend on the plan you choose.

PLANS B & D pay 60% of Plan A for all benefits except for Nurse at Home and Accidental Dismemberment. These two benefits are the same in all plans.

PLANS C & E cost you much less, but do not pay for the first 3 days of hospital confinement due to sickness. (There is no deductible or "waiting period" for accidents.)

REGARDING OPTIONAL CHILDREN'S BENEFITS: This benefit covers all your unmarried dependent children from birth through 18 years. And newborn children are covered automatically at birth at no additional cost!

Newborn children from birth to 31 days are covered from the first day of hospitalization for illness.

Art Linklater presents to Mr. & Mrs. Schantz of New Jersey the One Millionth claim check issued by National Home.

Rate Change Provision

We guarantee not to single you out for a rate increase because of how old you become ... or how many claims you have. Your rates can only be increased if there is a rate increase on all policies of this class in your entire state.

Renewal Provision

We guarantee not to cancel your protection no matter how many claims you have ... or how old you become ... or for any reason whatsoever. Only you can cancel.

10 Day Right to Examine Policy

We will send your National Home policy by mail. Examine it carefully. If you decide you don't want to keep the policy, just return it within 10 days of the date you receive it, and we'll promptly refund your dollar. If you decide to keep it, you'll have coverage while making your decision.
